5. Whenever from any cause a vacancy shall occur in the office of any trustee, manager or superintendent, to whom any property shall have been transferred under the last preceding section, and any dispute shall arise respecting the right of succession to such office, it shall be lawful for any person interested in the mosque, temple or religious establishment to which such property shall belong, or in the performance of the worship or of the service thereof, or the trusts relating thereto, to apply to the Civil Court to appoint a manager of such mosque, temple or other religious establishment, and thereupon such Court may appoint such manager to act until some other person shall by suit have established his right of succession to such office

The manager so appointed by the Civil Court shall have and shall exercise all the powers which, under this or any other Act, the former trustee, manager or superintendent, in whose place such manager is appointed by the Court, had or could exercise in relation to such mosque, temple or religious establishment, or the property belonging thereto.

Scope—Before section 5 of the Religious Endowments Act can be made applicable to a case it is clear from a perusal of sections 4 and 5 of the Act that a property in question should be one which had been under the management of any trustee, manager or superintendent at the time of the passing of the Act and that the said property should have been transferred to such trustee, manager or superintendent by the Local Government as directed by that Act. 48 Ind Cas 162

Not a Suit—A proceeding started under section 5 of the Religious Endowments Act is not a suit, consequently an order passed under that section is not a decree and is not appealable. 47 Ind Cas 484, but see 4 Mad 295 where it has been held that appeal from order under s 5 lies by virtue of s 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An order made by a Civil Court under the powers conferred by s 5 of the Religious Endowments Act is not a decree, and is not appealable. 48 Ind Cas 162

Temporary appointment of a manager—District Courts have no power upon a vacancy occurring in the office of the trustee of a religious endowment, to appoint a trustee under s 5 of the Religious Endowments Act, unless the endowed property has been actually transferred to the former trustee under s 4 of the Act by the Board of Revenue or Government. Section 5 of the Act contemplates the temporary appointment of a manager by the Civil Court, and not the appointment of a trustee by the District Court. 48 Ind Cas 162

6 The rights, power and responsibilities of every trustee, manager or superintendent, to whom the land and other property of any mosque, temple or other religious establishment is transferred in the manner prescribed in section 4 of this Act, as well as the conditions of their appointment, election and removal, shall be the same as if this Act had not been passed, except in respect of the liability to be sued under this Act, and except in respect of the authority of the Board of Revenue and local agents, given by the Regulations hereby repealed, over such mosque, temple or religious establishment, and over such trustee, manager or superintendent, which authority is hereby determined and repealed

All the powers which might be exercised by any Board or local agent for the recovery of the rent of land or other property transferred under the said section 4 of this Act, may, from the date of such transfer, be exercised by any trustee, manager or superintendent to whom such transfer is made

7 In all cases described in section 3 of this Act the Local Government shall once for all appoint one or more committees in every division or district to take the place, and to exercise the powers of the Board of Revenue and the local agents under the Regulations hereby repealed

Such committee shall consist of three or more persons, and shall perform all the duties imposed on such Board and local agents, except in respect of any property which is specially provided for under section 21 of this Act

Disqualification of a candidate—A candidate is disqualified to be elected as a member of Devasthan if he had given money or other valuable consideration "in return for votes" and as the result of a bargain with the voters that they should vote for him 29 M 166=15 M L J 449 The committee of a muff appointed under s 7 can maintain a suit for accounts against a tehsildar 9 C L J 636=2 Ind Cas 635 The effect of ss 7 and 19 of the Act is that the surviving members must act so that the date of the election shall be fixed not later than three months from the date of the vacancy If they do not so act their powers of election are gone, and then unless the Civil Court takes proceeding on the application of some body and appoints persons, there is no power to fill up the vacancy 8 M L T. 113=7 Ind Cas 754

8 The members of the said committee shall be appointed from among persons professing the religion for the purposes of which the mosque, temple or other religious establishment was founded or is now maintained, and in accordance, so far as can be ascertained, with the general wishes of those who are interested in the maintenance of such mosque, temple or other religious establishment

The appointment of the committee shall be notified in the official Gazette

In order to ascertain the general wishes of such persons in respect of such appointment, the Local Government may cause an election to be held, under such rules (not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act) as shall be framed by such Local Government

The remaining members of the committee shall, as soon as possible, give public notice of such vacancy, and shall fix a day, which shall not be later than three months from the date of such vacancy, for an election of a new member by the persons interested as above provided, under rules for elections which shall be framed by the Local Government , and whoever shall be then elected under the said rules shall be a member of the committee to fill such vacancy

If any vacancy as aforesaid shall not be filled up by such election as aforesaid within three months after it has occurred, the Civil Court, on the application of any person whatever, may appoint a person to fill the vacancy or may order that the vacancy be forthwith filled up by the remaining members of the committee, with which order it shall then be the duty of such remaining members to comply , and, if this order be not complied with, the Civil Court may appoint a member to fill the said vacancy

When Court may fill vacancy
“Explanation —In this section ‘Civil Court’ means the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction in the District in which the mosques, temples or religious establishments for which the committee has been appointed or any of them are situate ”

Object —The object of this section seems to be to prevent a deadlock when the committee do not do their duty and arrange for an election by providing that where an election has not been held within the prescribed time, the Court may make the appointment. If the committee refuse to do so, may order the remaining members to do so, may order the remaining members to hold an election before they give further delay and in what the Court may do. 842=21 Ind Cas 451

Procedure —A District Judge acting under this section is not bound to take any steps before appointing a person to be a member of the committee.

Privy Council Case—This section does not empower the Civil Court to direct the remaining members of a committee appointed under this Act when they have failed to hold an election for the choice of a new member to hold such election. It can direct them to fill up the vacancy, but such filling up is then their own Act. A proceeding of the Civil Court under this section is a judicial and not merely an administrative or ministerial act. In such matters the Civil Court exercises its powers as a Court of Law not merely as a persona designata whose determinations are not to be treated as judgments of a legal tribunal. 15 A. L. Notes —Clause (1)—In order to ensure that the shares of the Reserve Bank shall be widely held we recommend that the nominal value of each share should be reduced from Rs 500 to Rs 100

Clause (2)—It was represented to us that shares should not be allowed to be transferred from one register to another because this receipt lead to certain registers denuded of a large number of shares, thus leaving the holders of a comparatively small number of shares to elect representatives to the Local Board and thereby to the Central Board We have come to the conclusion that the advantages of free marketability are so great that transfers from one register to another should be freely allowed We further consider that a contingency such as that referred to is extremely unlikely to arise and that a majority of the shares of the Reserve Bank when once allotted will be firmly held as a lock up investment by the original holders If con

mended in the nominal value of each share we propose that five shares should carry each qualified applicant who has remaining unallotted shares, shares be allotted to applicants for less than five shares more than five distribution of Directors elect number of qualifying shares, we recommend that a sufficient number of shares should be reserved by Government to be available for purchase by the Directors and members of Local Boards at par, and that these purchasers should give an option to Government to re purchase such shares at par when they retire

We attach a great importance to securing that as large a proportion of the population of India as possible shall become shareholders of the Reserve Bank and thereby take an interest in its efficient working. We therefore recommend that the widest publicity should be given to the prospectus of the issue of the Reserve Bank shares and that facilities for applications to investors should be given through the Government post offices and treasuries.

Clause (5) —We have come to the conclusion that a more equitable distribution of the original capital having regard to the population of the areas concerned be made in the following manner :—

Bombay register—140 lakhs ,

"Sub Clause (6) —We have split up this sub clause into a number of sub-clauses. The original arrangement seemed unwieldy."—Report of the Select Committee

5. (1) The share Capital of the Bank may be increased or reduced on the recommendation of the Central Board, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council and with the approval of the Central Legislature, to such extent and in such manner as may be determined by the Bank in general meeting

(2) The additional shares so created shall be of the nominal value of one hundred rupees each and shall be assigned to the various registers in the same proportions as the shares constituting the original share capital

(3) Such additional shares shall be fully paid up, and the price at which they may be issued shall be fixed by the Central Board with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

(4) The provisions of section 4 relating to the manner of allotment of the shares shall apply to the allotment of the additional shares and shall not enjoy any preferential

Notes—“It was originally provided in the bill that any additional shares created should be assigned to the various registers to any manner fixed by the Central Board with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council and that the latter should also determine the manner in which such additional capital should be allotted to the various areas. We have recommended that the distribution should be in the same proportions as fixed for the original share capital

“In view of the liability that would be placed on the Government by any increase in the share capital of the Bank we consider that the previous approval of the Central Legislature should be obtained to any increase in the share capital.”—Report of the Select Committee

6 The Bank shall, as soon as may be, establish offices in Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras and Rangoon and a branch in London and may establish branches or agencies in any other place in India, or, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, elsewhere

Notes (6)—It was suggested to us that branches of the Reserve Bank should be opened at Lahore, Cawnpur and Karachi. The principal reason for this suggestion was that the Banks and the public at those places would not otherwise get the same facilities as would be available at places where there were offices and branches of the Reserve Bank. We wish to emphasise that at places where it has no branch the facilities of the Reserve Bank are not the same as at places where it has a branch. We do not recommend the opening of branches at these places. We, however, recommend that in the agreement between the Reserve Bank and the Imperial Bank of India it should be made clear that the former is not prevented by that agreement from opening a branch anywhere if it considers this necessary or desirable

“We consider in this connection whether it would be proper to place a statutory obligation on the Reserve Bank to open a branch in London. We have noted that the practice of other Central Banks of the world is not to establish any other Central Banks as their policy is to make any recommendation of importance of international co-operation between the Central Banks of various countries. We cannot accept the view that the practice of other countries affords an exact parallel to the particular case of India. We therefore, think that the Reserve Bank should be empowered to open a branch in London. We recommend that the Central Board should be empowered to open a branch in London.”

Composition of the Central Board, and term of office of Directors

(8) A Local Board shall advise the Central Board on such matters as may be generally or specifically referred to it and shall perform such duties as the Board may, by regulations, delegate to it

Notes — Sub-Clause (1) (b)—We have filled in an obvious lacuna in this sub clause and in the new proviso which we have added, we have indicated clearly for the guidance of the Central Board, the object with which the power of nominating three members to each local board has been conferred on that day

Sub Clause (2)—We have reduced the value of a voting qualification from two shares of Rs 500 each to five shares of Rs 100 each

'We have included a provision for the exercise of shareholders' votes by proxy we, however, thought it desirable to include that a shareholder should not be at proxies should not be accepted if made out under a general power of attorney,

Sub Clauses (4) and (5)—"We consider it essential for the convenience of the shareholders that the Bank should give adequate notice of election to the Local Boards and publish a list of shareholders which should be available on purchase For the latter purpose the Bank must have power to suspend the registration of transfers for a reasonable period preceding the election We have made amendments to give effect to those purposes

(2) No two persons who are partners of the same mercantile firm or are directors of the same private company or one of whom is the general agent of or holds a power of procuration from the other, or from a mercantile firm of which the other is a partner, may be Directors or members of the same Local Board at the same time.

(3) Nothing in clause (a), clause (d) or clause (e) of sub section (1) shall apply to the Governor, or to a Deputy Governor or to the Director nominated under clause (d) of sub section (1) of section 8

Notes — 'Sub Clause (2) — We have added in this sub-clause certain additional disqualifications taken from the Indian Companies Act which seem to us to be necessary. We have omitted the proviso to this sub clause as we consider that the objections to a state official being appointed would be no less than to any other Government official

'Sub-Clause (3) — We have proposed the insertion of a new sub clause on the lines of a similar provision in the Imperial Bank of India Act. We have also suggested in this clause certain minor amendments of a drafting nature' — Report of the Select Committee

Removal from and vacation of office

11. (1) The Governor General in Council may remove from office the Governor, or a Deputy Governor or any nominated or elected Director.

necessary certain words in this sub clause regulating the period within which directors should be required to acquire the prescribed number of qualifying shares as the addition which we have suggested in new clause 4 (8) should obviate any difficulty

'Sub Clause (4).—We have inserted a new sub clause (4) We feel that in the interest of the Bank a provision on these lines is desirable

'Sub Clause (5).—We have increased the period within which a member of the Legislature must vacate office To limit this to one month would, in our opinion, present practical difficulties.—Report of the Select Committee

12. (1) If the Governor or a Deputy Governor by infirmity or otherwise rendered incapable of executing his duties or absent on leave or otherwise in circumstances not involving the vacation of his appointment, the Governor General in Council may, after consideration of the recommendations made by the Central Board in this behalf, appoint another person to officiate for him, and such person may, notwithstanding anything contained in clause (d) of sub section (1) of section 10, be an officer of the Bank

(2) If an elected Director is for any reason unable to attend a particular meeting of the Central Board, the elected members of the Local Board of the area which he represents may elect one of their numbers to take his place, and for the purposes of that meeting the substitute so elected shall have all the powers of the absent Director

(3) Where any casual vacancy in the office of any member of a Local Board occurs otherwise than by the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of a Director elected by the Local Board the Central Board may nominate thereto any qualified person recommended by the elected members of the Local Board

(4) Where any casual vacancy occurs in the office of a Director other than the vacancies provided for in sub section (1), the vacancy shall be filled in the case of a nominated Director by nomination, and in the case of an elected Director by election held in the manner provided in section 9 for the election of Directors

Provided that before such election is made the resulting vacancy if any, in the Local Board and any vacancy in the office of an elected member of such Board which may have been filled by a member nominated under sub section (3) shall be filled by election held as nearly as may be in the manner provided in section 9 for the election of members of a Local Board

(5) A person nominated or elected under this section to fill a casual vacancy shall, subject to the proviso contained in sub section (4), hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of his predecessor

Notes.—'Sub Clause (1).—We have rearranged the provisions of these sub clauses and added a new clause (1) to read as follows:—

Board to fill the vacancy in the Central Board In the case of a vacancy of an elected member of a Local Board who is not also a member of the Central Board we consider that it would suffice for such a vacancy to be filled by co-opt on until such time as the Local Board is called upon to fulfil its function of electing a member to the Central Board Before that is done, the co-opted member should be replaced by an elected member"—Report of the Select Committee

Meetings of the Central Board 13 (1) Meetings of the Central Board shall be convened by the Governor at least six times in each year and at least once in each quarter.

(2) Any three Directors may require the Governor to convene a meeting of the Central Board at any time and the Governor shall forthwith convene a meeting accordingly

(3) The Governor, or in his absence the Deputy Governor authorized by the Governor under the proviso to sub-section (3) of section 8 to vote for him shall preside at meetings of the Central Board, and, in the event of an equality of votes, shall have a second or casting vote

Notes—'Sub Clause (1)—We have made an amendment consequential to our amendment of clause (6)

'Sub-Clause (2)—We think that provision should be made so as to enable any three Directors to convene a meeting of the Central Board. We have added this new clause accordingly. We considered whether it was necessary to provide what should be a quorum for a directors meeting, but have agreed that this matter should properly be governed by regulations to be made under clause 52"—Report of the Select Committee

The register in respect of which the election is to be held shall be selected by lot from among the registers still represented by nominated Directors, and for the purposes of such lot the Madras and Rangoon registers shall be treated as if they comprised one register only

"As regards the general purpose of this sub clause the non-official members of the committee have made it clear that they would not consider anything less than 75 per cent of the voting Directors as affording a proper representation of Indians. We have received an assurance on behalf of the Government from the Government members of the committee that the Governor General in Council will exercise his powers so as to ensure the proper representation of Indians on the first Board"—Report of the Select Committee be offered on the open market even though the Reserve Bank may take them up. We have therefore limited the period to three months. We have enlarged the scope of this clause so as to include advances to such Local Governments as may have the custody and management of their own provincial revenues.

"Sub Clause (6)—We were informed that Bank post bills are not made payable elsewhere than at the office of issue and have amended the sub clause so as to state the existing practice correctly.

Sub Clause (7)—We consider that the view of the limitation of holdings of securities of the British Government [Vide our note on Sub-clause 2 (d)] this provision is unduly restrictive and that the Bank should be empowered to purchase such securities up to a maturity of ten years. We must make it clear that our intention is that this should be merely an enabling clause, and that in practice the Bank should arrange for its holding of securities to be as liquid as possible.

"Sub Clause (8)—We consider that the sub clause as originally drafted was unduly restrictive and would not allow sufficient facilities for open market operations by the Bank. We have therefore modified the amounts in the proviso but wish to make the same point, namely, that these figures are in circumstances, the Bank must operate well below these limits.

by Provincial Governments, there is no reason for restricting the maturity of securities of a Local Government to ten years and of States in India we think to their maturity, their eligibility for approval of the Government of India to be considered on its merits. We

We also wish to provide that to principal and interest by any authority the equivalent of a security of such authority.

"Sub Clause (9)—We have not restricted the operation of this sub clause to scheduled Banks or public authorities because we consider there might be cases in which such restriction would operate inconveniently in practice. At the same time we wish to make it clear that in our view this power should not be exercised by the Bank so as to compete in its normal business with the commercial business of other Banks. It should be the duty of the Government to watch this and to see that the interests of other Banks are in practice protected.

"Sub Clause 13—We have no reason why this should be restricted to sterling standard countries. It is desirable to promote co operation between Central Banks, and we therefore consider that the Reserve Bank should be empowered to act as the agent of any Central Bank and vice versa."—Report of the Select Committee

18 When, in the opinion of the Central Board or, where the powers and functions of the Central Board under this section have been delegated to a committee of the Central Board or to the Governor, in the opinion of such committee or of the Governor as the case may be, a special occasion has arisen making it necessary or expedient that action should be taken under this section for the purpose of regulating credit in the interests of Indian trade, commerce, industry and agriculture, the Bank may, notwithstanding any limitation contained in sub-clause (a) and (b) of clause (2) or sub-clause (a) or (b) of clause (3) or clause (4) of section 17

(1) purchase, sale or discount any of the bills or exchange of promissory notes specified in sub-clause (a) or (b) of clause (2) or sub-clause (b) of clause (3) of that section though such bill or promissory note does not bear the signature of a scheduled Bank or a provincial co-operative Bank, or

(2) purchase or sell sterling in amounts of not less than the equivalent of one lakh of rupees, or

(3) make loans or advances repayable on demand or on the expiry of fixed periods not exceeding ninety days against the various forms of security specified in clause (4) of that section.

Provided that a committee of the Board or the Governor shall not, save in cases of special urgency, authorize action under this section without prior consultation with the Central Board and that in all cases action so authorized shall be reported to the members of the Central Board forthwith

Notes.—‘We have added words to this clause so as to make it clear that although the exercise of these powers should not necessarily be regarded as limited to occasions of so critical a nature as to justify their description as an emergency, nevertheless they are not to be used for the normal operations of the Bank and should be restricted to special occasions. We have also modified it so as to provide for the delegation of the powers of the Board to a Committee of the Board as well as to the Governor. We have further thought it desirable to make it clear that although in order to make quick action possible the Board may delegate its special powers under this section to a committee or to the Governor nevertheless such delegated powers should not normally be utilised without previous consultation with the Board and that if in cases of special urgency such previous consultation is impossible the members of the Board shall be informed at once so that if they think fit, they can convene a special meeting to have the policy considered and decided.—Report of the Select Committee

Business which the Bank may not transact 19 Save as otherwise provided in sections 17, 18 and 45, the Bank may not—

(1) engage in trade or otherwise have a direct interest in any commercial, industrial or other undertaking except such interest as it may in any way acquire in the course of the satisfaction of any of its claims provided that all such interests shall be disposed of at the earliest possible moment,

(2) purchase its own shares or the shares of any other Bank or of any company, or grant loans upon the security of any such shares,

(3) advance money on mortgage of, or otherwise on the security of, immoveable property or documents of title relating thereto or become the owner of immovable property except so far as is necessary for its own business premises and residences for its officers and servants,

(4) make loans or advances,

(5) draw or accept bills payable otherwise than on demand,

(6) allow interest on deposits or current accounts

Bengal Acts III of 1862 and VII of 1868 are to be read with and taken as part of this Act—See s 30 of the former Act

The Public Demands Recovery Act (Ben Act III of 1913), so far as is consistent with the tenure thereof is to be construed as one with this Act—See Ben. Act I of 1895.

Object of the Act—The object of this Act is to give the purchaser a title which cannot be challenged 8 W R 439, 10 W R (F B) 66 The Act is a stringent enactment for the realization of arrears of revenue and therefore there is an obligation to comply exactly with its requirements 43 C L J 468=95 Ind Cas 333=30 C W N 168

Act XI of 1859 and Ben Acts VII of 1868 and VII of 1880—Construction—Act XI of 1859 and Ben Acts VII of 1868 and VII of 1880, are under s 2 of the last mentioned Act, to be construed as if they were all a single Act as far as construction is consistent with the Act VII of 1880 14 I C

2 If the whole or a portion of a kist or instalment of any month of the Arrear of revenue defined era according to which the settlement and kistbands of any mahal have been regulated be unpaid on the first of the following month of such era, the sum so remaining unpaid shall be considered an arrear of revenue

Kist—This section refers to the kists or instalments by which the settlement and kistbands of a mahal have been regulated and not the kist or instalment noted in the Collectorate Touzi department 7 Ind Cas 130

Unpaid—Payment to Post Office is not equivalent to payment to the Collector 4 C W N 130

Notes—This Act does not sanction and by plain implication forbids the sale of any estate which is not, at the time in arrear of Government revenue 25 C. 833 (P C)=25 I A 151=2 C W N 513 When an arrear of revenue has not been paid within the latest date fixed for payment, no payment or tender of

5 Provided always that no estate, and no share or interest in any estate, shall be sold for the recovery of arrears or demands of the descriptions mentioned below otherwise than after a notification in the language of the district, specifying the nature and amount of the arrear or demand and the latest date on which payment thereof shall be received, shall have been affixed for a period of not less than fifteen clear days preceding the date fixed for payment according to section 3 of this Act, in the office of the Collector or other officer duly authorized to hold sales under this Act in the Court of the Judge within whose jurisdiction the land advertised lies and in the Munsifs Court and police thana of the division in which the estate or share of an estate to which the notification relates is situated, or if the estate or share of an estate be situated within the jurisdiction of more than one Munsifs Court or police thana, in some one or more of such Courts or thanas, and also at the kachari of the malguzar or owner of the estate or share of an estate, or at some conspicuous place upon the estate or share of an estate, the same to be certified by the peon or other person employed for the purpose

First—Arrears other than those of the current year, or of the year immediately preceding

Secondly—Arrears due on account of estates other than that to be sold

Thirdly—Arrears of estates under attachment by order of any judicial authority or managed by the Collector in accordance with such order

Fourthly—Arrears due on account of takavi, pulbandi or other demands not being land revenue, but recoverable by the same process as arrears of land revenue

Estate—The word 'estate' in the description attached to this section means not only a whole estate, but applies also to such shares as are referred to in the first portion of the section 13 W R 423

* The section has been repealed in Sylhet by Reg I of 1896, s. 2

Notification—The object of a notification under this section when the estate is under attachment, is to protect the interest of the attaching creditor. 1 C L J 565 Omission to issue the same is not cured by the issue of certificate under s 28 Ibid The non issue of a certificate of sale is not a defect in the nature contemplated in s 3. Commissioner cannot be held liable for non issue of certificate (P C 157) and notification 9 W R 481

Current year—The expression "current year" in this section is to be understood as referring to the year in which the latest date for payment falls as fixed under s 3 and not the year in which the sale of the property ultimately takes place. 7 C W N 377 The words "current year" in this section mean the year (1st April to 31st May) L J 425=34 C 331. Arrears for which the notice under this section, arrears which accrued due subsequently to the issue of such notice 8 C W N 649 see also 11 C W N 1107

Arrears of estates under attachment—In order to come under the protection of the clause (3) it is not necessary that an estate under attachment by order of a judicial authority must also be managed by some Revenue authority, as all estates under attachment whether managed by Collector or not are entitled to the benefit of the special notice described in this section 13 W R 423 Where an estate or a share of an estate not severed for the purpose of revenue, is under attachment by order of a Civil Court in execution of decree, such estate or share cannot under this section be put up to sale without notification required by this section 12 B L R 297=1 I A 89 (P C) The words "arrears of estates under attachment" in the above section are not confined to estates the whole of which is under attachment Ibid But there is nothing in this section which indicates that property sold for arrears of Government revenue should be under attachment at the time of sale. A sale in contravention of s 3 is not void and therefore a sale is not void if made after notice issued by the Collector under s 3 contemplated by s 5 20 C 325 This section provides for cases in which the attachment has been made at least 15 days before the last date of payment for which it is sought to bring the estate to sale 22 C 738 A purchaser of a share of an estate at a revenue sale during the pendency of execution proceeding on a mortgage decree, that is, after the mortgage sale and before its confirmation, is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens 10 C L J 590=4 Ind Cas 731

Land revenue—The embankment charges ordered to be levied under the Certificate Act are taken out of the purview of this Act, unless and until fresh notices are issued under s 5 and they cannot be treated as land revenue 42 C 709=19 C W N 507 (P C)

§ The Collector or other officer duly authorized to hold sales under this Act shall, as soon as possible after the latest day of payment fixed in the manner prescribed in section 3 of this Act, affix in his own office a notice of sale of the estates or shares of which the sale of the same will commence, which day shall not be less than "thirty" clear days from the date of affixing the notification in the office of the Collector or other officer as aforesaid

And if the Government revenue of any estate or share of an estate to be sold exceed the sum of five hundred rupees, a notification of the sale of such estate or share of an estate shall be published in the official Gazette

Except as hereinafter provided, all estates or shares of estates so specified shall, on the day notified for sale, or on the day or days following be put up to other than that claimed by him or if the application be in respect of a specific portion of the land of an estate, that the amount of sardr jama stated by the applicant to have been heretofore paid on account of such portion of land is not the amount which has been recognized by the other sherrers as the jama thereof, the Collector shall refer the parties to the Civil Court, shall suspend proceedings until the question at issue is judicially determined

Reference to Civil Court—Where an application is made to a Collector by a registered proprietor for separate account, and the application is objected to within six months after the date at which an objection is regularly made, the Collector should refer the parties to the Civil Court.

are the only objections that could be made to the only statements that the application is to contain. It would seem to follow from this that if no such objection is made the Collector is bound to open a separate account whether the share from which the separate account is to be opened is in arrears or not at the time. 4 Pat 1=3 Pat L R 66=88 Ind Cas 465

13 Whenever the Collector shall have ordered a separate account or accounts to be kept for one or more shares if the estate shall become liable to sale for arrears of revenue, the Collector or other officer as aforesaid in the first place shall put up to sale only that share or those shares of the estate from which according to the separate accounts an arrear of revenue may be due.

In all such cases, not only the portion of the estate which is sold, but the whole estate, if the share or shares sold being charged with the separate portion or the aggregate of the several separate portions, of Jama assigned thereto.

Order a separate account—This section requires a sale to be confined to the share for which an arrear of revenue is due when a separate account has been ordered by Collector, not merely applied for. 7 W R 154

What the auction purchaser acquires—The auction purchaser of a share in an estate, if the estate is sold, acquires the share and the interest therein.

So the purchaser is entitled to the share if the proprietor has acquired a title by twelve years adverse possession previously to the sale. 13 C W N 407=1 Ind Cas 81, 19 C W N 782=29 Ind Cas 350. So also a purchaser of a share of an estate of a Hindu widow, at a sale for arrears of revenue under this section does not acquire merely the right, title and interests of the widow but he takes the share itself which is exposed for sale. 22 C 641

Estate—The term "estate" as used in the clause "if the estate shall become liable to sale" in this section means the entire estate out of which the separate share has been severed. 18 C L J 505. A co-sharer is not under any legal obligation to his co-sharers to pay his share of the Government revenue. 18 C L J 97. The sale law contemplates that an estate in arrears should be sold as soon as possible after the liability to sale has arisen by failure to pay the arrears on the last day of payment. Therefore where after opening of separate accounts the balance of the residuary share is sold for arrears of revenue the onus of showing that the entire estate (i.e., including the separated accounts) was liable to sale at the date of the opening of the separate accounts is on the party alleging the same. 4 Pat 1=88 Ind Cas 465=A I R 1915 Pat 681

If such purchase be completed, the Collector or other officer as aforesaid shall give such certificate and delivery of possession as are provided for in sections 28 and 29 of this Act to the purchaser or purchasers who shall have the same rights as if the share had been purchased by him or them at the sale

If no such purchase be made within ten days as aforesaid the entire estate shall be sold, after notification for such period and publication in such manner as is prescribed in section 6 of this Act

And no estate held under attachment or managed by a Revenue officer in pursuance of an order of a judicial authority shall be liable to sale for the recovery of arrears of revenue accruing during the period of such attachment or management until after the end of the year in which such arrears accrued

Estate under attachment—A sale for arrears of revenue if for arrears which have accrued while the land has been subject to an order issued by the Collector under the Bengal Cess Act, for the levy of road cess in arrear is contrary to this section such an order being an attachment within the meaning of that section 21 C 70 P C = 20 I A 165 There is nothing in s 5 which indicates that property sold for arrears of Government revenue should be under attachment at the time of sale A sale in contravention of ss 5 and 17 is ultra vires and therefore void 13 M 89

The position of the purchaser of an estate at a revenue sale at any rate in respect of his relations with his tenant is not absolutely independent of that of the ex proprietor: 49 Ind Cas 956. The special authority given by this section to an auction purchaser (the estate purchased by him: 15 W R 481; auction-purchaser of an entire estate can exercise of s. 37 of the Act: 10 C W N 148, 22 12 C L J 497=8 Ind Cas 786, 1 C L J C W N 706. To bring a case within the words of s. 37 three things must occur, there must be a sale (1) of an entire estate (2) in the permanently settled districts (3) for its own arrears: 6 Bom L R 754. The rights must be exercised by all the purchasers jointly: 24 C 334. The word "purchaser" in this section does not mean only a certified purchaser or his heirs or assignees. The real purchaser is a purchaser within the meaning of the section and is entitled to avoid encumbrance: 23 Ind Cas 917. Patnidar purchasing zamindari at sale for arrears of revenue has no right to annul subordinate tenures: 18 C W N 672.

An encumbrance or under tenure is not pro se avoided by a sale of an estate for arrears of revenue and is only liable to be avoided at the option of the purchaser at such sale an option which may be exercised by the institution of a suit under this section within the time allowed by law or by actual ejectment by the Collector under s. 39: 6 C L J 472. An encumbrance can also be avoided by giving notice to vacate: 39 Ind Cas 273.

greater portion of Bengal was permanently settled 18 Ind Cas 872, 24 W R 476, 34 C I J 485

The mere fact that the lands are situate within the ambit of the estate is not sufficient to discharge the burden of proof. Where such a prima facie case is made out by the plaintiff, the onus probandi is shifted on to the defendant to show that his tenure existed rent free before 1790. 5 Pat 726 = 96 Ind Cas 575 = A I R 1926 P 416

CHAPTER I PRELIMINARY	CHAPTER II FORMATION OF THE CONTRACT Contract of Sale
SECTIONS	SECTIONS
1 Short title extent and commencement ■ Definitions 3 Application of provisions of Act IX of 1872	4 Sale and agreement to sell Formalities of the Contract 5 Contract of the sale how made. Subject matter of Contract 6 Existing or future goods

* Schedule B has been repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act I of 1903

"Whatever merit the simple and elementary rules embodied in the Indian Contract Act may have had and however sufficient and suitable they may have been for the needs which they were intended to meet in 1872, the passage of time has revealed defects the removal of which has become necessary in order to keep the law abreast of the developments of modern business relations. The law relating to the sale of goods appertains mainly to mercantile transactions. There can be doubt that during the last half-century conditions of business have undergone material changes. Relations have arisen between buyers and sellers which have been necessary to give recognition to the fact that a law enacted more than half a century ago was no longer adapted to the requirements of modern commerce."

Chapter VII of
is from the decisions of the English Courts.

"The English law relating to the sale of goods, which was admitted as the basis of Chapter VII of the Indian Act, was in many respects antiquated and was in need of changes and was finally revised in 1893. The Indian Act was based, in favour of provisions more suited to modern conditions or more convenient in actual practice."

"By the Bill referred to for our consideration, the law relating particularly to the sale of goods is amended."

and could not pretend to be, a complete code upon the branch of law to which it related. He, however, expressed a hope that in later years it would be easy to enact supplementary chapters relating to the several branches of the Law of Contract which the Bill did not touch. This hope has never been fulfilled. In later years it was found that the complexity of the law relating to the sale of goods, and the complexity of the instruments used in the sale, required separate self-contained enactments; and we hope that the Bill which we attach to our report may be passed into law at any early date and may be but the first of the series required to complete the task, which we have outlined above—Report of the Special Committee.

Origin of the Act.—"The Bill referred to us was mainly based on the English Sale of Goods Act, 1893. The Act has been in force for nearly thirty-five years of its enactment. It was based on the principles laid down in in re Peircham (1918), A. C. 101, and the codification of this branch of the law was the result of the recommendations of the Special Committee."

very largely on the English Act, which is the basis of the Indian Act.

useful to meet special conditions existing in India"—Report of the Special Committee

Scope of the Act—The present Bill embodies the principle that the question whether a contract for the sale of goods does or does not pass the property in the goods from the buyer to the seller must in all cases be determined by the intention of the parties to the contract. The provisions of Chapter VII of the Indian Contract Act are vague and conflicting on this point. The Bill codifies the rules by which that intention may be ascertained but the operation of these rules will be displaced by any terms of the contract including the conduct of the parties.

principle we have borne in mind is that if the parties know beforehand what their legal position is, they can provide for their particular wants by express stipulations. Sale, after all, is a consensual contract and the Bill does not prevent the parties from making any bargain they please. Its object is to lay down clear rules for the cases where the parties have either framed no intention or failed to express it.

The distinction between a sale and an agreement to sell which was not clear in Chapter VII of the Indian Contract Act, has been clearly brought out. This distinction is very necessary to determine the rights and liabilities of the parties to the contract.

"It is made clear that a contract of sale can be made by mere offer and acceptance. Neither payment nor delivery is necessary for the purpose."

"Before 1893 the law was in a very confused state in a very vague sense. A party aggrieved by the law was at a loss to claim damages."

"There is much to be said in favour of the Bill. It is a certain extent tried to remove the subject."

"We have elaborated the rules relating to delivery to carriers, stoppage in transit and auction sales."

"We have anxiously considered the question of the retention of the illustrations appearing in Chapter VII of the Indian Contract Act and of the insertion of illustrations to new provisions. Our decision is that the better policy is to forego all illustrations, leaving the Courts to construe the sections as they stand.—Report of the Special Committee

Definitions

2 In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "buyer" means a person who buys or agrees to buy goods,

Notes—A buyer and a seller must be different persons. Scotson v Pegg, 11 H. & N 395. The definitions in this clause have been taken from section 62 of the English Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict., c. 71)—Notes on Clauses

(2) "delivery" means voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another,

Notes—Delivery primarily signifies the act of transferring the possession of a movable thing from one person to another, thus the delivery of goods is a necessary part of the transaction called a sale. Delivery is either actual or constructive, thus if goods cannot conveniently be actually handed from one person to another, as if delivery of the key of the warehouse, a delivery is symbolical delivery of the goods themselves. Santlers v Ma' Lein, 11 Q. B. 327, 111 J. K. 11 934, The Prince Adair (1917) 21 J. K. B. 107.

No definition of the word "possession" is given in the Act. In its primary sense possession is the visible possibility of exercising physical control over a thing coupled with the intention of doing so, either against all the world or against all the world except certain persons. There are, therefore, three requisites of possession. First there must be actual or potential physical control. Secondly physical control is not possession unless accompanied by intention hence if a thing be put into the hand of a sleeping person, he has not possession of it. Thirdly, the possibility and intention must be visible or evidenced by external signs for if the thing shows no signs of being under the control of any one it is not possessed.—Byrne's Dictionary of English Law

(3) goods are said to be in a "deliverable state" when they are in such state that the buyer would under the contract be bound to take delivery of them,

(4) "document of title to goods" includes a bill of lading, dock warrant, warehouse keeper's certificate, wharfingers' certificate, railway receipt, warrant or order for the delivery of goods and any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by endorsement or by delivery, the possessor of the document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented,

Notes—In regard to the definition of the term "document of title" the term has been used in sections 102, 103, 108 and 178 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. It has been held by the Privy Council in Ramdas v. Amar Chand, 43 I A 164 that it has the same meaning as it had in the Indian Factories Act of 1840 which is wider than the definition in the English Act.—Notes on Clauses

A suggestion has been made that a mate's receipt should be included in the definition of document of title to goods. We considered the suggestion and have come to conclusion that notwithstanding the irregular practice in Calcutta of treating a mate's receipt on the same footing as a bill of lading a mate's receipt can not be treated as a document of title. A mate's receipt is a mere acknowledgment of the receipt of goods on behalf of the ship. The person in possession of the mate's receipt is as a general rule entitled to a bill of lading, which is the document of title to the goods. The High Court of Calcutta has taken the same view and we are not aware of any judicial decision which regards a mate's receipt as a document of title. In England it has been held that mere endorsement or transfer of mate's receipt without notice to the ship owner or his agent does not pass the property in the goods, as a custom to that effect is bad. If a mate's receipt were treated as a document of title, then on the issue of a bill of lading with it the mate's receipt having been surrendered, there will be two documents of title in existence relating to the same goods. This would be highly undesirable from business point of view.—Report of the Select Committee

(5) "fault" means wrongful act or default,

Notes—Wrong is that which takes place when a right is violated. So in the word "wrongful" is implied the "infringement of some right." 23 Q B D 598. As regards the meaning of default vide Re Young and Harstons' Contract, 31 Ch D 168.

(6) "future goods" means goods to be manufactured or produced or acquired by the seller after the making of the contract of sale,

Notes—"The term "future goods", although not very happy has been held to be convenient. Ajello v. Worsley, (1898) 1 Ch at p 280. We have therefore retained it and defined it on the line of the English Act with the addition of the words "or produced" to include agricultural products specifically.—Notes on Clauses

(7) "goods" means every kind of movable property other than actionable claims and money, and includes stock and shares, growing crops, grass and things attached to or forming part of the land which are agreed to be severed before sale or under the contract of sale,

Notes—In the definition of the term "goods" we have included shares. In Fasal v. Mongal Das, 46 B 489, it was held that the "goods" as used in Chapter VII of the Indian Act, 1872 has a much wider sense than it has in the English Law and includes share certificates.—Notes on Clause "Goods," said Coke, "include all

Notes—This definition follows from the definition of 'sale and agreement to sell' given in section 4, infra

(14) "specific goods" means goods identified and agreed upon at the time a contract of sale is made, and

Notes—This definition is taken from section 62(1) of the English Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. § 71). Specific goods must be distinguished from unascertained or generic goods, i.e., goods defined only by description. Under a contract for specific goods the seller does not fulfil his contract by delivering any goods other than those agreed upon, under a contract for generic goods the seller may deliver any goods which answer to the description, the property in specific goods may be transferred by the contract itself, but no property can be transferred so long as the goods are unascertained (vide sections 18 to 23). Again, specific goods may be the subject of an action for specific performance (vide section 58). So when there is a contract for specific goods and the goods have perished at the date of the contract, the contract is void. As regards unascertained goods, it is conceived that the term specific, and is not confined to the buyer, the contract is conceived that the term specific, and is not confined

FORMATION OF THE CONTRACT

Contract of Sale

4 (1) A contract of sale of goods is a contract whereby the seller transfers or agrees to transfer the property in goods to the buyer for a price. There may be a contract of sale between one part owner and another

(2) A contract of sale may be absolute or conditional

(3) Where under a contract of sale the property in the goods is transferred from the seller to the buyer the contract is called a sale, but where the transfer of the property in the goods is to take place at a future time or subject to some condition thereafter to be fulfilled, the contract is called an agreement to sell

(4) An agreement to sell becomes a sale when the time elapses or the conditions are fulfilled subject to which the property in the goods is to be transferred

Notes—Considerable confusion has been caused by the definition of sale in section 77 read with section 78 of the Indian Act of which the marginal note is 'sale how effected'. The last two paragraphs of section 78 contain a good many words which are unnecessary and only create confusion. It will be observed from the definition of 'contract of sale' in the English Act that it confuses two things, namely, (i) sale and (ii) agreement to sell. It may perhaps be said that, having

Formalities of the Contract

5. (1) A contract of sale is made by an offer to buy or sell goods for a price and the acceptance of such offer. The contract may provide for the immediate delivery of the goods or immediate payment of the price or both, or for the delivery or payment by instalments, or that the delivery or payment or both shall be postponed.

(2) Subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, a contract of sale may be made in writing or by word of mouth or partly in writing and partly by word of mouth or may be implied from the conduct of the parties.

Notes—"Sub-clause (1) of this clause is based on the general principle laid down in the Indian Act that a contract is effected by an offer and an acceptance accompanied by consideration. The corresponding section in the Indian Act is section 78. It refers to the making of a sale as well as to the passing of property. In our opinion it is desirable to keep the two matters separate. So far as the making of a sale is concerned, section 78 seems to be open to the following objections—although by its marginal note it purports to lay down a sale relating to sales generally, it deals only with the simplest case of a sale of ascertained goods for a fixed price. (2) After stating that a sale can be effected by offer and acceptance of goods for a price and vice versa it goes on to enumerate various circumstances which would constitute a sale. This enumeration or description is neither accurate nor complete, and should not find a place in a provision which is of a declaratory nature. (3) The acceptance referred to in the section is the acceptance of goods as distinguished from the

Sharp v Christmas, 8 T. L. We agree in that opinion and have accordingly made it clear that the goods must have been either physically destroyed or so damaged as not to answer the description given in the contract. With this alteration we have adopted the provision of section 6 of the

Barrow v. Philip, (1919) 1 K B 574]

"In the course of the discussions on clauses 7 and 8, a point was raised that inasmuch as under the terms of the two clauses the agreement is either void or the contract becomes void, these clauses might have the effect of rendering void every kind of contract relating to the sale of goods, lost or not lost, and that they might have the effect of hitting at all contracts. It was urged that a contract was not void if the goods were tendered of documents, and such a clause 62 of this Bill corresponding to clause 62 of the English Act would be saved by the clause. We think that clause 62 is comprehensive and would be saved by the clause. We Mr Chalmers on page 31 of his commentary on the Sale of Goods Act—"Report of the Special Committee

8 Where there is an agreement to sell specific goods, and subsequently the goods without any fault on the part of the seller or buyer perish or become so damaged as no longer to answer to their description in the agreement before the risk passes to the buyer, the agreement is thereby avoided.

Notes—"The clause relates to the impossibility of performance arising after the contract is made and is based on section 7 of the English Act. It is true that Chapter VII of the Indian Act does not contain a specific provision on the point. But the principle is well established and underlies section 56 of the Indian Act. We think it is desirable that it should be included in the present Bill as a specific provision. For the reason stated in the note to preceding clause, this clause has been found to cover the case of goods which are so far damaged as not to answer the description in the contract. The words 'the agreement is avoided' occur."

A question might arise by substituting the words 'the agreement is avoided' for the words 'the contract is void'. The reason for the change is thus stated: For the words 'agreement' of the Special Committee

The Price

9 (1) The price in a contract of sale may be fixed by the contract or may be left to be fixed in manner thereby agreed or may be determined by the course of dealing between the parties

(2) Where the price is not determined in accordance with the foregoing provisions the buyer shall pay the seller a reasonable price. What is a reasonable price is a question of fact dependent on the circumstances of each particular case

Notes — This section is a corollary to the preceding section. It is not uncommon for the parties to agree that the price of the goods will be fixed by valuer appointed

Conditions and Warranties

11 Unless a different intention appears from the terms of the contract, stipulations as to time of payment are not deemed to be of the essence of a contract of sale. Whether any other stipulation as to time is of the essence of the contract or not depends on the terms of the contract.

Origin of the section.—This section is based on section 10 of the English Act. The principle underlying that section is to be found in section 53 of the Indian Act. In our opinion the present Bill should contain a specific provision on the point. As the General Clauses Act, 1897 contains a definition of the word 'month' subsection (2) of the English section has been omitted.—Report of the Special Committee

Ordinarily stipulations as to time of payment are not deemed to be of the essence of a contract of sale. Morland v Smith, 1 Q B 389, Morley v Naylor, 9 App Cas 434, Jamshed v Burjorji, 40 11 289 (P C), but see Reuter v Sala, 4 C P D 239, Bowes v Shand, 2 App Cas 455. Robinson v Behar, (1927) 1 K B 513, Forman v Blackburn (1928) 2 K B 90, James Finlay v Kwick Hoo Tong, (1929) 1 K 11 400, Hortly v Hymans, (1920) 3 K B 475. 12. (1) A stipulation in a contract of sale with reference to goods which are the subject thereof may be a condition or a warranty.

() A condition is a stipulation essential to the main purpose of the contract the breach of which gives rise to a right to treat the contract as repudiated.

(3) A warranty is a stipulation collateral to the main purpose of the contract, the breach of which gives rise to a claim for damages but not to a right to reject the goods and treat the contract as repudiated.

(4) Whether a stipulation in a contract of sale is a condition or a warranty depends in each case on the construction of the contract. A stipulation may be a condition, though called a warranty in the contract.

any definition of the word 'condition' was drafted about four years prior to the Act in 1893, there have been a large number of cases on conditions and warranties. We have ventured to define the expression a condition. The material part of the definition consists in the use of the word 'essential', and we think that the

English decisions since 1896 bear out this view [See Fletcher Moulton's L. J. dissenting judgment in Wallis v Pratt, (1910) 2 K B 1003 at page 1012 after wards approved by the House of Lords in 1911 A C 394] The expression

On this part of the law the Indian Act clear from the provisions of section 118 of Scottish Law which is set out in the English expression 'condition' was not used in the Indian Act is probably to be found in the very uncertain state of the law at that time. There are many subdivisions of conditions in English Law, and one of them is a division into (1) conditions precedent and (2) concurrent conditions. Concurrent conditions are the same as reciprocal conditions and they are dealt with in the Indian Act under the head 'performance of reciprocal promises' in sections 51 to 58.

"Conditions are also divided into —

- (1) 'Promissory conditions' and
- (2) 'Contingent conditions'

'Contingent conditions are dealt with in the Indian Act under the head 'continuing contracts' in sections 31 to 36.

"It may be observed that so far as the Scottish Law is concerned, it is far behind the English Law. No doubt it clears many knotty points which arise in the branch of the law. But it is not suited to the modern requirements of commerce. Under the Scottish Law a buyer would be entitled to reject goods as on a breach of a condition in many cases in which under the English Law he would be entitled only to damages as on a breach of warranty.

'The definition of warranty' in the English Act is borrowed from the notes to Cutter v Powell, 2 Sm Leading Cases, 7th Ed p 30.

'As regards the definition of the term "condition" we have borrowed the word 'essential' from the classical judgment of Williams J in Behn v. Burns, (1863) 32 L J Q B 204 at p 206 (2).

"On referring to Indian decisions it will be found that in several cases the Courts have embarked on an enquiry whether the word 'warranty' used in some of the sections, e.g., 118 of the Indian Act, is equivalent to condition or is used in the same sense as the word 'warranty' is used in English law. It has been held, at least in one case (Buch v Govordhandas, 24 Bom. L R 991) that the word 'warranty' in section 118 means a 'condition'. In other cases it has been held that the word 'warranty' is used in its limited sense. The difficulty has arisen from the fact that the authors of the Indian Act have avoided throughout the use of the word 'condition' and have used the expression 'warranty' indiscriminately sometimes in the sense of 'condition' and sometimes in the sense of 'warranty' proper. As to section 118 of the Indian Act, it may be observed that the words 'warranty' is there used in the sense of a condition. This is clear from the contents of the section itself. The section refers to unascertained goods, and provides that the buyer may reject the goods if they are not in accordance with the warranty. Now the right of rejection, according to the English law, can only be exercised where the stipulation is a condition, and not where the stipulation amounts to a warranty. The section then notwithstanding the breach of the 'warranty' n), accept the goods and may, by giving a from him. This means that the buyer the English Act, elect to treat the breach y, and may claim compensation from the English Act. "Such being the case it is 'condition' and 'warranty' observed in the

"Before concluding this note, we may draw attention to the judgment of Lord Alverston in Wallis v Pratt, (1911) A. C 396, where he said. — Prior to that Act there had been a very great deal of litigation and of discussion as to matters which formed only a ground of warranty and matters which amounted to a condition, and the remedies in the one case and in the other were the subject of a great deal of discussion My Lords, I thought it right to add these few words because I think it is very important to bear in mind that the rights of people in regard to these matters depend now upon statute To a large extent the old law, I will not say, has been swept away, but it has become unnecessary to refer to it"—Report of the Select Committee

(3) Nothing in this section shall affect that case of any condition or warranty fulfilment of which is excused by law by reason of impossibility or otherwise it would seem naturally to follow that by the very act of selling the chattel the seller undertakes to transfer the property in the things, and thus warrants his title or ability to sell, and it is believed that such was the true rule of the Common Law. Clause (1) of section 12 of the English Act settles the law on the point and embodies the above rule. It provides that in the absence of an express provision there will be an implied condition as to title in a contract of sale. Clause (2) of section 12 provides for an warranty of quiet possession and clause (3) for freedom from incumbrances. These provisions are absent from the Indian Act. But it appears that the laws of modern civilised countries recognise such warranties vide Benjamin on Sale p 694 and Chalmers on Sale of Goods, p 44. In our opinion, therefore the provisions of section 12 of the English Act should be adopted in India. "This clause gives larger rights to the buyer than what he had under section 109 of the Indian Act. In regard to the persons claiming under him who are allowed by section 109 to proceed against the original seller, we do not think that any specific provision is necessary. Such persons will either be assignees or sub buyers from the buyer. Their rights against their own seller will be governed by this section, but as against the original seller will depend on the general law."—Report of the Special Committee

Notes—Section 113 of the Indian Act deals with sale by description. In the first place, however, the word 'denomination' used in the section is not a happy expression and is rarely used now a days. Further, there is no doubt that the word 'warranty' used in the section is used in the sense of 'condition,' for where

There is no reason for restricting the provisions of the section to the sale of goods which have a commercial denomination (Bowels v Stand, (1877) 11 App Cas 455). It is difficult to understand the import of the explanation to section 113. An express warranty would on general principles negative an implied warranty inconsistent with it. In any case the proposition which the explanation purports to lay down seems to be in conflict with the decision of the House of Lords in Wallis v Pratt, (1911) A C 394. In our opinion section 13 of the English Act lays down comprehensively the law on the point. The first part of the section which provides that the goods shall correspond with the description is as stated in Chalmers' Sale of Goods, which is universal (Chalmers' Sale of Goods,

16. Subject to the provisions of this Act and of any other law for the time being in force there shall be implied in every contract of sale of goods, implied conditions as to quality or fitness of sale, except as follows —

(1) Where the buyer expressly or by implication, makes known to the seller the particular purpose for which the goods are required, so as to show that buyer relies on the seller's skill or judgment, and the goods are of a description which it is in the course of the seller's business to supply (whether he is the manufacturer or producer or not) there is an implied condition that the goods shall be reasonably fit for such purpose

Provided that, in the case of a contract for the sale of a specified article under its patent or other trade name there is no implied condition as to its fitness for any particular purpose

(2) Where goods are bought by description from a seller who deals in goods of that description (whether he is the manufacturer or producer or not), there is an implied condition that the goods shall be of merchantable quality

Provided that, if the buyer has examined the goods, there shall be no implied condition as regards defects which such examination ought to have revealed

(3) An implied warranty or condition as to quality or fitness for a particular purpose may be annexed by the usage of trade

(4) An express warranty or condition does not negative a warranty or condition implied by this Act unless inconsistent therewith

Notes — This clause deals with implied conditions as to quality or fitness and is based on section 14 of the English Act. Sub-section (1) is based upon the judgment of Cockburn C J in Bigge v. Parkinson 31 L J Exch 301. In that case the learned Chief Justice said as follows —

"When a buyer buys a specific article, the rule Caveat Emptor applies but where the buyer orders goods to be supplied and trusts to the judgment of the seller to select the goods which shall be applicable for the purpose for which they are intended, which is known to both the parties though there is no express stipulation that they shall be fit for the purpose there is an implied warranty that they are fit for that purpose. There is no reason why such a warranty should not be implied in the case of a 'sale of provisions'."

Section 114 of the Indian Act is based on this principle. But the provisions of that section appear to have a narrower scope than clause (1) of section 14 of the English Act which has been followed in drafting the present clause.

Sub-section (1) also makes it clear that it is immaterial whether the seller is a manufacturer or producer or not. Thus it clears up the doubt which was raised by the decision in Parkinson v. Lee, (1802) 2 East 314. In that case it was held that the seller who was not a manufacturer was not liable for a latent defect. But this decision is no longer good law (vide Chalmers on Sales of Goods p 54 and Pollock and Mulla's Contract Act p 540 f n (2)). The proviso to sub-section (1) enacts the provisions in section 115 of the Indian Act.

"The proposition stated in sub-section (2) has been well established in England (Jones v. Just 1868 L R 34 Q B 197) and has been recognised also in India in two cases from Madras in which it was held that where goods were sold by description there was an implied warranty that the goods should be of

Notes.—Section 19 (1) and (2) follows section 17 of the English Act while clause 19 (3) and clauses 20 to 24 follow section 18. Section 19 is based on the principle of the English Law that the property may pass by the contract itself, if such be the intention of the parties (Chalmers Sale of Goods, ¶ 81). On this point there appears to be conflict of opinion in Indian Courts. Dealing with a

In a recent case the Bombay High Court was of opinion that Maclean C's view in the above case was unsound (Amies v Jal, 25 Bom L R 778). This conflict is due to the rigid terms of section 78 which fails to state that its provisions will be subject to the intention of the parties

Courts have worked out a series of definite rules for determining when the property is to be deemed to pass according to the imputed intention of the parties. These rules have been reproduced in section 18 of the English Act (Chalmers on Sale of Goods, pp 11 and 10) and they have been adopted in clauses 20 to 24. Section 19 (3) states the general propositions, that, unless a different intention appears the property passes in accordance with rules mentioned in section 20 or 24.—Report of the Special Committee

21 Where there is an unconditional contract for the sale of specific goods and the seller is bound to do something to the goods for the purpose of putting them into a deliverable state, the property does not pass until such thing is done and the buyer has notice thereof

Notes.—The section following rule 3 in section 18 of the English Act provides that the property does not pass unless the goods are put in a deliverable state. The same principle is laid down in section 80 of the Indian Act.—Report of the Special Committee. But this rule is not applicable where no such act is required or obligatory on the seller, as where the act is done merely for the satisfaction of the buyer (Swanwick v Sothorn, 9 Ad & El 895) or where the buyer is to do the act (Rugginett, 11 East 210; Turley v Bates, 2 H & C 200). (b) if he does not signify his approval or acceptance to the seller but retains the goods without giving notice of rejection then if a time has been fixed for the return of the goods on the expiration of such time and if no time has been fixed on the expiration of a reasonable time.

Notes—Section 24 relates to sale on approval and what is called in England Sale or return. Rule 24 of section 18 of the English Act relates to that subject when goods are sent on approval, the accepted rule is that there is not generally a completed sale until the buyer has—

(a) signified his approval which may be either expressly or by dealing with the goods as owner, or

(b) kept goods until the lapse of the prescribed or a reasonable time without giving notice of rejection.

(c) made return impossible by his own act or default as by letting the goods to be destroyed or spoilt (Pollock and Mulla's Contract Act, p 452). The above rule has been embodied in the English Act and we propose to follow the principle has been referred to in illustration an important principle should not be embodied in a specific clause. We also propose to omit section 85 of the Indian Act. The rule stated there is a rule of intention and depends on the question whether the contract is severable or non-severable (Halsbury's Laws of England vol 25 p 175).

25 (1) Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods or where goods are subsequently appropriated to the contract the seller may, by the terms of the contract or appropriation reserve the right of disposal of the goods until certain conditions are fulfilled. In such case, notwithstanding the delivery of the goods to a buyer, or to a carrier or other bailee for the purpose of transmission to the buyer the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until the conditions imposed by the seller are fulfilled.

(2) Where goods are shipped and by the bill of lading the goods are deliverable to the order of the seller or his agent, the seller is prima facie deemed to reserve the right of disposal.

(3) Where the seller of goods draws on the buyer for the price and transmits the bill of exchange and the bill of lading to the buyer together, to secure acceptance or payment of the bill of exchange, the buyer is bound to return the bill of lading if he does not honour the bill of exchange and if he wrongfully retains the bill of lading the property in the goods does not pass to him.

26 Unless otherwise agreed, the goods remain at the seller's risk until the property therein is transferred to the buyer, but when the property therein is transferred to the buyer, the goods are at the buyer's risk whether delivery has been made or not.

Provided that, where delivery has been delayed through the fault of either buyer or seller, the goods are at the risk of the party in fault as regards any loss which might not have occurred but for such fault.

Provided also that nothing in this section shall affect the duties or liabilities of either seller or buyer as a bailee of the goods of the other party.

27 Subject to the provisions of this Act and of any other law for the time being in force, where goods are sold by a person who is not the owner thereof and who does not sell them under the authority or with the consent of the owner, the buyer acquires no better title to the goods than the seller had unless the owner of the goods is by his conduct precluded from denying the seller's authority to sell.

Provided that, where a mercantile agent is, with the consent of the owner, in possession of the goods or of a document of title to the goods, any sale made by him, when acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent, shall be valid as if he were expressly authorised by the owner of the goods to make the same provided that the buyer acts in good faith and has not at the time of the contract of sale notice that the seller has not authority to sell

Notes — 'In England before the passing of the first three Factors Acts, being the Acts of 1823, 1825 and 1842, a person in possession of goods or documents of title could not dispose of these goods in contravention of his instructions with respect to them except where—

It will thus be seen that the provisions of the Factors Act referred to above were really an extension of the common law rule of estoppel

Under these Acts, the terms used were simply 'person' or 'agent' entrusted with the possession of goods but it was held that the Acts only applied to mercantile transactions, and that the term 'person' or 'agent' did not include a mere servant or one who had possession of goods for carriage, safe custody, or otherwise as an

'As to pledges by an apparent owner, the clause as drafted by them ran as

'A person who is in possession of goods or of any bill of lading, dock warrant, ware house keeper's certificate warrant for order for delivery, or any other document of title to goods may make a valid pledge of such goods or documents, provided that the pawnee acts in good faith and under circumstances which are not such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the pawner is acting improperly

This clause was retained by the Select Committee and it became subsequently section 78 of the Indian Act

‘It cannot be denied that the subject is difficult. We have to consider on one hand, the buyer’s right to recover what he has paid, and on the other, the seller’s right to be made whole. The balance of equitable consideration is, therefore, on the side of a rule favourable to the purchaser and we think that sound policy with respect to the interests of commerce points to the same conclusion.

‘We have therefore, provided that the ownership of goods may be acquired by buying them from any person who is in possession of them, if the buyer acts in good faith, and under circumstances which are not such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the person in possession has no right to sell them. Similar provisions have been inserted in accordance, we may observe, with the spirit of the Factors Act—to meet the cases of those who have purchased goods or taken them by way of pledge from persons in possession of any documentary title to the goods, where the circumstances are not such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the person in possession of the document has no right to sell or to pledge the goods.

‘It is clear from the above observations that the intention was that a buyer should acquire a good title to goods if he bought them from any person who was in possession of them if he acted in good faith. Though that was the intention of the Legislature, the Indian Courts have in some cases construed the word ‘possession both in sections 108 and 178 of the Indian Act to mean ‘juridical possession. In other cases however, it has been held that the word ‘possession is used in its literal meaning and that there is no warrant for qualifying it. (See Haji Rahimbox v. Central Bank, 1 L. R. 56 C. 367 where all the cases on the point are reviewed). The general trend however, of the decisions is to confine the operation of both the sections to juridical possession as in sales or pledges. Agents like factors, brokers, commission agents, etc., who attempt to sell or buy goods for others, are not to be regarded as having in the customary course of his business as such agent authority either to sell goods, or to consign goods for the purpose of sale, or to buy goods or to raise money on account of the principal, or to do any act which would bind the principal, unless he is authorised by the principal to do so.

‘In section 27 we have confined this power to me line with the English law. But the law of mercantile custom having regard to such sales by subsequent overt should be extended to this country.

‘We have specifically stated in the clause that a person buying goods from one who is not the owner thereof and who does not sell them with his consent acquires no better title to the goods than the seller had except in the two cases mentioned there in, one being where the buyer is a bona fide purchaser for value and the other where the goods are sold in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent.

The suggestions received on these two subjects may be divided into three clauses

"(1) The English law relating to sale in market overt should be introduced in British India, as it will relieve merchants of their anxiety when dealing with goods, especially in case of jewellery, ornaments, etc

"(2) The words at the end of clause 29 relating to offences should be deleted

"(3) A sale in a shop during business hours by the shop keeper or his servant should pass a valid title to a bona fide purchaser for value

"Further to be noted is that the English law is stated in Benjamin on or prescription on special days, but in the city of London every day except Sunday is a market day. In the country the only place, that is market overt is the particular spot of ground set apart by custom for the sale of particular goods, and this does not include shops, but in the City of London every shop in which goods are exposed publicly for sale is market overt for such goods as the owner openly professes to trade in. Market overt is 'an open' public and legally constituted market. The shop in London must be one in which goods are openly sold, that is, sold in the presence and sight of any one entering the shop.

"In London this custom is confined to shops in the city, it does not extend to the whole of the metropolitan area. It does not protect a sale in a shop outside in the City bounds, e.g., in Regent Street, nor a sale in a place within the City bounds which is not a shop, e.g., a public auction room. Ordinarily a sale by a co owner makes the buyer a joint owner with the other co owner (See also 11 B L R 193, Nyburg v Handellar, (1892) 2 Q B 202. Notes—This section enacts the provision of the exception 3 of the repealed section 103 of the Contract Act, on the lines of section 23 of the English Sale of Goods Act, 1923

"It is quite clear that when a vendee obtains possession of a chattel with the intention by the vendor to transfer both the property and possession, although the vendee has committed a false and fraudulent misrepresentation in order to effect the contract or obtain the possession, the property vests in the vendee until the vendor has done some act to disaffirm the contract and before the contract is rescinded. On this section the report of the Select Committee runs as follows —

The second suggestion is that the words at the end of clause 29 relating to offences should be deleted. The present law on the subject is contained in exception 3 of section 108 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, which is as follows —

'When a person has obtained possession of goods under a contract voidable at the option of the other party thereto the ownership of the goods is transferred to a third person who, before the contract is rescinded buys them in good faith of the person in possession, unless the circumstances which render the contract voidable amounted to an offence committed by the person in possession or those whom he represents

'The third suggestion is that a sale in a shop during business hours by a shop keeper or his servant should pass a valid title to a bona fide purchaser for value. Notes—The general rule is that the obligation of the seller to deliver and that of the buyer to pay are implied concurrent conditions in the nature of mutual conditions precedent, and that neither can enforce the contract against the other without ad willingness words 'unless f contracts been adopted Indian Act—

Concurrent condition—Because delivery and payment are to be made at the same time, so neither is a condition precedent to the other. All that is necessary is that the parties concur in the joint act Portage v Cole, 1 Wins Sand 1871, 551 Rawson v Jonson, 1 East 203. The words "ready and willing" imply not only the disposition, but the capacity to do the act. De Medina v Norman, (1842) 9 M & W 890, Lawrence v Knowles, 5 Bing N C 399; Measures v Measures, (1910) 2 Ch 248 C A Halsbury, vol 25, p 205

33 Delivery of goods sold may be made by doing anything which the parties agree shall be treated as delivery or which has the effect of putting the goods in the possession of the buyer or of any person authorised to hold them on his behalf.

Notes—This clause provides for the manner in which delivery of goods can be made and corresponds to section 90 of 'the Indian Act'. The words "which the parties agree shall be treated as delivery" have been added to make it clear that delivery may also be made by means of an act or thing which the parties agree shall be treated as delivery Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol 25, p. 206

Notes—"This section repeats the provisions of section 92 of the Indian Act. It affirms the English common law rule that the delivery of the part may be a delivery of the whole if it is so intended and agreed, but not otherwise (Pollock and Mulla's Contract Act p 489) in the absence of any contract to the contrary should be substituted for the expression 'apart from any express contract', and clauses 5, 36 (1) and 62 of the Bill were referred to. 36 (1) Whether it is for the buyer to take possession of the goods or for the seller to send them to the buyer is a question depending in each case on the contract, express or implied, between the parties. Apart from any such contract, goods sold are to be delivered at the place at which they are at the time of the sale, and goods agreed to be sold are to be delivered at the place at which they are at the time of the agreement to sell, or, if not then in existence, at the place at which they are manufactured or produced.

(2) Where under the contract of sale the seller is bound to send the goods to the buyer, but no time for sending them is fixed, the seller is bound to send them within a reasonable time.

(3) Where the goods at the time of sale are in the possession of a third person, there is no delivery by seller to buyer unless and until such third person acknowledges to the buyer that he holds the goods on his behalf.

The latter view was followed in Levy v Green, (1859) 1 E & E 959, (1861) 11 B & C 195, (1914) 110 L J 1001. The former view is now the law. The latter view would be section not the rule ought to apply where the seller omits or refuses to make a delivery. We have, therefore, inserted the words 'no delivery or' after the words 'the seller makes' in sub-clause (2).—Report of the Special Committee

(2) Unless otherwise authorised by the buyer, the seller shall make such contract with the carrier or wharfinger on behalf of the buyer as may be reasonable having regard to the nature of the goods and the other circumstances of the case. If the seller omits so to do, and the goods are lost or damaged in course of transit on which he is the owner, the wharfinger, the buyer or may deal with

buyer by a route involving sea transit, in circumstances in which it is usual to insure, the seller shall give such notice to the buyer as may enable him to insure them during their sea transit and if the seller fails so to do, the goods shall be deemed to be at his risk during such sea transit

Notes—'This clause is a combination of section 32 of the English Act and section 91 of the Indian Act. In England it has been well settled for more than a century that if a tradesman orders goods to be sent by a carrier who does not name any carrier, the moment a delivery to the purchaser is made, the goods are at his risk. See Manson, 3 B & P 582. Whatever was necessary to

to a wharfinger. In England there are special statutory provisions relating to wharfingers. As the rule as to wharfingers in section 92 has been in existence since 1872 in India, we consider it desirable to follow the English rule. In England there has been some difference of opinion as to the effect of section 32 (3) of f o b contracts. Balla, K B 279 and Hamilton L J in (1913) took the view that the goods were at the risk of the buyer from the time they were loaded on the ship and thereafter. As in f o b contracts, the view was taken above are of opinion that this view was correct. Appeal [see observations p 750-53]. The majority in Northern Steel Co v Jo has not been finally decided by a higher tribunal, we think it is desirable to retain the word 'sent' in sub-clause (3).—Report of the Special Committee

40 Where the seller of goods agrees to deliver them at his risk at a place other than that where they are when sold, the buyer shall, nevertheless, unless, otherwise agreed, take any risk of deterioration in the goods necessarily incident to the course of transit

Notes—"This section is based on section 33 of the English Act. It was pointed out in the committee that it was difficult to draw a line between the seller's and the buyer's risk on the seller's particular purpose.

41. (1) Where goods are delivered to the buyer which he has not previously examined he is not deemed to have accepted them unless and until he has had a reasonable opportunity of examining them opportunity of examining them for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are in conformity with the contract

(2) Unless otherwise agreed when the seller tenders delivery of goods to the buyer, he is bound on request, to afford the buyer a reasonable opportunity of examining the goods for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are in conformity with the contract

Notes.—This clause is based on section 34 of the English Act. The rules stated in both the clauses are common law rules (Benjamin on Sale pp 842 and 856). Sub clause (1) enacts the well established proposition that no acceptance can properly be said to have taken place until the buyer has had an opportunity of rejection.

"The rule stated in sub clause (2) is a corollary to the above rule and was applied in Isherwood v Whitmore 11 M & W 347. In that case the defendants, having received notice that the goods were at a certain wharf ready for delivery on payment of the price, went there, but on application closed casks said to contain them. It was given to the buyer to examine the goods. A valid offer of delivery. Although there is laying down the rule, the principle underlying it has been embodied in section 38 (2) of that Act. The rule has also been applied by Latham, J in a Bombay case in Ruttenssey v Jamnadas, 1 L R 6 Bom 692. The words unless otherwise agreed save special contracts.—Report of the Special Committee

42. The buyer is deemed to have accepted the goods when he intimates to the seller that he has accepted them, or when the goods have been delivered to him and he does any act in relation to them which is inconsistent with the ownership of the seller, or when, after the lapse of a reasonable time, he retains the goods without intimating to the seller that he has rejected them.

Notes.—This section is based on section 35 of the English Act and embodies the common law rule on this point—Report of the Special Committee. The question whether the buyer has accepted the goods only arises where the buyer has a right to reject [Perkins v Bell (1893) 1 Q B 193, Varby v Whipp, (1900) 1 Q B 513]. Notice of acceptance may be given by words of mouth or it may be in writing Abbott v Wolsey, (1895) 2 Q B 97 C A, see also Saunders v Topp, 4 Exch 390. As regards what acts are inconsistent with ownership of the seller vide Parker v Palmer, 4 B & Ald 387, Parker v Wallis, 5 E & B 21, Chapman v Morton, 11 M & W 534, Wallis v Pratt, (1911) A C 394. Delay in rejection and payment of the price gives rise to the presumption of acceptance Morrison v Clarkson 25 R (Ct of Sess) 427, see also A I R 1930 Lah 52. The time may be provided for by the contract [Sharp v Great Western Rail Co, (1881) 9 M & W 7] or may be implied by trade usage (Sanders v Jameson, 2 Car & K 557) Halsbury, vol 25 p 400.

43. Unless otherwise agreed, where goods are delivered to the buyer and he refuses to accept them, having the right so to do, he is not bound to return them to the seller but it is sufficient if he intimates to the seller that he refuses to accept them.

44. When the seller is ready and willing to deliver the goods and requests the buyer to take delivery, and the buyer does not within a reasonable time, he is liable to pay to the seller for any refusal to take delivery, and also for a reasonable charge for the care and custody of the goods.

This clause groups together in a convenient form the rights of an unpaid seller which are scattered over different sections in the Indian Act. Lien is provided for in sections 95 to 98, stoppage in transit in sections 100 to 106 and re-sale in section 107.

Unpaid seller's lien

47 (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the unpaid seller of goods who is in possession of them is entitled to retain possession of them until payment or tender of the price in the following cases, namely —

(a) where the goods have been sold without any stipulation as to credit,

(b) where the goods have been sold on credit, but the term of credit has expired,

(c) where the buyer becomes insolvent

(2) The seller may exercise his right of lien notwithstanding that he is in possession of the goods as agent or bailee for the buyer possession of the goods as an agent or arises in cases when the buyer becomes insolvent allowing the goods to remain in possession of the seller. There is no reported decision of any Indian Court on this point. The old common law rule was that though the goods may remain in possession of the seller, yet if it is agreed between the seller and the buyer that the former's possession shall thenceforth be that of a bailee for the buyer, and not that of the seller, the seller cannot exercise his lien. See Rattray (1861) 30 L. For English cases see Bunney v Poynts, 4 B & A 110; Yates 5 B & Ad 313; Re MacLaren, Ex parte Cooper, 11 C. B. 600. The fact that the goods are in the seller's own possession is important to show that a part delivery is not intended as a complete delivery. Miles v Gorton 2 Cr & M 504 (510)

49 (1) The unpaid seller of goods loses his lien thereon—

(a) when he delivers the goods to a carrier or other bailee for the purpose of transmission to the buyer without reserving the right of disposal of the goods,

50. Subject to the provisions of this Act, when the buyer of goods becomes insolvent, the unpaid seller who has parted with the possession of the goods has the right of stopping them in transit, that is to say, he may resume possession of the goods as long as they are in the course of transit, and may retain them until payment or tender of the price.

(4) If the goods are rejected by the buyer and the carrier or other bailee continues in possession of them, the transit is not deemed to be at an end, even if the seller has refused to receive them back

(5) When goods are delivered to a ship chartered by the buyer, it is a question depending on the circumstances of the particular case, whether they are in the possession of the master as a carrier or as agent of the buyer

(6) Where the carrier or other bailee wrongfully refuses to deliver the goods to the buyer or his agent in that behalf, the transit is deemed to be at an end

(7) Where part delivery of the goods has been made to the buyer or his agent in that behalf, the remainder of the goods may be stopped in transit, unless such part delivery has been given in such circumstances as to show an agreement to give up possession of the whole of the goods

52 (1) The unpaid seller may exercise his right of stoppage in transit either by taking actual possession of the goods, or by giving notice of his claim to the carrier or other bailee in whose possession the goods are. Such notice may be given either to the person in actual possession of the goods or to his principal. In the latter case the notice, to be effectual, shall be given at such time and in such circumstances that the principal, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, may communicate it to his servant or agent in time to prevent a delivery to the buyer.

(2) When notice of stoppage in transit is given by the seller to the carrier or other bailee in possession of the goods, he shall re-deliver the goods to, or according to the directions of the seller. The expenses of such re-delivery shall be borne by the seller.

Transfer by buyer and seller

53 (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the unpaid seller's right of lien or stoppage in transit is not affected by any sale or other disposition of the goods which the buyer may have made, unless the seller has assented thereto.

Provided that where a document of title to goods has been issued or lawfully transferred to any person as buyer or owner of the goods, and that person transfers the document to a person who takes the document in good faith and for consideration, then, if such last mentioned transfer was by way of sale, the unpaid seller's right of lien or stoppage in transit is defeated, and, if such last mentioned transfer was by way of pledge or other disposition for value, the unpaid seller's right of lien or stoppage in transit can only be exercised subject to the rights of the transferee.

Where the transfer is by way of pledge, the unpaid seller may require the Notes.—This clause is based on section 47 of the English Act. It relates to the effect of a sub-sale or a pledge of the goods sold by a buyer before he has paid the price. The first paragraph of sub-clause (1) combines the provisions of sections 98 and 101 of the Indian Act, sections 102 and 103 of the Indian Act refer to the transfer of a document of title by the buyer. That provision is contained in the proviso to sub-clause (1). The words 'having obtained' in section 102 of the Indian Act are not satisfactory. They may include the case where the buyer obtains the document tortuously. To exclude such cases 'the words 'having obtained' in the document transferred'. The controversy with respect to the words 'having obtained' in the document transferred' has been now set at rest by Chand, 1 L R 431 A 164. They have the same meaning as the words 'obtained' in the Factors Act of 1840 and include any writs and orders for the delivery of the goods. We have inserted the word, 'obtained' in the document transferred'.

"In sub-clause (2) we have inserted a provision to provide for the right of marshalling by an unpaid seller when the buyer of the documents of title. buyer of his intention to re sell, the unpaid seller may, if the buyer does not within a reasonable time pay or tender the price, re sell the goods within a reasonable time and recover from the original buyer damages for any loss occasioned by his breach of contract, but the buyer shall not be entitled to any profit which may occur on the re sale. If such notice is not given, the unpaid seller shall not be entitled to recover such damages and the buyer shall be entitled to the profit, if any, on the re sale.

(2) In default of such a notice the seller should have no right to claim any damages for loss or re sale from the buyer and should be under an obligation to pay over the profits if any, arising from the re sale to the purchaser

(3) Whether or not the requisite notice is given, the purchaser from a seller should get an absolute and clear title. This position underlies section 48, clause (2) of the English Act but the point is made clear in the Bill. In regard to the profits arising from the re sale, we have thought it right that the seller should be entitled to the profits in as much as the re sale is a result of a breach of contract on the part of the buyer. We have not overlooked the fact that this point is treated as doubtful in English Law. We have not attempted to define the word 'perishable' because the English decisions and text books make it clear what that word means. Vide Halsbury, vol 25 p 264, Benjamin on Sale p 1085 — Report of the Special Committee

MISCELLANEOUS

62 Where any right, duty or liability would arise under a contract of sale by implication of law, it may be negatived or varied by express agreement or by the course of dealing between the parties, or by usage if the usage is such as to bind both parties to the contract

Notes—"This clause is based on section 55 of English Act and is merely an application of the general maxim Expressum facit cessare tacitum and Modus et conventio vincunt legem The rule is well recognised in France also (see Chalmer's Sale of Goods p. 122) The sale is a contract and the parties may alter at general nature of the contract he passing of the English Act Lord Blackburn, discussing the said "There is no rule of law to say please—Report of the Special

Committee

63 Where in this Act any reference is made to a reasonable time, the question what is a reasonable time is a question of fact

Notes—"This clause relates to the import of the term 'reasonable time' On the lines of section 56 of the English Act, it is provided that it is a question of fact in each case The same provision exists in the explanation to section 46 of the Indian Act—Report of the Special Committee

Auction sale

64 In the case of a sale by auction—

(1) where goods are put up for sale in lots, each lot is prima facie deemed to be the subject of a separate contract of sale,

(2) the sale is complete when the auctioneer announces its completion by the fall of the hammer or in other customary manner, and until such announcement is made, any bidder may retract his bid,

(3) a right to bid may be reserved expressly by or on behalf of the seller and, where such right is expressly so reserved, but not otherwise, the seller or any one person on his behalf may, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, bid at the auction,

(4) where the sale is not notified to be subject to a right to bid on behalf of the seller, it shall not be lawful for the seller to bid himself or to employ any person to bid at such sale, or for the auctioneer knowingly to take any bid from the seller or any such person, and any sale contravening this rule may be treated as fraudulent by the buyer,

(5) the sale may be notified to be subject to a reserved or upset price,

(6) if the seller makes use of pretended bidding to raise the price, the sale is voidable at the option of the buyer

Notes—This section relates to auction sales. The provisions of sections 122 and 123 of the Indian Act are not exhaustive. We prefer to follow section 58 of the English Act but we have altered the arrangement of the different provisions to make them more clear. The order we have adopted is supported by the provisions of the Puffer's Act 1867 (30 and 31 V. c. 48). See also Halsbury, vol. 25, page 280. Sub clause (5) of this clause re-enacts the provisions of s. 123 of the Indian Act.—Report of the Special Committee

Repeal

65 Chapter VII of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is hereby repealed

Savings

66 (1) Nothing in this Act or in any repeal effected thereby shall affect or be deemed to affect—

(a) any right, title, interest, obligation or liability already acquired, accrued or incurred before the commencement of this Act, or

(b) any remedy in respect of any such right, title, the commencement of this Act, or of goods which is not expressly repealed by this Act, or

(c) any rule of law not inconsistent with this Act

(1) T. contracts for the sale of goods shall anything contained in this Act to contracts of sale do not apply to any transaction in the form of a contract of sale which is intended to operate by way of mortgage, pledge, charge or other security

Notes—This is a saving clause. Sub-clause (1) items (a) to (c) save in general terms all transactions made, proceedings taken and rights and liabilities arising before this Bill comes into operation. Item (d) of the sub-clause saves any Act relating to the sale of goods which has not been expressly repealed by this Bill. Thus such enactments as the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, or the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, which contain special provisions relating to the sale of goods are saved.

In clause 3 of the present Bill we have introduced an express provision that the provisions of the Indian Act which are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Bill shall continue to apply to contracts for the sale of goods. Thus the general Law of Contract as embodied in the Indian Act, has been made expressly applicable to contracts for the sale of goods.

9 If any person is dispossessed without his consent of immovable property otherwise than in due course of law, he or any person claiming through him may, by suit, recover possession thereof, notwithstanding any other title that may be set up in such suit

(c) A receives a letter addressed to him by B. B gets back the letter without A's consent. A has such a property therein as entitles him to recover it from B.

(d) A deposits books and papers for safe custody with B. B loses them and C finds them but refuses to deliver them to B when demanded. B may recover them from C subject to C's right, if any, under section 168 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

(a) when the thing claimed is held by the defendant as the agent or trustee of the claimant,

(b) when compensation in money would not afford the claimant adequate relief for the loss of the thing claimed,

(c) when it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the actual damage caused by its loss,

(d) when the possession of the thing claimed has been wrongfully transferred from the claimant.

OF THE SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACTS

(a) Contracts which may be specifically enforced

Cases in which specific performance enforceable: 12 Except as otherwise provided in this Chapter, the specific performance of any contract may in the discretion of the Court be enforced—

(a) when the act agreed to be done is in the performance, wholly or partly of a trust,

(b) when there exists no standard for ascertaining the actual damage caused by the non performance of the act agreed to be done,

(c) when the act agreed to be done is such that pecuniary compensation for its non performance would not afford adequate relief, or

(d) when it is probable that pecuniary compensation cannot be got for the non performance of the act agreed to be done.

Explanation—Unless and until the contrary is proved, the Court shall presume that the breach of a contract to transfer immovable property cannot be adequately relieved by compensation in money, and that the breach of a contract to transfer immovable property can be thus relieved.

cannot be adequately compensated for by money, and the Court may appoint a proper person to superintend the construction of the archway, road, siding and wharf.

A contracts to sell and B contracts to buy, a certain number of railway shares of a particular description. A refuses to complete the sale. B may compel A specifically to perform this agreement, for the shares are limited in number and not always to be had in the market and their possession carries with it the status of a shareholder which cannot otherwise be procured.

A contracts with B to paint a picture for C who agrees to pay therefor Rs. 1,000. The picture is painted. B is entitled to have it delivered to him on payment or tender of the Rs. 1,000.

of clause (d)—A transfers without endorsement, but for valuable consideration, a promissory note to B. A becomes insolvent and C is appointed his assignee. B may compel C to endorse the note, for C has succeeded to A's liabilities and a decree for pecuniary compensation for not endorsing the note would be fruitless.

Specific performance—of any contract may, in the discretion of the Court, be enforced when the Act agreed to be done is such that pecuniary compensation for its non performance would not afford adequate relief. (U. B. R. 1897 1907 Vol II 539). The Courts are reluctant to refuse specific performance for unilateral mistake alone. 7 Bom. L. R. 319. The provisions of ss. 12 and 21 (a) of the Act contemplate a relief in specie, that is, the performance of a specific act or the delivery of particular articles, and not the payment of money, unless the contract is for the delivery of particular coins. 4 Rang. 227=97 Ind. Cas. 1032.

Suit for execution of a fresh bond—A suit is not maintainable for the execution of fresh bond for money, where the original bond handed over to the defendant for registration is either withheld or destroyed by him. 5 A. 44.

A suit by a mortgagee to obtain possession of property on failure of payment of interest in accordance with the terms of the deed is not a suit for specific performance within the meaning of this section. 10 O. C. 218.

Where pecuniary compensation was adequate relief a suit for injunction was dismissed. 11 Ind. Cas. 807.

Sale of land—In case of contract to sell land there is nothing to prevent the Court from decreeing specific performance of the contract. 27 Ind. Cas. 732.

14 Where a party to a contract is unable to perform the whole of his part of it, but the part which must be left unperformed bears only a small proportion to the whole in value, and admits of compensation in money, the Court may, at the suit of either party, direct the specific performance of so much of the contract as can be performed, and award compensation in money for the deficiency.

(a) A contracts to sell B a piece of land consisting of 100 bighas. It turns out that 98 bighas of the land belong to A, and the two remaining bighas to a stranger, who refuses to a part with them. The two bighas are not necessary for the use or enjoyment of the 98 bighas, nor so important for such use or enjoyment that the loss of them may not be made good in money. A may be directed at the suit of B, to convey to B the 98 bighas and to make compensation to him for not conveying the two remaining bighas, or B may be directed, at the suit of A, to pay to A on receipt of the land the stipulated purchase money less the furniture valued in the suit and include it in the decree for specific performance or may confine its decree to the house.

Notes.—A agreed to sell land included in a sale proclamation, a portion of which was subsequently sold. Held that specific performance cannot be enforced. 10 Ind Cas 678.

15 Where a party to a contract is unable to perform the whole of his part of it, and the part which must be left unperformed forms a considerable portion of the whole or does not admit of compensation in money, he is not entitled to obtain a decree for specific performance. But the Court may, at the suit of the other party, direct the party in default to perform specifically so much of his part of the contract as he can perform provided that the plaintiff relinquishes all claim to further performance, and all right to compensation, either for the deficiency, or for the loss or damage sustained by him through the default of the defendant.

(b) A contracts to sell to B an estate with a house and garden for a lakh of rupees. The garden is important for the enjoyment of the house. It turns out that A is unable to convey the garden. (c) Of the Discretion of the Court

22 The jurisdiction to decree specific performance is discretionary and Discretion is to decreeing the Court is not bound to grant such relief specific performance merely because it is lawful to do so, but the discretion of the Court is not arbitrary but sound and reasonable, guided by judicial principles and capable of correction by a Court of appeal

The following are cases in which the Court may properly exercise a discretion not to decree specific performance —

I Where the circumstances under which the contract is made are such as to give the plaintiff an unfair advantage over the defendant though there may be no fraud or misrepresentation on the plaintiff's part

(d) A's property is put up to auction B requests C A's attorney to bid for it C does this inadvertently and in good faith The persons present seeing the vendor's attorney bidding think that he is a mere passer and cease to complete The lot is knocked down to B at a low price Specific performance of the contract should be refused to B

II Where the performance of the contract would involve some hardship on the defendant which he did not foresee, whereas its non performance would involve no such hardship on the plaintiff

(e) A is entitled to some land under his father's Will on condition that if he sells it within twenty five years, half the purchase money shall go to B. A, forgetting the condition, contracts, before the expiration of the twenty five years, to sell the land to C. Here the enforcement of the contract would operate so harshly on A, that the Court will not compel its specific performance in favour of C.

(f) A and B, trustees, join the beneficiary, C in a contract to sell the trust estate to D, and personally agree to exonerate the estate from heavy incumbrances to which it is subject. The purchase money is not nearly enough to discharge those incumbrances though, at the date of the contract the vendors believed it to be sufficient. Specific performance of the contract should be refused to D.

(g) A contracts to sell to B a valuable contract.

A not make the road without the part of the contract it may be held that he is liable for loss of the road that at any time during the lease he is to take the machinery and the articles specified in his notice delivered to him at a valuation on the expiry of the lease. Such a contract might be most injurious to the lessee's business, and specific performance of it should be refused to B.

The contract is silent as to access to exist. Specific performance of factory, and not elsewhere all the goods of a certain class used by A in his trade. The Court cannot compel B to supply the goods, but if he does not supply them A may be ruined, unless he is allowed to buy them elsewhere. Specific performance of the contract should be refused to B.

The following is a case in which the Court may properly exercise its discretion to decree specific performance —

III Where the plaintiff has done substantial acts or suffered losses in consequence of a contract capable of specific performance

A sells land to a railway company, who contract to execute certain works for his convenience. The company take the land and use it for their railway. Specific performance of the contract to execute the works should be decreed in favour of A.

A Court of Equity for a narrow prompt and eager this section but the first section must be read as a section which points out that it is not intended to be which is embodied in the 234, 14 E. L. J. 672 = 10 Ind. Cas. 503. In every suit for specific performance Courts of Equity have a free discretion limited only by those general principles which require all Courts of Justice to act in accordance with sound judicial principles and not upon mere caprice and sentiment. What the Court has to look to is whether in the exercise of its discretion the agreement is one, which ought to be specifically enforced having regard to this whether enforcing the contract would not inflict more injury upon the defendant than confer benefit on the plaintiff. 17 Bom. L. R.

303=40B 60, see also 98 Ind. Cas 193 Delay in instituting a suit for specific performance is not fatal to the suit, unless it can be shown that the delay has in any way prejudiced the defendant 17 Ind Cas 399, 22 M. L. J 518 But under certain circumstances delay is fatal 37 Ind Cas 776

Hardship—Decree for specific performance should be refused when it will involve hardship on one of the parties. 10 A L J 493=17 Ind Cas 732. A contract may be perfectly valid according to the Contract Act, but there may be want of equality or fairness in the contract, which will entitle a Court of Equity to refuse specific performance even though there be no actual fraud. The fairness of the contract has to be gathered not merely from the terms of the contract but also from the surrounding circumstances. 18 C W N 689.

Delay — The granting of a decree for specific performance is discretionary, and he who asks for it must show that he has acted with diligence and good conscience. If he delays in asking for it till just before his suit would be barred by limitation he is not entitled to an exercise of the discretion in his favour. 58 Ind. Cas. 23. But mere delay in instituting suit for specific performance is not sufficient to defeat the plaintiff's suit. It must be of a character to give rise to an inference of the abandonment of the right or should disclose any prejudice to the defendant. 4 Pat. L. W. 192. Delay which leads to the inference of waiver is fatal to such suits. 57 F. R. 1919; see also 23 M. L. J. 518, 17 Ind. Cas. 399, 37 Ind. Cas. 776; 15 S. L. R. 21; 24 Bom. L. R. 434.

Clause (b)—Where rights originate in contract, Court must decide whether it was the intention of the promisor to make the contract personal to the promisee. Personal quality mentioned in this clause need not necessarily be restricted to particular skill or learning but may include anything peculiar to a man or his descendants which would entitle them to special favour at the hands of the contracting parties. 42 B 344—20 Bom L R 654. In case of contract of repurchase the vendor's heir can exercise the right. 1 L R 25, see also 7 C W N 229 and 30 C 265.

(e) For whom Contracts cannot be specifically enforced.

Personal bar to the relief. 24 Specific performance of a contract cannot be enforced in favour of a person—

- (a) who could not recover compensation for its breach;
- (b) who has become incapable of performing, or violates, any essential terms of the contract that on his part remains to be performed,
- (c) who has already chosen his remedy, and obtained satisfaction for the breach, or
- who has obtained (by agreement or otherwise) notice that a settlement of the contract (for a valuable consideration) had been made and was then in force.

2. A, holding land, contracts to let to B a house on the land in accordance with the contract. B refuses to perform the contract. A thereupon sues for, and obtains, compensation for the breach. A cannot obtain specific performance of the contract.

3. A contracts to let to B a house on his land. B refuses to perform the contract. A thereupon sues for, and obtains, compensation for the breach. A cannot obtain specific performance of the contract.

4. A contracts to let to B a house on his land. B refuses to perform the contract. A thereupon sues for, and obtains, compensation for the breach. A cannot obtain specific performance of the contract.

25 A contract for the sale or letting of property, whether movable, or immovable, cannot be specifically enforced in favour of a vendor or lessor—

- (a) who, knowing himself not to have any title to the property, has contracted to sell or let the same,

(b) who, though he entered into the contract believing that he had a good title to the property, cannot, at the time fixed by the parties or by the Court for the completion of the sale or letting, give the purchaser or lessee a title free from reasonable doubt ;

(c) who, previous to entering into the contract, has made a settlement (though not founded on any valuable consideration) of the subject matter of the contract.

Illustrations

(a) A, without C's authority, contracts to sell to B an estate which A knows to belong to C. A cannot enforce specific performance of this contract, even though C is willing to confirm it.

(b) A bequeaths his land to trustees, declaring that they may sell it with the consent in writing of B. B gives a general prospective assent in writing to any sale which the trustees may make. The trustees then enter into a contract with C to sell him the land. C refuses to carry out the contract. The trustees cannot specifically enforce this contract, as in the absence of B's consent to the particular sale to C, the title which they can give C is, as the law stands, not free from reasonable doubt.

(f) For whom Contracts cannot be specifically enforced, except with a variation

26. Where a plaintiff seeks specific performance of a contract in writing, to which the defendant sets up a variation, the plaintiff cannot obtain the performance sought, except with the variation so set up, in the following cases (namely) —

(a) where by fraud or mistake of fact the contract of which performance is sought is in terms different from that which the defendant supposed it to be when he entered into it ;

(b) where by fraud, mistake of fact, or surprise the defendant entered into the contract under a reasonable misapprehension as to its effect as between himself and the plaintiff ;

(c) where the defendant, knowing the terms of the contract and understanding its effect, has entered into it relying upon some misrepresentation by the plaintiff, or upon some stipulation on the plaintiff's part, which adds to the contract, but which he refuses to fulfil ;

(d) where the object of the parties was to produce a certain legal result, which the contract as framed is not calculated to produce ;

(e) where the parties have, subsequently to the execution of the contract, contracted to vary it.

(b) A sues B to compel specific performance of a contract in writing to buy a dwelling house. It proves that he assumed that the contract included an adjoining yard and the contract was so framed as to leave it doubtful whether the yard was so included or not. The Court will refuse to enforce the contract, except with the land of the same dimensions, and to this A expressly assented. B then signed the written contract. A cannot obtain specific performance of the written contract, except with the variation set up by B.

(d) A and B enter into negotiations for the purpose of securing land for B for his life with remainder to his issue. They execute a contract the terms of which are or a certain term, at the rent of repair. The house turns out to be down, and erects a new house in 120 per mensem. B then sues to enforce specific performance of the contract in writing. He cannot enforce it except with the variations made by the subsequent oral contract.

Notes.—The principle of English Law that fresh consideration is necessary for a new contract after the breach of the prior one does not apply to India. 29 M. L. J. 125.

(g) Against whom Contracts may be specifically enforced

27 Except as otherwise provided by this Chapter, specific performance of a contract may be enforced against—

(a) either party thereto,
(b) any other person claiming under him by a title arising subsequently to the contract, except a transferee for value who has paid his money in good faith and without notice of the original contract;

(c) a person who, after a title which, though prior to the contract, has been displaced by the defendant, has entered into a contract, and subsequently becomes amalgamated with another public company, the new company which arises out of the amalgamation;

(e) when the promoters of a public company have, before its incorporation, entered into a contract, the company provided that the company has ratified and adopted the contract, and the contract is warranted by the terms of the incorporation.

OF THE RECTIFICATION OF INSTRUMENTS

31 When, through fraud or a mutual mistake of the parties, a contract or other instrument in writing does not truly express their intention either party, or his representative in interest, may institute a suit to have the instrument rectified, and if the Court find it clearly proved that there has been fraud or mistake in framing the instrument, and ascertain the real intention of the parties in executing the same, the Court may, in its discretion rectify the instrument so as to express that intention, so far as this can be done without prejudice to rights acquired by third persons in good faith and for value

Contract.—The use of the word contract in s. 31 is apt to mislead. What the Court has to rectify is the instrument to do which it has jurisdiction to ascertain what the real contract was. If that is established then the instrument purporting to embody it may be rectified 5 Bom L R 583.

32 For the purpose of rectifying a contract in writing the Court must be satisfied that all the parties thereto intended to make an equitable and conscientious agreement.

Presumption as to intent of parties

- 33 In rectifying a written instrument, the Court may inquire what the Principles of rectification instrument was intended to mean, and what were intended to be its legal consequences, and is not confined to the inquiry what the language of the instrument was intended to be

ON THE RESCISSION OF CONTRACTS

- 35 * Any person interested in a contract in writing* may sue to have it rescinded, and such rescission may be adjudged by the Court in any of the following cases namely —
- When rescission may be ad judged

- (a) where the contract is voidable or terminable by the plaintiff,
- (b) where the contract is unlawful for causes not apparent on its face and the defendant is more to blame than the plaintiff,
- (c) where a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale or of a contract to take a lease, has been made, and the purchaser or lessee makes default in payment of the purchase money or other sums which the Court has ordered him to pay.

When the purchaser or lessee is in possession of the subject matter and the Court finds that such possession is wrongful the Court may also order him to pay to the vendor or lessor the rents and profits, if any, received by him as such possessor.

In the same case the Court may, by order in the suit in which the decree has been made and not complied with, rescind the contract, either so far as regards the party in default, or altogether, as the justice of the case may require.

38 On adjudging the rescission of a contract, the Court may require the party to whom such relief is granted to make any compensation to the other which justice may require

CHAPTER VI OF DECLARATORY DECREES

42 Any person entitled to any legal character, or to any right as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying, or interested to deny, his title to such character or right, and the Court may in its discretion, make therein a declaration that he is so entitled and the plaintiff need not in such suit ask for any further relief.

Discretion of Court as to declaration of status or right
Bar to such declaration
 Provided that no Court shall make any such declaration where the plaintiff, being able to seek further relief than a mere declaration of title, omits to do so.

(h) A B's wife and her children, if C B has a putative wife D fully married D and her children, may, in a suit, institute a suit against C and obtain therein a declaration that they are truly the wife and children of B.

Scope—This section does not sanction every form of declaration but only a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to a specific legal character or right as to property. 18 C W N 106. The right to sue for a declaration of a right of a reversioner to a property is not binding on the present legal right ;

after the death of the testator, that his Will is void 36 Ind Cas 95. A suit by a reversioner that after the death of the widow he is entitled to succeed is not maintainable 44 M 1. The policy of the legislature is to prevent the property taken away from the plaintiff peacefully, in other words, he is entitled to seek the declaration of a right of a reversioner to a property is not binding on the present legal right ;

A Court will not grant a declaration of plaintiff's right to an unknown and uncertain share in joint property 40 C L J 30=82 Ind Cas 392 ; see also 1974 P 706. A person claiming under an invalid gift is not entitled to a declaration of his title 2 Pat L R 273.

The object of the section is really to perpetuate and strengthen the testimony regarding the title of the plaintiff so that adverse attacks upon it may not weaken it. The policy of the legislature is to prevent the property taken away from the plaintiff peacefully, in other words, he is entitled to seek the declaration of a right of a reversioner to a property is not binding on the present legal right ;

This section is intended to provide a remedy only where no other remedy exists. A W N 1885 176. An improper or irregular exercise of the discretionary power conferred on a Court by this section does not in itself constitute a sufficient ground for the reversal of a decree which is not open to any objection upon the ground of jurisdiction or of the merits of the rights of the parties 9. A suit has been instituted or to dismiss without prejudice of its process 28 L J 111. A suit should not be held to be a good ground for refusing relief under this section 21 M 42. Where a suit under this section has been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff is not in possession, it will not bar a subsequent suit for recovery of possession under s 43 of the Civil Procedure Code 14 A 512. Where the property is in possession of the Collector under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a suit under this section by a party to the proceeding is competent 15 C W N 758. Under this section any person whose title to any right as to any property is denied can sue for a declaration of his title if he does not omit to seek further relief which he may be able to ask 15 B 309. A suit for the declaration of an abstract right cannot be maintained 7 Ind Cas 318. A person who claims title as well as possession is not allowed to have a declaration for possession only. 48 P R 1892, 80 Ind. Cas 544.

This section will not grant relief to any plaintiff who claims declaration by virtue of his possession against a person who has no title 12 P R 1888 (F. B).

Where there is no denial of right no suit for declaration would lie Bom L R 283. If any person has thrown a cloud in plaintiff's title by recovering rent decrees against his tenants he can sue under this section 14 C W N 576. OF THE ENFORCEMENT OF PUBLIC DUTIES

45 Any of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, Bombay and Rangoon may make an order requiring any specific act to be done or forbore, within the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, by any person holding a public office, whether of a permanent or a temporary nature, or by any corporation or inferior Court of Judicature

Provided—

(a) that an application for such order be made by some person whose property franchise or personal right, would be injured by the the forbearing or doing (as the case may be) of the said specific act,

(b) that such doing or forbearing is, under any law for the time being in force, clearly incumbent on such person or Court in his or its public character, or on such corporation in its corporate character,

* The words within quotations have been inserted by Act XI of 1923.

(c) that in the opinion of the High Court such doing or forbearing is consonant to right and justice,

(d) that the applicant has no other specific and adequate legal remedy, and

(e) that the remedy given by the order applied for will be complete

Exemptions from such power Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any High Court—

(f) to make any order binding on the Secretary of State for India in Council, on the Governor General in Council, on the Governor of Madras in Council, on the Governor of Bombay in Council, or on "the Governor in Council of Fort William in Bengal" or "on the Governor of Burma in Council" †

(g) to make any order on any other servant of the Crown, as such merely to enforce the satisfaction of a claim upon the Crown, or

(h) to make any order which is otherwise expressly excluded by any law for the time being in force

Principle—The exceptional remedy provided by this section being discretionary has to be exercised with caution. The only right to be enforced must be clear and obligatory. The first condition is that there should exist a personal right and injury to that right must be threatened. The right must be one personal to the individual in seeking the remedy and not a right in rem such as belong to the community at large in the question to be tried. Temporary injunctions They may be granted at any period of a suit, and are regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure *
A perpetual injunction can only be granted by the decree made at the hearing and upon the merits of the suit the Perpetual injunctions defendant is thereby perpetually enjoined from the assertion of a right or from the commission of an act, which would be contrary to the rights of the plaintiff

Notes—This section defines the mode in which perpetual injunction can be granted 31 C L J 759

CHAPTER X OF PERPETUAL INJUNCTIONS

54 Subject to the other provisions contained in, or referred to by, this Chapter, a perpetual injunction may be granted
Perpetual injunctions when granted to prevent the breach of an obligation existing in favour of the applicant, whether expressly or by implication

When such obligation arises from contract, the Court shall be guided by the rules and provisions contained in Chapter II of this Act

When the defendant invades or threatens to invade the plaintiff's right to, or enjoyment of property, the Court may grant a perpetual injunction in the following cases (namely) —

- (a) where the defendant is trustee of the property for the plaintiff,
- (b) where there exists no standard for ascertaining the actual damage caused, or likely to be caused, by the invasion,
- (c) where the invasion is such that pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief,
- (d) where it is probable that pecuniary compensation cannot be got for the invasion,
- (e) where the injunction is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings.

Scope—In order to entitle a litigant to a perpetual injunction, he must establish
 (1) prevent a breach of an obligation. The term
 (2) includes every duty enforceable by law, so that when
 (3) person in respect to another that other is invested
 The first para of s 54 establishes the broad and general rule, that given the breach of an existing legal right, which is vested in the applicant, the breach thereof may be restrained by the injunction. This section and section 56 are to be read as supplementing each other. The former defines the circumstances under which perpetual injunction may be granted, the latter enumerates the cases where an injunction must not be granted. The right to an injunction cannot be determined independently of the provisions of this section and s 56 by reference to the terms of s 53. Scope—In order to entitle a litigant to a perpetual injunction, he must establish that the injunction is required to prevent a breach of an obligation. The term includes every duty enforceable by law, so that when a person in respect to another that other is invested with a legal right.

The first para of s 54 establishes the broad and general rule, that given the breach of an existing legal right, which is vested in the applicant, the breach thereof may be restrained by the injunction. This section and section 56 are to be read as supplementing each other. The former defines the circumstances under which perpetual injunction may be granted; the latter enumerates the cases where an injunction must not be granted. The right to an injunction cannot be determined independently of the provisions of this section and s 56 by reference to the terms of s 53. of a business. A then sets up a similar business and solicits the old customers to deal with him. This may obtain an injunction to restrain A from soliciting the customers, and from doing any act whereby their goodwill may be withdrawn from B.

= 16 P W. R. 1910, 102 P R 1895. A penal clause in the agreement can not be considered separately, as constituting a bond but simply as one of the several subsidiary clauses making up the whole agreement, and the document is only chargeable as an agreement 2 A 654 (F B), but see 9 A 585, 11 C 284. An instrument otherwise properly stamped does not become two instruments for purposes of stamp for the simple reason that it is executed by two persons A W N 1884 318. This section relates only to transactions so distinct in their nature as to be capable of being carried out by two or more instruments instead of one 8 C 254 = 10 C L R 33. It is not competent for several persons who are unconnected and have no common interest in a property to execute a single power of attorney in respect thereof 2 M L J 988 (F B). Where the consideration of a lease consisted partly of rent to be paid each month and partly of a sum equal to a month's rent paid in advance and to be repaid at the end of the lease, the instrument was not to be regarded as dealing with the two distinct matters but as relating to one matter.

(b) in the case of instruments stamped with impressed stamps—the number of stamps which may be used,

Notes—A promissory note for Rs 4 300 written on an impressed hundi paper for Rs 3 was correctly stamped and did not contravene rules framed under the Stamp Act. The rules under s 9 of the Stamp Act (1 of 1879) require that a document such as above must be written on an impressed sheet to render it compulsory that promissory notes chargeable with a duty of 6, 10 or 12 annas must be written on a hundi paper, but that does not imply any prohibition against other promissory notes also being so written, as the hundi papers are also impressed sheets. 14 M 32. THE INDIAN SUCCESSION ACT, 1925

RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL ON THE 30TH SEPTEMBER, 1925.

An Act to consolidate the law applicable to intestate and testamentary succession in British India.

... able to intestate and
... ed as follows:—
Indian Law relating to succession. The separate existence on the statute book of a number of large and important enactments renders the present law difficult of ascertainment and there is, therefore, every justification for an attempt to consolidate it. The Bill has been prepared by the Statute Law Revision Committee as a purely consolidating measure.
No intentional change of the law has therefore been made.—Statement of Objects and Reasons. "Many of the opinions elicited on circulation of the Bill involved

PRELIMINARY

Short title

1 [SUC S 1] This Act may be called the Indian Succession Act, 1925

Definitions

2 [SUC S 2] In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context—

(a) "administrator" means a person appointed by competent authority to administer the estate of a dece

(b) "codicil" means an explaining, altering or adding to part of the Will.

provisions which are derived from that Act. The term 'exempted person' is a drafting device which enables the language of the Bill to be shortened.—Notes on Clauses

Notification—Notification under section 332 of Act X of 1865 at the appellate stage of a case did not apply where there had been already a decision of a competent Court. 20 C W N 1082=1 Pat L J 225=36 Ind Cas 206

OF DOMICILE

Application of Part
Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina

4 [SUC S 331] This part shall not apply if the deceased was a Hindu Muhammadan

Notes—It is well settled that the word 'Hindu' in section 331 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865 and in section 2 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881 includes Jainas and Sikhs (cf 31 C 11, etc.) and as the Hindu Wills Act 1870 which the Bill consolidates makes special mention of Sikhs and Jainas they are separately mentioned throughout the Bill. This and other similar sections may need to be qualified if and when the Special Marriage (Amendment) Bill which has just been passed by the Indian Legislature, becomes law.—Notes on Clauses

Law regulating succession to deceased person's immovable and movable property respectively

5 [SUC S 5] (1) Succession to the immovable property in British India of a person deceased shall be regulated by the law of British India wherever such person may have had his domicile at the time of his death

(2) Succession to the movable property of a person deceased is regulated by the law of the country in which such person had his domicile at the time of his death

Illustrations

(1) A, having his domicile in British India, dies in France, leaving movable property in France, movable property in England, and property both movable and immovable, in British India. The succession to the whole is regulated by the law of British India

(2) A, having his domicile in France, dies in British India, leaving movable property in France, movable property in England, and property both movable and immovable, in British India. The succession to the whole is regulated by the law of British India

India

(3) A, having his domicile in France, dies in British India, leaving movable property in France, movable property in England, and property both movable and immovable, in British India. The succession to the whole is regulated by the law of British India

One domicile only affects succession to movables

6 [SUC S 6] A person can have only one domicile for the purpose of the succession to his movable property

Notes—This section is based upon the leading case of Sommerville v Lord Somerville 5 Ves 750. Mr Jacob says that the decided cases clearly establish the principle that for whatever purposes a person might have more than one domicile, he can have but one for the purposes of succession. White v Brown 1 Wallace J

(U S Cir Court), Gilman v Gilman, 25 Maine, 165 A person may have one domicile for the purpose of testate or intestate succession and another domicile for all other purposes Dacey's Conflict of Law, 2nd Ed p 98

7 [SUC S 7] The domicile of origin of every person of legitimate birth is in the country in which at the time of his birth his father was domiciled, or, if he is a posthumous child, in the country in which his father was domiciled at the time of the father's death

Illustration

At the time of the birth of A, his father was domiciled in England. A's domicile of origin is in England whatever may be the country in which he was born

Domicile of origin—Every person receives at birth a domicile known as 104, Udney v Udney 1 H L Sc 451, Little-mate children acquire by birth the domicile y 341, Carolina v Pinto 41 H 687, 18 Bom 15

domicile of origin acquires until another intention to remain Story's Conflict of L is changed during infancy by a change of cannot be regarded as the infant's domicile Ch 180

Domicile of origin of illegitimate child
domiciled

8 [SUC S 8] The domicile of origin of an illegitimate child is in the country in which, at the time of the birth, his mother was

Notes—No person should be without a domicile and to secure this end the law attributes to every individual as soon as he is born the domicile of his of his mother if the child is Idney v H L 451 (457), see v Crispin L R 1 P & D Butterfield, 37 Ch D 357

Continuance of domicile of origin

9 [SUC S 9] The domicile of origin prevails until a new domicile has been acquired a man's birth and connections' Per Lord Alvanley in Somerville v Somerville 5 Ves 750 (787), see also Bell v Kennedy, L R 1 H L So 307, Dalhousie v M'Donell 1 Cl & F 817

Acquisition of new domicile : 10 [SUC S 10] A man acquires a new domicile by taking up his fixed habitation in a country which is not that of his domicile of origin

Explanation—A man is not to be deemed to have taken up his fixed habitation in British India merely by reason of his residing there in His Majesty's civil "military", "naval" or "air force" service, or in the exercise of any profession or calling

Illustrations

(i) A, whose domicile of origin is in England, proceeds to British India where he settles as a barrister or a merchant intending to reside there during the remainder of his life. His domicile is now in British India

residence in his own country, and this fictitious situation is applied not only to the person of the minister, but to his family and suite, secretaries of legation and other secretaries, servants, movable effects and the house in which he resides—Foot's International Jurisprudence, p 167

Continuance of new domicile 13 [Sue S 13] A new domicile continues until the former domicile has been resumed or another has been acquired.

Notes—A domicile once acquired remains until a new one is acquired elsewhere facto et animo Story's Conflict of Law, s 471 A new domicile can be abandoned either by acquiring another domicile or by mere latter case the domicile of origin revives But a done unless and until a new one is acquired Alvanley in Somerville v Somerville, 5 Ves approval by Sir C Cresswell in Crokenden v Fuller domicile is to prevail until the party has not only ted and carried into execution an intention of abandoning his former domicile and taking another as his sole domicile—Foot's International Law, p 55

Minor's domicile 14. [Sue S 14] The domicile of a minor follows the domicile of the parent from whom he derives his domicile of origin

Exception—The domicile of a minor does not change with that of his parent if the minor is married or holds any office or employment in the service of His Majesty, or has set up, with the consent of the parent, in any distinct business.

Notes—A minor is generally incapable of changing his domicile during his minority During minority his domicile follows that of his father If the father dies during his minority the last domicile of the father is the domicile of the infant Story's Conflict of Law, § 46) If a man at the time he attains his majority is of unsound mind or remains in that state continuously up to the time of his death, the incapacity of minority never having been followed by adult capacity, will continue to confer upon the father the right of choice in the matter of domicile of his son and a change of domicile by the father will usually produce a similar change of domicile as regards his lunatic son Williams on Executor, p 1263 Mr Westlake points out that a married minor must be regarded as sui juris for the purposes of domicile since on his or her marriage a new home is founded—Foot's P I Law, 53

Domicile acquired by woman on marriage 15 [Sue S 15] By marriage a woman acquires the domicile of her husband, if she had not the same domicile before

Notes—Marriage means actual marriage not an unlawful marriage, or mere betrothal Burge, 35 cited by Stokes, ¶ 2 But see Turner v Thompson, 13 P D 27 here the marriage is voidable

Wife's domicile during marriage 16 [Sue S 16.] A wife's domicile during her marriage follows the domicile of her husband

Exception—The wife's domicile no longer follows that of her husband if they are separated by the sentence of a competent Court, or if the husband is undergoing a sentence of transportation

Notes—In certain cases, without reference to intention be perhaps more correct to s presumption of intention, which mon example of this principle is the rule that a woman assumes on her marriage the domicile of her husband Bremer v Freeman, 10 Moo P.C 306

Minor's acquisition of new domicile 17 [Sue S 17.] Save as herein before otherwise provided in this Part, a person cannot during minority, acquire a new domicile

Notes—Legitimate children acquire by birth the domicile of their father Forbes v Forbes, Kay, 341 An infant cannot change his domicile Ibid

Lunatics acquisition of new domicile 18 [uc S 13] An insane person cannot acquire a new domicile in any other way than by his domicile following the domicile of another person

Notes—If a man of unsound mind attains majority his domicile will follow that of his father if he is legitimate and of his mother if he is illegitimate Sharpe v Crisper, L R 1 P & D 611, Urquhart v Butterfield, 47 Ch D 356 But if he attains majority and then becomes insane it is clear that his domicile will be what it was at the time when he became insane The only exception to this appears to be the case of a feme covert because a wife cannot acquire a domicile separate and distinct from her husband Dalhousie v Mc Donall, 7 C & F 817

Succession to movable property in British India in absence of proof of domicile elsewhere 19 [Sue S 19] If a person dies leaving movable property in British India, in the absence of proof of any domicile elsewhere, succession to the property is regulated by the law of British India

Notes—Under s 5 (2) the law of domicile of a deceased person governs the succession to his personal estate wherever situated but the estate itself must be administered in the country in which possession is taken under lawful authority Piston v Aletrole 8 C & F 1, Thomson v Advocate General, 12 C & F 1, Bruce v Bruce 2 B & P 229 N, Burns v Cole, Amb 425, S P Piper v Piper Amb 16, Sommerville v Somerville 5 Ves 750, Re Trusford 36 Ch D 600 Dos v Vardill, 5 B & C 451, Dighton v Crispen, 1 L R H L 30=35 L J Pro 129

Presumption of Indian Domicile—in the absence of proof the law will presume that the domicile of movable property if situated in India will be the law of the country in which it is situated unless a presumption mentioned in this section comes in if the deceased is unknown and the movable property also 12 Moo P C 255

MARRIAGE

20 [Sue S 4] (1) No person shall, by marriage acquire any interest in the property of the person whom he or she marries or become incapable of doing any act in respect of his or her own property which he or she could have done if unmarried

(2) This section—

(a) [Sue S 331] shall not apply to any marriage contracted before the first day of January, 1866,

[Mar Wom Pro S 2] shall not apply and shall be deemed never to have applied, to any marriage one or both of the parties to which professed at the time of the marriage the Hindu Mohammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion

Scope—This section and section 54 read together should be understood as laying down a general rule as to the immediate effect of marriage in respect of movable property belonging to each or either of married persons and not as laying down a rule as to the effect of marriage on the property of a married person after the death of the other spouse. The law which applied to the property of a married person at the time of the marriage was completely altered by the Indian Succession Act. This section does not apply in an Indian domicile 1 C 4 have already been acquired before the passing of the Act 6 C 794

21. [SUC S 44] If a person whose domicile is not in British India marries in British India a person whose domicile is in British India, neither party acquires by the marriage any rights in respect of any property of the other party not comprised in a settlement made previous to the marriage, which he or she would not acquire thereby if both were domiciled in British India at the time of the marriage.

Notes— In my opinion sections 4 (=s 20) and 44 (=s 21) read together should be construed as laying down a general rule as to the immediate effect of marriage in favour of the married persons not to lay down a rule intended to affect the preponderance of authority had been in favour of making the domicile of the husband, or at least that of the marriage govern the rights of the parties where the domiciles of the husband and wife are different. The Succession Act where either of the parties had an Indian domicile very reasonably submits all their rights both as to movables and immovables to the territorial law of India, to that extent the jus gentium, or common law of nations has been set aside or modified. From this point of view it is easy to see why ss 4 and 44 are kept apart. The two sections deal with different subjects. The former declares the general lex loci of India, the second lays down a special rule to govern a particular case." 1 C 412

22 [SUC S. 45] (1) The property of a minor may be settled in contemplation of marriage, provided the settlement is made by the minor with the approbation of the minor's father, or, if the father is dead or absent from British India, with the approbation of the High Court

[SUC S 331] (2) Nothing in this section or in section 21 shall apply to any Will made or intestacy occurring before the first day of January, 1860, or to intestate or testamentary succession to the property of any Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina

Scope of the section—Hitherto the general personal estate of a female infant was bound by a settlement made on her marriage, because such personal estate became by marriage the absolute property of the husband and the settlement was in effect his settlement and not hers (3 Daw Case 2nd Ed 728 N citing Sir John Leach in Simpson v Jones 2 Russ & My 376) Now by sections 20 and 21, this reason is no longer valid. Hence this section was introduced as an enabling section (Stokes, 24)

PART IV

OF CONSANGUINITY.

23 [SUC S 331 & P. S 8.] Nothing in this Part shall apply to any Will made or intestacy occurring before the first day of January, 1860, to or intestate or testamentary succession to the property of any Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh, Jaina or Parsi

Application of Part The Indian Succession Act is not retrospective. The purpose of law applicable to intestate and testamentary succession 31 B 25

24 [SUC. S 20.] Kindred or consanguinity is the connection or relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor

Notes—Legitimate children acquire by birth the domicile of their father
Forbes v Forbes, Kay 341 An infant cannot change his domicile Ibid

Lunatics acquisition of new domicile 18 [uc S 13] An insane person cannot acquire a new domicile in any other way than by his domicile following the domicile of another person

Notes—If a man of unsound mind attains majority his domicile will follow that of his father if he is legitimate and of his mother if he is illegitimate
Sharpe v Crispen L R 1 P & D 611, Urguhart v Butterfield, 47 Ch D 356 But if he attains majority and then becomes insane it is clear that his domicile will be what it was at the time when he became insane The only exception to this appears to be the case of a feme covert because a wife cannot acquire a domicile separate and distinct from her husband. Dalhousie v Mc Donall, 7 C & F 817

Succession to movable property in British India in absence of proof of domicile elsewhere 19 [SUC S 19] If a person dies leaving movable property in British India, in the absence of proof of any domicile elsewhere, succession to the property is regulated by the law of British India

Peston v Melville 8 C & F 1, Thomson v Advocate General, 12 C & F 1, Druce v Bruce 2 B & P 229 N, Burns v Cole, Amb 425, S P Esler v Piper Amb 16, Sommer Jille v Sommerville 5 Ves 750, Re Trufoft 36 Ch D 600 Doe v Vardill, 5 B & C 451, Diglion v Crispen 1 L R H L 30=35 L J Pro 129

Presumption of Indian Domicile—In the absence of any domicile elsewhere the law will presume that the domicile is Indian and the succession to his movable property if situate in India will be regulated accordingly The presumption mentioned in this section comes into operation When the domicile of the deceased is unknown and the movable property is situate in British India See also 12 Moo P C 255

MARRIAGE

20 [SUC S 4] (1) No person shall, by marriage acquire any interest in the property of the person whom he or she marries or become incapable of doing any act in respect of his or her own property which he or she could have done if unmarried

(2) This section—

(a) [SUC S 331] shall not apply to any marriage contracted before the first day of January, 1866,

(Mar Wom Pro S 2) shall not apply, and shall be deemed never to have applied, to any marriage one or both of the parties to which professed at the time of the marriage the Hindu Mohammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina religion

Scope—This section and section 54 read together should be understood as laying down a general rule as to the immediate effect of marriage in respect of movable property belonging to each or either of married persons not comprised in an ant

21 [Sue S 44] If a person whose domicile is not in British India marries in British India a person whose domicile is in British India neither party acquires by the marriage any rights in respect of any property of the other party not comprised in a settlement made previous to the marriage, which he or she would not acquire thereby if both were domiciled in British India at the time of the marriage

Notes—In my opinion sections 4 (=s 20) and 44 (=s 21) read together should have effect of marriage in married persons not rule intended to affect preponderance of the husband, or at least that of the marriage govern the rights of the parties where the domiciles of the husband and wife are different. The Succession Act where either of the parties had an Indian domicile very reasonably submits all their rights both as to movables and immovables to the territorial law of India, to that extent the jus gentium or common law of nations has been set aside or modified. From this point of view it is easy to see why ss 4 and 44 are kept apart. The two sections deal with different subjects. The former declares the general lex loci of India the second lays down a special rule to govern a particular case.

22 [Sue S 45] (1) The property of a minor may be settled in contemplation of marriage, provided the settlement is made by the minor with the approbation of the minor's father, or, if the father is dead or absent from British India, with the approbation of the High Court

[Sue S 331] (2) Nothing in this section or in section 21 shall apply to any Will made or intestacy occurring before the first day of January, 1860 or to intestate or testamentary succession to the property of any Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina

Scope of the section—Hitherto the general personal estate of a female infant was bound by a settlement made on her marriage, because such personal estate became by marriage the absolute property of the husband and the settlement was in effect his settlement and not hers (3 Daw Case 2nd Ed 728 N citing Sir John Leach in Simpson v Jones 2 Russ & My 376). Now by sections 20 and 21, this reason is no longer valid. Hence this section was introduced as an enabling section (Stokes 34).

PART IV

OF CONSANGUINITY

23 [Sue S 331 & P S 8] Nothing in this Part shall apply to any Will made or intestacy occurring before the first day of January, 1866, to or intestate or testamentary succession to the property of any Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh, Jaina or Parsi the Indian Succession Act not retrospective Will made before The purpose of law applicable to

1-1-1866

intestate and testamentary succession 31 B 25

24 [Sue S 20] Kindred or consanguinity is the connection or relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor

Kindred or consanguinity

Notes—A gift to a next of kin under the English law does not include a husband or a wife Walt v Walt, 3 Ves 244, Gurric v Lord Camden, 14 Ves 372, In re Fitzgerald, 58 L. J Ch 662 But in the case of Hindus the term kindred includes relationship by marriage 15 C W N 945

25 [Sue S 21] (1) Lineal consanguinity is that which subsists between two persons, one of whom is descended in a direct line from the other, as between a father, and so upwards in the son, grand son, great grand son either ascending or descending in the first degree, and so likewise his son, his grandfather and grandson in the second degree, his great grand father and great grand son in the third degree, and so on,

Lineal consanguinity—Lineal consanguinity is that which subsists between persons, of whom one is descended in a direct line from the other, as between the proper son and his father, grand father upwards in the son, great-grand son, great-grand-son, &c. consanguinity, it is onarium ab eodem stirpis descenditum, since relations are such as descend one from the other and both of course from the same common ancestor Williams on Executors, § 330

26 [Sue S 22] (1) Collateral consanguinity is that which subsists between two persons who are descended from the same stock or ancestor, but neither of whom is descended in a direct line from the other

(2) For the purpose of ascertaining in what degree of kindred any collateral relative stands to a person deceased, it is necessary to reckon upwards from the person deceased to the common stock and then downwards to the collateral relative, a degree being allowed for each person, both ascending and descending.

Collateral consanguinity—Collateral kindred answers to the same description: Collateral relatives agreeing with the lineal in this, that they descend from the same stock or ancestors, but differing in this that they do not descend one from the other. Collateral kinsmen are such then, as literally spring from one and the same ancestor who is the stirpes, or root, and stirpes, trunk, or common stock, from which these relatives are branched out. As if John Stiles has two sons who have each numerous issues, both these issues are lineally descended from John Stiles as their common ancestor and they are collateral kinsmen to each other, because they are all descended from the common ancestor, and all have a portion of his blood in their veins, which denominates them consanguineous Wms Ex 331

Persons held for purpose of succession to be similarly related to deceased

27. [Sue S 23] For the purpose of succession, there is no distinction—

(a) between those who are related to a person deceased through his father, and those who are related to him through his mother, or

(b) between those who are related to a person deceased by the full blood, and those who are related to him by the half blood, or

(c) between those who were actually born in the lifetime of a person deceased and those who at the date of his death were only conceived in the womb but who have been subsequently born alive

Clause (a)—Relations through father's side and relations through mother's side are equally entitled to inherit. Blackborough v Davis, (1701) 1 P Wms 50; Moore v Burham, (1723) 1 P Wms 53

Equally with collaterals of the whole blood of the half blood of the intestate as of the whole blood to share, with their mother, after the death of the intestate's father, in the personal property of the intestate dying without wife or children, Jessop v Watson 1 Mylne, 665

Clause (c) —The children en ventre sa mere are considered born for the purpose of succession Doe v Clark, 2 H & L 399

Mode of computing degrees of kindred

Illustrations

(i) The person whose relatives are to be reckoned, and his cousin german, or first cousin are, as shown in the table, related in the fourth degree; there being one degree of ascent to the father, and another to the common ancestor, the grandfather, and from him one of descent to the uncle, and another to the cousin german, making in all four degrees

(ii) A grandson of the brother and a son of the uncle, re, a great nephew and a cousin german, are in equal degree being each four degrees removed

(iii) A grandson of a cousin-german is in the same degree as the grandson of a great uncle, for they are both in the sixth degree of kindred

Notes —The degrees of kindred are reckoned according to the civil law, both upwards to the ancestor and downwards to the issue each generation counting for a degree Mentney v Petty, Pre Ch 593, Wallis v Hodson, 2 Atk 117 2 Black Comm 225, Toller, III

32 [Suo S 26] The property of an intestate devolves upon the wife or husband, or upon those who are of the kindred of the deceased, in the order and according to the rules hereinafter contained in this Chapter

Explanation—A widow is not entitled to the provisions hereby made for her if by a valid contract made before her marriage, she has been excluded from her distributive share of her husband's estate

Devolution of property—The rules as regards devolution and distribution of intestate's estate are taken from the Statute of Distribution (22 and 23 Car II c 10) as explained by 29 Car II c 3 s 25 and 1 Jac II c 17 s 7 which regulate the succession of the deceased's personal property in case of intestacy

Explanation—The explanation is based on English law "The widow's title" says Sir Edward Vaughan Williams, however, under the Statute of Distribution

PART VI

TESTAMENTARY SUCCESSION

Introductory

57 [H W Ss 2 & 9] The provisions of this Part which are set out in Schedule III shall, subject to the restrictions and modifications specified therein apply—

Application of certain provisions of Part to a class of Wills made by Hindus, etc.

(ii) A executes an instrument purporting to be his Will, but he does not understand the nature of the instrument nor the effect of its provisions. This instrument is not a valid Will.

(iii) A being very feeble and debilitated, but capable of exercising a judgment as to the proper mode of disposing of his property, makes a Will. This is a valid Will.

Scope of the Section—Under the Indian Succession Act every person of sound mind and not a minor may dispose of his property by Will. All that is now required is that a testator at the time of making his Will must be fully cognizant of its contents, and be in a condition to exercise, and must in fact exercise thought, judgment and reflection respecting the act he is doing. Under this Act, an alien, a felo de se and even a convicted criminal can dispose of his property by Will (Henderson, 73).

Testamentary capacity, what it is—No person is considered capable of making a valid Will, unless he be of a 'sound mind and understanding'. The understanding must be sound in order must be a memory to recall all the the testator's bounty, and an understanding of himself and their claims upon him.

Per Sir J Hannen in Broughton v Knight, (1873) 3 P & D at p 65 A sound disposing mind does not mean a perfectly balanced mind.

Sound and disposing mind—As to the testator's capacity he must in the language of the law have sound and disposing mind and memory. In other words, he ought to be capable of making his Will with an understanding of the nature of the business in which he is engaged, a recollection of the property he means to dispose be in a state of extreme imbecility and yet he may possess sufficient understanding to direct how his property shall be disposed of, his capacity may be perfect to dispose of his property in business, as for instance men, at different periods of their property committed to writing, than they could in comprehending business in some measures. new Harrison v Rowan, 3 Washington 583 referred to in Sloan v Maxwell, 2 H W Green and approved in Banks v Goodfellow L R 3 Q B 549, see also Smith v Tebbit, (1867) 8 P & D 400, Swinfen v Swinfen 1 F & F 584, Broughton v Knight, (1873) 3 P & D 64, Burdet v Thomson, (1873) 3 P & D 72 N, Birken v Wing, (1890) L T 50, Monosseh v Shapurji 10 Bom L R 1004 (1008), Harwood v Baker, 3 Moo P C 282, 50 C 100=35 C L J 569, 23 C 1 P C, 10 Ind Cas 180, 47 C 1043=24 C W N 860, 25 C 824=25 I A 109, 1 C W N 826, 25 C 824 P C, 85 Ind Cas 581, 41 C L J 320, 72 Ind Cas 88, 21 C 279, 23 Bom L R 1068=64 Ind Cas 257, 10 M L T 304=190 I M W N 330=12 Ind Cas 393, 19 C W N 826, 13 C W N 1128, 28 Ind Cas 959.

Will instruction of which is given while in health—Where a testator is in health and executes the document prepared even a slight proof of knowledge and will be valid, though at the time of the at he has given those instructions but he is in accordance with them 35 C L J, see also Pirera v Pirera (1901) App 1 A 429, 22 B 17, 13 C W N 1128.

Burden of proof—The onus probandi lies in every case upon the party propounding the Will, and he must satisfy the conscience of the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last Will of a free and capable testator. In all cases the onus is imposed on the party propounding a Will; it is in general discharged by proof of capacity and that the fact of execution from which the knowledge of an assent to the contents of the instrument is assumed' Barry v Butlin 2 Moo P C 482, see also 85 Ind Cas 58, 21 C 279, 24 C W N 860, 5 Lah 263, 69 Ind Cas 572, 41 C L J 300, 47 Ind Cas 963, 12 Ind Cas 49, 32 M 400, 38 C 355, 19 C W N 747, 26 C W N 113, 25 C W N 779, 24 C W N 674, 59 Ind Cas 535, A I R 1926 (P) 269

(i) A falsely and knowingly represents to the testator that the testator's only child is dead or that he has done some unlawful act and thereby induces the testator to make a Will in his A's favour, such Will has been obtained by fraud and is invalid

(ii) A, by fraud and deception prevails upon the testator to bequeath a legacy to him The bequest is void

(iii) A, being a prisoner by lawful authority makes his Will The Will is not invalid by reason of the imprisonment

(iv) A threatens to shoot B, or to burn his house or to cause him to be arrested on a criminal charge unless he makes a bequest in favour of C B, in consequence, makes a bequest in favour of C The bequest is void the making of it having been caused by coercion

(v) A, being of sufficient intellect, if undisturbed by the influence of others, to make a Will, yet being so much under the control of B, that he is not a free agent makes a Will, dictated by B It appears that he would not have executed the Will, but for fear of B The Will is invalid

(vi) A, being in so feeble a state of health as to be unable to resist importunity, is pressed by B to make a Will of a certain purport and does so merely to purchase peace and in submission to B. The Will is invalid.

(vii) A being in such a state of health as to be capable of exercising his own judgment and volition, B uses urgent intercession and persuasion with him to induce him to make a Will of a certain purport. A, in consequence of the intercession and persuasion, but in the free exercise of his judgment and volition makes his Will in the manner recommended by B. The Will is not rendered invalid by the intercession and persuasion of B.

Principle.—Although a man may be a competent testator, if he is induced to make a Will by fraud, duress, or undue influence, the Will is invalid.

The fact that a Will has been obtained by fraud is sufficient ground for setting it aside. Lord Donegal's Case, (1751) 2 Ves Sen 408, see also Allen v Macpherson, 1 H L C 207.

Coercion—Illustrations (iv) and (v) show cases of coercion. No definition of coercion is given in the Act. If it is demonstrated that actual force was used to compel the testator to make the Will there can be no doubt that although the formalities required have been complied with, as the existence of the testamentary capacity was shown to exist yet such a Will can never stand. Mountain v Bennet, 1 Cox, 355. CHAPTER III

OF THE EXECUTION OF UNPRIVILEGED WILLS

63 [Sue S 50] Every testator, not being a soldier employed in an expedition or engaged in actual warfare, "or an air man so employed or engaged," or a mariner at sea, shall execute his Will according to the following rules—

(a) The testator shall sign or shall affix his mark to the Will or it shall be signed by some other person in his presence and by his direction

(b) The signature or mark of the testator or the signature of the person signing for him, shall be so placed that it shall appear that it was intended thereby to give effect to the writing as a Will

(c) The Will shall be attested by two or more witnesses each of whom has seen the testator sign or affix his mark to the Will or has seen some other person sign the Will, in the presence and by the direction of the testator, or has received from the testator, a personal acknowledgement of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person, and each of the witnesses shall sign the Will in the presence of the testator, but it shall not be necessary that more than one witness be present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary

Scope of the section—This section lays down the formalities required by the law for the execution of a valid Will by every testator not being a soldier employed in an expedition or engaged in actual warfare, or a mariner at sea. Such a Will shall be duly executed by the testator as laid down in clauses (a) and (b) and must be attested by at least two attesting witnesses. CHAPTER V

OF THE ATTESTATION, REVOCATION, ALTERATION AND REVIVAL OF WILLS

67 [Sue S 54] A Will shall not be deemed to be insufficiently attested by reason of any benefit thereby given either by way of bequest or by way of appointment to any person attesting it, or to his or her wife or husband, but the bequest or appointment shall be void so far as concerns the person so attesting, or the wife or husband of such person, or any person claiming under either of them

Explanation—A legatee under a Will does not lose his legacy by attesting a codicil which confirms the Will

Application—This section is not applicable to Hindus, Buddhists, Sikhs or Jains, as such legatees under Wills of such persons do not forfeit their legacies by becoming attesting witnesses. By section 19 of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869 this section has been made applicable to the Will and codicils of Talukudars of Oudh & Ind Cas 558. The extension of the prohibition to the wife seems to rest on the unity of interest between the husband and the wife. 4 M 244

68 [Sue S 55] No person, by reason of interest in, or of his being an executor of a Will shall be disqualified as a witness to prove the execution of the Will or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof

Notes—This section is based on ss 16 & 17 of the English Wills Act (Stat 1 Vict, c 26)

69 [Sue S 56] Every Will shall be revoked by the marriage of the maker, except a Will made in exercise of a power of appointment, when the property over which the power of appointment is exercised would not, in default of such appointment, pass to his or her executor or administrator, or to the person entitled in case of intestacy

Explanation—Where a man is invested with power to determine the disposition of property of which he is not the owner, he is said to have power to appoint such property

Notes—This section provides for obliteration, interlineation or other alteration made after the execution of the Will 19 Ind Cas 692=71 P R 1913 Where unattested alterations occur in a Will, the presumption of law is that such alterations were made after the execution of the Will and in the absence of evidence rebutting the presumption, probate will be granted of the Will in the original state, omitting the alteration: 24 C W N 860=47 C 1043, see also 1 C W N 428, 7 M 302

testator by an unprivileged Will or codicil, or by any act expressing an intention to revoke it and accompanied by such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged Will, or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same

Explanation—In order to the revocation of a privileged Will or codicil by an act accompanied by such formalities as would be sufficient to give validity to a privileged Will, it is not necessary that the testator should at the time of doing that act be in a situation which entitles him to make a privileged Will

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF WILLS

74 [SUC S 61.] It is not necessary that any technical words or terms of art be used in a Will, but only that the wording be such that the intentions of the testator can be known therefrom principle to be borne in mind in construing the testator as expressed in the Will rules of construction are only intended J 707, 86 Ind Cas 737 In all cases the Court should put itself entirely in testator's position and ascertain from his language what were his intentions A I R 1925 (Oudh) 24 One of the cardinal rules in construing a Will is to avoid intestacy either wholly or partially 1923 Sind 42, see also 86 Ind Cas 1095, 90 Ind Cas 5

Scope of the section—A testamentary document requires no special forms of words (1907) P 326 No technical words are necessary for a Will The true rule of construction in a Hindu as in an English Will is to try and find out the meaning of the testator, taking the whole document together, and to give effect to its meaning 13 C W N 525=36 C 566 In determining the construction of Wills the Court must look to the intention of the testator 6 M I A 526=4 W R P C 114, 48 M L J 707, 8 M I A 66, 3 C L J 224 31 M 283, 11 C L J 461, 27 C W N 199, 15 C 282, 29 B 375

75 [SUC S 62] For the purpose of determining questions as to what person or what property is denoted by any words used in a Will, a Court shall inquire into every material fact relating to the persons who claim to be interested under such Will, the property which is claimed as the subject of deposition, the circumstances of the testator and of his family, and into every fact a knowledge of which may conduce to the right application of the words which the testator has used

(i) A, by his Will bequeathes 1,000 rupees to his eldest son or to his youngest grandchild, or to his cousin Mary A Court may make inquiry in order to ascertain to what person the description in the Will applies

(ii) A, by his Will, leaves to B 'my estate called Black Acre It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what is the subject matter of the bequest, that is to say, what estate of the testator is called Black Acre

(iii) A, by his Will, leaves to B 'the estate which I purchased of C It may be necessary to take evidence in order to ascertain what estate the testator purchased of C

Notes—In construing a written instrument the situation of the parties must be looked at, and the deeds must be construed with reference to the situation of the parties and their rights at the time the deed was executed 6 M I A 1, see also 24 M L J 418, 36 A 101, 13 L W 657 (P C), 25 C 112 Judges should not, where the language of a Will presents no ambiguity imagine ambiguity in its application to different sets of existing facts and so initiate an enquiry into those facts 12 Bom L R 863, 1 B H C R 71, 13 L W 657 (P C)

76 [SUC S 63] (1) Where the words used in a Will to designate or describe a legatee or a class of legatees Misnomer or misdescription of object sufficiently show what is meant an error in the name or description shall not prevent the legacy from taking effect

(2) A mistake in the name of a legatee may be corrected by a description of him, and a mistake in the description of a legatee may be corrected by the name

Illustrations

(i) A bequeathes a legacy to Thomas the second son of my brother John. The testator has an only brother named John, who has no son named Thomas but second son whose name is William. William will have the legacy.

(ii) A bequeaths a legacy to Thomas the second son of my brother John. The testator has an only brother, named John whose first son is named Thomas and whose second son is named William. Thomas will have the legacy.

(iii) The testator bequeaths his property to A and B the legitimate children of C. C has no legitimate child but has two illegitimate children A and B. The bequest to A and B takes effect, although they are illegitimate.

(iv) The testator gives his residuary estate to be divided among 'my seven children' and proceeding to enumerate them, mentions six names only. This omission will not prevent the seventh child from taking a share with the others.

(v) The testator, having six grandchildren, makes a bequest to my six grandchildren and proceeding to mention them by their Christian names mentions one twice over omitting another altogether. The one whose name is not mentioned will take a share with the others.

(vi) The testator bequeaths '1,000 rupees to each of the three children of A'. At the date of the Will A has four children. Each of these four children will if he survives the testator, receive a legacy of 1,000 rupees.

Notes—The rule underlying this section rests on the maxim Id certum est quod certum reddi potest (That is certain which can be made certain). By the application of the maxim False demonstratio non nocet (if there be an adequate and convenient description with convenient certainty of what was intended to pass or who was meant to be a legatee, a subsequent erroneous addition will not vitiate it), the object of the legacy is made certain and as such the legacy is not void. This latter maxim practically includes two other maxims Nihil facit error nominis cum de corpore constat (an error of name is nothing where there is certainty of person) and veritas nominis (the truth of the name). The rule is applied to the name then to a gift to an adopted son. In such a case the reason or motive drawn from a contract is not sufficient to establish the gift. tion of X. The words "in the occupation of X" shall be rejected as erroneous, and the marsh lands of the testator lying in L will pass by the bequest.

(ii) The testator bequeathes to A "my zamindari of Rampur." He had an estate tuluq passes by this bequest within the rule is that it at all and so far as it is Wisher, 4 Exch 591, see also C II N § 755. The rule is a rule of good sense.

79 [SUC § 66] If a Will mentions several circumstances as descriptive of the thing which the testator intends to bequeath, and there is any property of his in respect of which all those circumstances exist, the bequest shall be considered as limited to such property, and it shall not be lawful to reject any part of the description as erroneous, because the testator had other property to which such part of the description does not apply.

Explanation—In judging whether a case falls within the meaning of this section, any words which would be liable to rejection under section 78 shall be deemed to have been struck out of the Will.

Illustrations

(i) A bequeathes to B "my marsh lands lying in L." The testator had marsh lands lying in L, and some not in the occupation of X, and some not in the occupation of X. The bequest shall be considered as limited to such of the testator's marsh lands as were in the occupation of X.

(ii) A bequeathes to B "my marsh lands lying in L and in the occupation of X, comprising 1,000 bighas of lands." The testator had marsh lands lying in L, some of which were in the occupation of X and some not in the occupation of X. The measurement is wholly inapplicable to the marsh lands of either class or to the whole taken together. The measurement will be considered as struck out of the Will, and such of the testator's marsh lands lying in L as were in the occupation of X shall alone pass by the bequest.

Notes—The rule underlying this section is based upon the 13th maxim of debet verba in fuisam demonstrationem stated the rule as follows: "If I have said true and some wherein part of intended words of true limitation to circumstances are true." As an illustrative 80 [SUC § 67] Where the words of a Will are unambiguous, but it is found by extrinsic evidence that they admit of applications one only of which can have been intended by the testator, extrinsic evidence may be taken to show which of these applications was intended.

Illustrations

(i) A man, having two cousins of the name of Mary, bequeathes a sum of money to "my cousin Mary." It appears that there are two persons each answering the description in the Will. That description, therefore, admits of two applications, only one of which can have been intended by the testator. Evidence is admissible to show which of the two applications was intended.

(ii) A, by his Will leaves to B "my state called Sultanpur Khurd." It turns out that he had two estates called Sultanpur Khurd. Evidence is admissible to show which estate was intended.

Notes—The rule underlying the section is mainly based upon the well known maxim of Lord Bacon: "Verba in fuisam demonstrationem," namely, quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione factitollitur (Regul. 23) Latent ambiguity may be supplied by evidence, for an ambiguity which arises by proof of an extrinsic fact may in the same manner, be removed

Extrinsic evidence inadmissible in case of patent ambiguity or deficiency

81 [SUC S. 68] Where there is an ambiguity or deficiency on the face of a Will no extrinsic evidence as to the intentions of the testator shall be admitted

(v) A bequeaths a legacy to "the children of B." B never had any legitimate child. C and D had, at the date of the Will, acquired the reputation of being children of B. After the date of the Will and before the death of the testator E and F were born, and acquired the reputation of being children of B. Only C and D are objects of the bequest.

Notes—A gift to children means legitimate children, unless it appears from the facts that the donor intended to benefit illegitimate children. If the donor is a parent, the child must have been included in the gift. If the donor is not a parent, the child must be a legitimate child of the donor. If the donor is a parent, the child must have been included in the gift. If the donor is not a parent, the child must be a legitimate child of the donor. If the donor is a parent, the child must have been included in the gift. If the donor is not a parent, the child must be a legitimate child of the donor.

101 [Suo S 88] Where a Will purports to make two bequests to the same person, and a question arises whether the testator intended to make the second bequest instead of or in addition to the first, if there is nothing in the Will to show what he intended, the following rules shall have effect in determining the construction to be put upon the Will —

(a) if the same specific thing is bequeathed twice to the same legatee in the same Will or in the Will and again in the codicil he is entitled to receive that specific thing only

(b) Where one and the same Will or one and the same codicil purports to make, in two places, a bequest to the same person of the same quantity or amount of anything he shall be entitled to one such legacy only.

(c) Where two legacies of unequal amount are given to the same person in the same Will or in the same codicil the legatee is entitled to both

(d) Where two legacies, whether equal or unequal in amount, are given to the same legatee, one by a Will and the other by a codicil, or each by a different codicil, the legatee is entitled to both legacies.

Explanation—In clauses (a) to (d) of this section, the word "Will" does not include a codicil.

(iv) A by his Will bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and afterwards in the same Will bequeaths to B the sum of 6,000 rupees B is entitled to receive 11,000 rupees

(v) A, by his Will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees and by a codicil to the Will he bequeaths to him 5,000 rupees B is entitled to receive 10,000 rupees

(vi) A, by one codicil to his Will, bequeaths to B 5,000 rupees and by another codicil bequeaths to him 6,000 rupees B is entitled to receive 11,000 rupees

(vii) A by his Will, bequeaths 500 rupees to B because she was my nurse, and in another part of the Will bequeaths 500 rupees to B because she went to England with my children B is entitled to receive 1,000 rupees

(viii) A, by his Will, bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also in another part of the Will, an annuity of 400 rupees B is entitled to both legacies

(ix) A by his Will bequeaths to B the sum of 5,000 rupees and also bequeaths to him the sum of 5,000 rupees if he shall attain the age of 18 B is entitled absolutely to one sum of 5,000 rupees, and takes a contingent interest in another sum of 5,000 rupees

Scope of the section—It often happens that two legacies are given to the same legatee by the same or different testamentary instruments and questions accordingly arise whether the second bequest should be construed as merely a repetition and intended by the testator only in substitution of the legacy first given, or whether it should be considered as accumulative and intended as an additional profit to the legatee Pop Leg Vol 11 p 1

104 [Suo S. 91] If a legacy is given in general terms without specifying the time when it is to be paid, the legatee has a vested interest in it from the day of the death of the testator, and, if he dies without having received it, it shall pass to his representatives

Notes—A bequest, unless the testator intend otherwise as in the case of contingent bequest, becomes vested in interest in the devisee or legatee from the date of the testator's death although he may not be entitled to receive what has been bequeathed to him except in the course of administration, such an interest is attachable and saleable before an administrator has distributed the estate in due course of administration. This is clear from the provisions of this section as well as from sections 119 and 120 of the Act. 22 M L J 228=13 Ind Cas 795, 9 Ind Cas 951=13 Bom L R 141 Until the assent of the executor is given the legatee has only an inchoate right to the legacy. (i) Property is bequeathed to A for his life and after his death to his eldest son for life, and after the death of the latter to his eldest son. At the time of the testator's death A has no son. The bequest to A's eldest son for his life is void.

(ii) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life and after his death to his daughters. A has no daughters at the time of the testator's death. Here the bequest to A's daughters comprises the whole interest that remains to the testator. The bequest to A's daughters is valid.

Here the direction for settlement has the effect, in the case of each daughter who marries under eighteen of substituting for the absolute bequest to her a bequest to her merely for her life, that is to say, a bequest to a person not in existence at the time of the testator's death of something which is less than the whole interest that remains to the testator in the thing bequeathed. (i) A fund is bequeathed to A for life and after his death to all his children who shall attain the age of 25. A survives the testator and has some children living at the testator's death. Each child of A's living at the testator's death must attain the age of 25 (if at all) within the limits allowed for a bequest. But A may have children after the testator's decease some of whom may not attain the age of 25 until more than 18 years have elapsed after the decease of A. The bequest to A's children therefore, is inoperative as to any child born after the testator's death, and is void in regard to those who do not attain the age of 25 within 18 years after A's death but is operative in regard to the other children of A.

(vi) A legacy is bequeathed to A if he executes a certain document within a time specified in the Will. The document is executed by A within a reasonable time, but not within the time specified in the Will. A has not performed the condition, and is not entitled to receive the legacy.

Scope of the section—Where a condition is precedent it ought regularly to be strictly performed in the manner required. Yet it seems that both by the civil law and by the common law, a condition is not to be strictly performed, if it is impossible, or if it is contrary to public policy, or if it is too uncertain, or if it is too remote, or if it is too oppressive, or if it is too indefinite, or if it is too vague, or if it is too uncertain, or if it is too remote, or if it is too oppressive, or if it is too indefinite, or if it is too vague.

129 [Sue S 116] Where there is a bequest to one person and a bequest of the same thing to another, if the prior bequest shall fail the second bequest shall take effect upon the failure of the prior bequest although the failure may not have occurred in the manner contemplated by the testator

Notes—In 9 B. L. R. 377, 4 B. L. Notes—The object of this section is to get rid of the rule of law that a condition subsequent shall operate merely in terrorem unless the legacy, as in illustration (ii) to section 131 is given over to another on breach of condition—Stokes Succession Act. Where in a condition of residence no manner or period of residence is prescribed, but residence simply and without definition exclusive residence is not supposed to be meant. 14 B L R 60. The condition of residence is a valid condition. 24 C 646, 22 C L J 61, see also 20 C 15, 17 C W N 39, 12 C W N 808, 16 B 236, 12 B L R 238.

135 [SUC S 122] In order that a condition that a bequest shall cease to have effect may be valid, it is necessary that the event to which it relates be one which could legally constitute the condition of a bequest as contemplated by section 120.

Such condition must not be invalid under section 120.

Valid conditions—A condition that a person shall not marry a Christian or become a Christian (Hodgson v. Halford 11 Ch D 959) or become a nun (Re Dickson's Trusts, 1 Sim N S 37) or shall give up the habit of keeping low company and frequenting public houses (Fattersall v. Howell, 2 Mer 26, Neal v. Hanbury Pre Ch 173) is not void.

136 [SUC S 123] Where a bequest is made with a condition superadded that, unless the legatee shall perform a certain act, the subject matter of the bequest shall go to another person, or the bequest shall cease to have effect but no time is specified for the performance of the act, if the legatee takes any step which renders impossible or indefinitely postpones the performance of the act required, the legacy shall go as if the legatee had died without performing such act.

Illustrations

(i) A bequest is made to A, with a proviso that unless he enters the Army, the legacy shall go over to B. A takes Holy Orders and thereby renders it impossible that he should fulfil the condition. B is entitled to receive the legacy.

(ii) A bequest is made to A, with a proviso that it shall cease to have any effect if he does not marry B's daughter. A marries a stranger and thereby indefinitely postpones the fulfilment of the conditions. The bequest ceases to have effect.

Notes—Next section lays down that when a time is fixed for the performance of a condition it must be performed within that time. But when no such time is fixed, in case of condition subsequent if the legatee does not fulfil it within a reasonable time or renders its fulfilment impossible, the effect of non performance will be attached to the gifts—Basu's Succession Act, p. 528.

137. [SUC S 124] Where the Will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed, or as a condition upon the non fulfilment of which the subject matter of the bequest is to go over to another person or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as shall be requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

Performance of condition, precedent or subsequent, within specified time. Further time in case of fraud.

Notes—This section is applicable to subsequent. This section applies when fixed. Even when time is fixed it can, on the principle of their having Pickert, 14 Vest 311, Taylor v. Popham, 1 Bro C C 169.

Bequest of certain sum where stocks, etc., in which invested are described

143 [Sue S 130] Where a certain sum is bequeathed, the legacy is not specific merely because the stock, funds or securities in which it is invested are described in the Will

A bequeaths to B—

No one of these legacies is specific

Scope—Where a certain sum is given, and the stock, etc., is described in the Will that circumstance alone will not make the legacy specific As where the bequest is "to be the sum of £1,200 of my funded property to be transferred in his name or as it shall appear most beneficial to his interest, by an executor"—Williams on Executors, 11th Ed p 933

144 [Sue S 131] Where a bequest is made in general terms of a certain amount of any kind of stock, the legacy is not specific merely because the testator was at the date of his Will, possessed of stock of the specified kind, to an equal or greater amount than the amount bequeathed.

A bequeaths to B 5 000 rupees five per cent Government securities A had at the date of the Will five per cent. Government securities for 5,000 rupees The legacy is not specific

Bequest of money where not payable until part of testator's property disposed of in certain way

145 [Sue S 132] A money legacy is not specific merely because the Will directs payment to be postponed until some part of the property of the testator has been reduced to a certain form, or remitted to a certain place

Illustration

A bequeaths to B 10 000 rupees and directs that this legacy shall be paid as soon as A's property in India shall be realised in England The legacy is not specific

Scope—A money legacy will not be rendered specific by its payment being postponed until a particular investment of a fund takes place Vide Williams on Executors, 11th Ed p 918, Kymon v. Brothelt, 5 Ves 197

- 146 [SUC S 133] Where a Will contains a bequest of the residue of the testator's property along with an enumeration of some items of property not previously bequeathed, the articles enumerated shall not be deemed to be specifically bequeathed

A, having a lease for a term of years bequeaths all his property to B for life, and after B's death to C. The lease must be sold the proceeds invested as stated in this section and the annual income arising from the fund is to be paid to B for life. At B's death the capital of the fund is to be paid to C.

Notes—This section incorporates the rule laid down in Howe v Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves 137, with slight alteration.

Where deficiency of assets to pay legacies specific legacy not to abate with general legacies

149. [SUC S 136] If there is a deficiency of assets to pay legacies a specific legacy is not liable to abate with the general legacies

Notes—Specific legacies do not abate with general legacies. Specific legacy is a legacy "which a testator identifying it by sufficient description and manifesting an intention that it should be enjoyed or taken in the state and condition indicated by that description, separates in favour of a particular legatee, from the general mass of his personal estate." Robertson v Broadbent 8 A C 813

OF DEMONSTRATIVE LEGACIES

150 [SUC S. 137.] Where a testator bequeaths a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of any other commodity, and refers to a particular fund or stock so as to constitute the same the primary fund or stock out of which payment is to be made, the legacy is said to be demonstrative

Explanation—The distinction between a specific legacy and a demonstrative legacy consists in this, that—where specified property is given to the legatee, the legacy is specific, where the legacy is directed to be paid out of specified property, it is demonstrative

Illustrations

(i) A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The legacy to B is specific, the legacy to C is demonstrative

(ii) A bequeaths to B—

"an annuity of 500 rupees out of the sum of 2,000 rupees due to me by C's factory of Rampur" notes of the Government

an annuity of 500 rupees "from my funded property"

"1,000 rupees out of the sum of 2,000 rupees due to me by C" an annuity, and directs it to be paid "out of the rents arising from my taluk of Ramnagar"

(iii) A bequeaths to B—

"10,000 rupees out of my estate at Ramnagar or charges it on his estate at Ramnagar"

"10,000 rupees being my share of the capital embarked in a certain business"

Each of these bequests is demonstrative

Notes—Where the hereditary jaigirs of a testator were bequeathed to his surviving son with a direction that out of the income of the said jaigirs his predeceased son's adopted son should receive a certain sum every year from the legatee, held, in the circumstances of the case that annuity was a demonstrative legacy within the meaning of this section 109 P R 1908

151 [SUC S. 138.] Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed and a legacy is directed to be paid out of the same fund, the portion specifically bequeathed shall first be paid to the legatee, and the demonstrative legacy shall be paid out of the residue of the fund and, so far as the residue shall be deficient, out of the general assets of the testator.

Illustration

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees being part of a debt due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. The debt due to A from W is only 1,500 rupees; of these 1,500 rupees, 1,000 rupees belong to B and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 rupees out of the general assets of the testator

Notes—As a general rule, on the failure of the particular fund demonstrative legacies will be paid out of the general assets 19 C 444—19 I A 83. But the rule is subject to any direction to the contrary by the testator 29 M 153

OF ADEMPMENT OF LEGACIES

152 [SUC S 139] If anything which has been specifically bequeathed

At the death of A, no money is found in the chest, and no horses in the stable
The legacies are adeemed

(iii) A bequeaths to B certain bales of goods A takes the goods with him on a voyage The ship and goods are lost at sea, and A is drowned The legacy is adeemed

Notes—The word 'ademption' when applied to specific legacies of stock or of money or securities for money must be considered as synonymous with the word extraction —Roper's Legacies, Vol I, p 287

153. [SUC S 140] A demonstrative legacy is not adeemed by reason

Non ademption of demonstrative legacy

that the property on which it is charged by the Will does not exist at the time of the death of the testator, or has been converted into property of a different kind but it shall in such case be paid out of the general assets of the testator

Notes—Demonstrative legacy will not fail if the particular fund though in existence cannot, by reason of some provision of law of which the testator was apparently in ignorance, be charged with the payment of the legacy in question 109, 1 P L R 1908 see also 29 C 444=191 A 83

Ademption of specific bequest of right to receive something from third party

154 [SUC S 141] Where the thing specifically bequeathed is the right to receive something of value from a third party, and the testator himself receives it, the bequest is adeemed

All these debts are extinguished in A's lifetime some with and some without his consent. All the legacies are adeemed.

(ii) A bequeaths to B his interest in certain policies of life assurance. A in his lifetime receives the amount of the policies. The legacy is adeemed.

Notes—There would not be any ademption where the testator takes up money on specific security before the date of the Will. Crockett v Crockett 2 P Will 164.

Ademption pro tanto by testator's receipt of part of entire thing specifically bequeathed. 155 [SUC § 142] The receipt by the testator of a part of an entire thing specifically bequeathed shall operate as an ademption of the legacy to the extent of the sum so received.

Illustration

A bequeaths to B "the debt due to me by C." The debt amounts to 10,000 rupees. C pays to A 5,000 rupees, the one half of the debt. The legacy is revoked by ademption, so far as regards the 5,000 rupees received by A.

Notes—The illustration given under this section is based upon Fryer v Morris 9 Ves 360.

156 [SUC § 143] If a portion of an entire fund or stock is specifically bequeathed, the receipt by the testator of a portion of the fund or stock shall operate as an ademption only to the extent of the amount so received, and the residue of the fund or stock shall be applicable to the discharge of the specific legacy.

Illustration

A bequeaths to B one half of the sum of 10,000 rupees due to him from W. A in his lifetime receives 6,000 rupees, part of the 10,000 rupees. The 4,000 rupees which are due from W to A at the time of his death belong to B under the specific bequest.

Notes—When stock is specifically bequeathed, and it does not wholly or does only in part exist at the testator's death, the legacy will either be totally or partially adeemed as the case may be. Williams on Executors, 1064.

157 [SUC § 144] Where a portion of a fund is specifically bequeathed to one legatee, and a legacy charged on the same fund is bequeathed to another legatee, then if the testator receives a portion of that fund and the remainder of the fund is insufficient to pay both the specific and the demonstrative legacy, the specific legacy shall be paid first and the residue (if any) of the fund shall be applied so far as it will extend in payment of the demonstrative legacy, and the rest of the demonstrative legacy, shall be paid out of the general assets of the testator.

Illustration

A bequeaths to B 1,000 rupees, part of the debt of 2,000 rupees due to him from W. He also bequeaths to C 1,000 rupees to be paid out of the debt due to him from W. A afterwards receives "500" rupees part of that debt and dies leaving only 1,500 rupees due to him from W. Of these 1,500, 1,000 rupees belong to B and 500 rupees are to be paid to C. C is also to receive 500 out of the general assets of the testator.

Scope—This section lays down the rule of distribution of both specific and demonstrative legacies from the same fund.

Ademption where stock specifically bequeathed, does not exist at testator's death 158 [Sue S. 145] Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed does not exist at the testator's death, the legacy is deemed

Ademption pro tanto where stock specifically bequeathed, exists in part only at testator's death 159 [Sue S 146] Where stock which has been specifically bequeathed exists only in part at the testator's death, the legacy is deemed so far as regards that part of the stock which has ceased to exist.

When thing bequeathed is a valuable to be received by testator from third person, and testator himself, or his representative receives it, the receipt of such sum of money or other commodity by the testator shall not constitute an ademption, but if he mixes it up with the general mass of his property the legacy is adeemed.

(iii) A bequeaths to B the sum of 10,000 rupees in promissory notes of the Government of India which he has power under his marriage settlement to dispose of by Will. Afterwards in A's lifetime, the fund is converted into consols by virtue of an authority contained in the settlement.

No one of these legacies has been adeemed.

Notes—Because the alteration of the fund has not been made by the testator, but by the legislature, the act may not be allowed to have the effect of prejudicing the legatee, and since the change might neither have been foreseen nor could be prevented by the testator, it would be unjust to permit that transaction to defeat the disposition specifically made by his Will. *Partridge v. The effect is the same where the agent makes the conversion without being authorised by the testator. Harris v Asher, 2 De G & Sm 436.

CHAPTER XVII

OF THE PAYMENT OF LIABILITIES IN RESPECT OF THE SUBJECT OF A BEQUEST

167. [SUC § 154.] (1) Where property specifically bequeathed is subject at the death of testator to any pledge, lien or incumbrance created by the testator himself or by any person under whom he claims, then, unless a contrary intention appears by the Will, the legatee if he accepts the bequest, shall accept it subject to such pledge or incumbrance, and shall (as between himself and the testator's estate) be liable to make good the amount of such pledge or incumbrance.

(2) A contrary intention shall not be inferred from any direction which the Will may contain for the payment of the testator's debts generally.

Explanation—A periodical payment in the nature of land revenue or in the nature of rent is not such an incumbrance as is contemplated by this section.

Scope of the section—This section provides that where the interest or produce of a fund is bequeathed to any person and the Will affords no indication of an intention that enjoyment of the bequests should be of limited duration the principle as well as interest belongs to the legatee. This section although it speaks only of the interest or produce of a fund, applies equally to immovable property. See illustration (iii) to the section. A gift of an income is a gift of the corpus, even if it is through the medium of a trust. 21 Ind Cas 212. Also the bequest of rent shall pass the funds itself if there is a clear indication of the intention that the interest or the produce of a fund, should be given to the legatee.

OF BEQUESTS OF ANNUITIES

(iii) A bequeaths an annuity of 500 rupees to B for life and on B's death the C is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees during his life. C if he survives B, is entitled to an annuity of 500 rupees from B's death until his own death.

Notes—In England it makes no difference whether it be a bequest of a specified sum to purchase an annuity or direct to purchase an annuity of a specified sum Yates v Campton, 2 P W 308, Dixon v Heron, 1 R & M 605, Re Robbins (1906) 2 Ch 648, (1907) 2 Ch 8

OF LEGACIES TO CREDITORS AND PORTIONERS.

177 [SUC S 164] Where a debtor bequeaths a legacy to his creditor, and it does not appear from the Will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the debt, the creditor shall be entitled to the legacy as well as to the amount of the debt

Notes—This section appears to be advisedly worded so as to narrow the field of enquiry to which large extension has been given in England. So where a testator is to be benefited and the property by which his debts are precluded from going outside the estate it seems to have been given to this effect Born L R 863=3 Ind Cas 181.

178 [SUC S 165] Where a parent, who is under obligation by contract to provide a portion for a child, fails to do so, and afterwards bequeaths a legacy to the child, and does not intimate by his Will that the legacy is meant as a satisfaction of the portion, the child shall be entitled to receive the legacy as well as the portion

In that capacity he receives the legacy of 1,000 rupees and accounts to B for the rents of the lands of Sultanpur which accrued after the death of the testator and before the death of C. In his individual character he retains the lands of Sultanpur in opposition to the Will.

Scope—A devisee or legatee is not precluded from claiming derivatively through another property which such other person has taken in opposition to the Will. Thus a man may be tenant by courtesy, in respect of an estate of inheritance taken by his wife in opposition to Will under which he has accepted benefits, without affecting his title to those benefits. Lady Cavan v Pulleney, 2 Ves Jun 544.

Person taking in individual capacity under Will may in other character elect to take in opposition 185 [SUC S. 172] A person who in his individual capacity takes a benefit under a Will may, in another character, elect to take in opposition to the Will.

The estate of Sultanpur is settled upon A for life, and after his death, upon B, A leaves the estate of Sultanpur to D, and 2,000 rupees to B, and 1,000 rupees to C, who is B's only child. B dies intestate shortly after the testator, without having made an election. C takes out administration to B, and as administrator elects to keep the estate of Sultanpur in opposition to the Will, and to relinquish the legacy of 2,000 rupees. C may do this and yet claim his legacy of 1,000 rupees under the Will.

Notes—This section corresponds to clause 4 of section 35 of the Transfer of Property Act. Under that section a person taking no benefit directly under a transaction but deriving a benefit under it indirectly need not elect, and a person who in his own capacity takes a benefit under the transaction may in another do so. 42 Ind Cas 18—20 O C 243. A creditor by accepting a legacy is not bound to give up his claim for debts. 25 M 361.

186 [SUC S 172 Exception] Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 180 to 185, where a particular gift is expressed in the Will to be in lieu of something belonging to the legatee which is also in terms disposed of by the Will, then, if the legatee claims that thing, he must relinquish the particular gift, but he is not bound to relinquish any other benefit given to him by the Will.

Under A's marriage settlement his wife is entitled, if she survives him, to the enjoyment of the estate of Sultanpur during her life. A by his Will bequeaths to his wife an annuity of 200 rupees during her life in lieu of her interest in the estate of Sultanpur, which estate he bequeaths to his son. He also gives his wife a legacy of 1,000 rupees. The widow elects to take what she is entitled to under the settlement. She is bound to relinquish the annuity but not the legacy of 1,000 rupees.

187. [SUC. S 174] Acceptance of a benefit given by a Will constitutes an election by the legatee to take under the Will, if he had knowledge of his right to elect and of those circumstances which would influence the judgment of a reasonable man in making an election, or if he waives inquiry into the circumstances.

REPRESENTATIVE TITLE TO PROPERTY OF DECEASED ON SUCCESSION

211 [Sue S 179] (r) The executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased person vests in him as such

The words in the latter part of the section 'from time to time appoint' relate to an extension of time for putting in the account and does not authorize the Court to go on calling upon the executors to exhibit accounts from time to time as often as the Court thinks fit. 25 C 250, 44 Ind Cas 58. OF ASSENT TO A LEGACY BY EXECUTOR OR ADMINISTRATOR

(ii) A by his will, has bequeathed to C his house in Calcutta in the tenancy of B C is not entitled to receive the rents without the assent of the executor or administrator

Notes—The essence of the matter is that, as a protection to the executor, the law ordains that every legatee whether general or specific and whether of chattels real or personal, must obtain the executor's assent to the legacy before his title as legatee can be complete and perfect, before such assent however, the legatee has no right to his own personal representative and in case of the out But this section is unfortunate 78 Interest taken by the be mortgaged before the

Notes—After the executor has given his assent to the legacy he is not competent under this section to deal further with the property 28 C L J 141

334 [Sue S 294 & Pro Ss 114, 148] The assent of an executor or administrator to a legacy may be conditional and if the condition is one which he has a right to enforce, and it is not performed, there is no assent

The executor assents to the bequest on condition that B shall within a limited time, pay the amount due on the mortgage at the testator's death. The amount is not paid. There is no assent.

(ii) The executor assents to a bequest on condition that the legatee shall pay him a sum of money. The payment is not made. The assent is nevertheless valid.

Notes—These assents, like those to marriages of legatees may, as would seem be made dependent upon a precedent conditional event connected with the administration of the assets 1 Rep Leg 743

(2) Assent shall be implied if in his manner of administering the property, he does any act which is referable to his character of legatee and is not referable to his character of executor or administrator

OF THE PAYMENT AND APPORTIONMENT OF ANNUITIES

338 [Sue S 298 & Pro S 118] Where an annuity is given by a Will, and no time is fixed for its commencement, it shall commence from the testator's death, and the first payment shall be made at the expiration of a year next after that event

339 [Sue S 299 & Pro S 119] Where there is a direction that the annuity shall be paid quarterly or monthly, the first payment shall be due at the end of the first quarter or first month, as the case may be, after the testator's death, and shall, if the executor or administrator thinks fit, be paid when due, but the executor or administrator shall not be bound to pay it till the end of the year.

When annuity, to be paid quarterly or monthly, first falls due

Notes—Where a testator directs payment of an annuity (however given) to be made at the expiration of the first quarter, or half year, after his death, it will be due at that time although not in fact payable by the executor until the end of the year Storer v Prestage, 3 Mad 167, Houghton v Franklin, 1 Sim & Stu 390

340 [SUC S 300 & PRO S 120] (1) Where there is a direction that

Dates of successive payments when first payment directed to be made within a given time or on day certain : death of annuitant before date of payment

the first payment of an annuity shall be made within one month or any other division of time from the death of the testator, or on a day certain, the successive payments are to be made on the anniversary of the earliest day on which the Will authorizes the first payment to be made

(2) If annuitant dies in the interval between the times of payment, an apportioned share of the annuity shall be paid to his representative

Notes—This section lays down that if an annuity is directed to be paid within one month from the testator's death, the successive payments are to be made on the anniversary of the day. But according to English Law, where a testator gives an annuity to A for life, and directs the first payment to be made within one month from the death of the testator, and though the first year's payment is due at the appointed time the payment for the second year does not become due till the end of the year Williams on Executors, p 1116 legacy is given for life, the sum bequeathed shall at the end of the year be invested in such securities as the High Court may, by any general rule authorize or direct, and the proceeds there of shall be paid to the legatee as the same shall accrue due

Notes—This section contemplates legacy other than specific legacy. From the word "sum" used in this section it is clear that the legacy is a pecuniary legacy. This section following the rule laid down in Horne v Lord Dartmouth, 7 Ves 137 laid down that the sum bequeathed should be invested in such securities as the High Court may by any general rule to be made from time to time authorize and direct. The legatee shall be paid the proceeds thereof disposal of intermediate interest

(2) The intermediate interest shall form part of the residue of the testator's estate

Notes—Although the legatees are not entitled to receive the principal of the legacies before the time of payment arrives yet where the legacies are not charged under real estate they are entitled to have them either appropriated or secured, according to circumstances (Rep 793)

343 [SUC S 303 & PRO S 123] Where an annuity is given and no fund

is charged with its payment or appropriated by the Will to answer it, a government annuity of the specified amount shall be purchased, or, if no such annuity can be obtained, then a sum sufficient to produce the annuity shall be invested for that purpose in securities of the kind mentioned in section 341.

Notes—This section gives direction to the executors what they are to do when an annuity is given by a Will and no fund is charged with payment or appropriated by the Will to answer it In such a case it is the duty of the executor to purchase a Government annuity of the specific amount But where such annuity cannot be obtained he is at liberty to invest sufficient amount in such securities as the High Court may by general rule authorize or direct Trafford v Boehm, 3 Atk 444

344 [Sue S 304 & Pro Ss 124, 148] Where a bequest is contingent, the executor or administrator is not bound to invest the amount of the legacy, but may transfer the whole residue of the estate to the residuary legatee, if any, on his giving sufficient security for the payment of the legacy if it shall become due

345 [Sue S 305] (1) Where the testator has bequeathed the residue of the estate to a person for life without any direction to invest it in any particular securities, so much thereof as is not at the time of the testator's decease invested in securities of the kind mentioned in section 341 shall be converted into money and invested in such securities

(2) This section shall not apply if the deceased was a Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina or an exempted person

Notes—This section follows the rule laid down in Howe v Earl of Dartmouth 7 Ves 137, as to the conversion of perishable property given to person in succession and not specifically

346 [Sue S 306 & Pro S 125] Where the testator has bequeathed the residue of his estate to a person for life with a direction that it shall be invested in certain specified securities so much of the estate as is not at time of his death invested in securities of the specified kind shall be converted into money and invested in such securities

Notes—In section 345 the executor is authorized in the absence of any direction by the testator to invest the residue in any particular securities, to invest the same or so much of it as is not invested, in authorized Government securities This section lays down that where there is a direction by the testator that the residue should be invested in a stock or security that intention should be given effect to Bale v Hooper, 5 De G M & G 338 344

347 [Sue S 307 & Pro Ss 126, 148] Such conversion and investment as are contemplated by sections 345 and 346 shall be made at such times and in such manner as the executor or administrator thinks fit and, until such conversion and investment are completed, the person who holds be for the time being entitled to the income of the fund when so invested shall receive interest at the rate of four per cent per annum upon the market value (to be computed as at the date of the testator's death) of such part of the fund as has not been so invested

Provided that the rate of interest prior to completion of investment shall be six per cent per annum when the testator was a Hindu Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina or an exempted person

Notes—Express trust for conversion must be strictly pursued according to directions Crazen v Cradlock, 20 L T N S 635 But where trustees have a discretionary power to convert or not or at such time as they think fit the Court cannot interfere with the exercise of that power In re Senell's Trust, 11 L R Eq 80

(3) Such payment into the Court of the District Judge, or to the Court of Wards, in the case may be, shall be a sufficient discharge for the money so paid.

(4) Money when paid in under this section shall be invested in the purchase of Government securities, which, with the interest thereon, shall be transferred or paid to the person entitled thereto, or otherwise applied for his benefit, as the Judge or the Court of Wards, as the case may be, may direct

OF THE PRODUCE AND INTEREST OF LEGACIES

349 [SUC S 309 & PRO S 128] The legatee of a specific legacy is entitled to the clear produce thereof, if any, from

Legatee's title to produce of specific legacy

the testator's death

Exception—A specific bequest, contingent in its terms, does not comprise the produce of the legacy between the death of the testator and the vesting of the legacy. The clear produce of it forms part of the residue of the testator's estate

Illustrations

(i) A bequeaths his flock of sheep to B. Between the death of A and delivery by his executor the sheep are shorn or some of the ewes produce lambs. The wool and lambs are the property of B.

(ii) A bequeaths his Government securities to B, but postpones the delivery of them till the death of C. The interest which falls due between the death of A and the death of C belongs to B, and, must unless he is a minor, be paid to him as it is received.

(iii) The testator bequeaths all his four per cent Government promissory notes to A when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he completes that age, is entitled to receive the notes, but the interest which accrues in respect of them between the testator's death and A's completing 18, forms part of the residue

What is the residue of the estate? The residue of the estate is the residue of the testator's estate after the payment of the debts and the satisfaction of the legacies. The residue of the testator's estate is the residue of the testator's estate after the payment of the debts and the satisfaction of the legacies. fund from the testator's death.

Exception—A general residuary bequest contingent in its terms does not comprise the income which may accrue upon the fund bequeathed between the death of the testator and the vesting of the legacy. Such income goes as undisposed of

(ii) The testator bequeaths the residue of his property to A, when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he completes that age is entitled to receive the residue. The income which has accrued in respect of it since the testator's death goes as undisposed of.

Scope—In case of a general residuary bequest which is vested the legatee is entitled to the interest or produce of the residuary fund from the death of the testator, but if such a bequest is contingent the interest or produce goes as undisposed of. Hend T L L 387

351 [Sue S 311 & Pro S 130] Where no time has been fixed for the payment of a general legacy, interest begins to run from expiration of one year from the testator's death.

Exception—(1) Where the legacy is bequeathed in satisfaction of a debt, interest runs from the death of the testator.

(2) Where the testator was a parent or a more remote ancestor of the legatee, or has put himself in the place of a parent of the legatee, the legacy shall bear interest from the death of the testator.

(3) Where a sum is bequeathed to a minor with a direction to pay for his maintenance out of it, interest is payable from the death of the testator.

Notes—The testator may pay the legacy within twelve months, but he is not compelled to do so, he is not to pay interest for any time within twelve months, although during the time he may have received interest but if he have assets he is to pay interest from the end of twelve months whether the assets are productive or not. Pearson v Pearson, 1 Sch & Lef 10, see also 41 M L J 486, 43 C 201, 29 M 115.

352 [Sue S 312 & Pro S 181] Where a time has been fixed for the payment of a general legacy, interest begins to run from the time so fixed. The interest up to such time forms part of the residue of the testator's estate.

Exception—Where the testator was a parent or a more remote ancestor of the legatee, or has put himself in the place of a parent of the legatee and the legatee is a minor, the legacy shall bear interest from the death of the testator, unless a specific sum is given by the Will for maintenance, or unless the Will contains a direction to the contrary.

Notes—Where a time of payment is named by the testator, the general rule is that legacies will not carry interest before the arrival of the appointed period of payment. Heath v Perry, 3 Atk 101, Tyrrell v Tyrrell, 4 Ves 1. The rule is the same even where the legacies are vested. Heath v Perry, 3 Atk 101.

353 [Sue S 313 & Pro S 132] The rate of interest shall be four per cent per annum in all cases except when the testator was a Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina or an exempted person, in which case it shall be six per cent per annum.

Notes—In England the rule at present established is to allow four per cent whether the legacy be charged upon land, or payable out of the personal estate only unless the Will directs otherwise. Williams on Executors, 11th Ed 1164, Inledon v Northcote, 3 Atk 432, Re Campbell, (1893) 3 Ch 472, Re Davy, (1908) 1 Ch 61.

354 [Sue S 314 & Pro S 133] No interest is payable on the arrears of an annuity within the first year from the death of the testator, although a period earlier than the expiration of that year may have been fixed by the Will for making the first payment of the annuity.

Notes—Annuities, where no time of payment is mentioned by the testator, are considered as commencing from the death of the testator, and consequently the first payment will be due at the end of the year from that event, if therefore it be not made, the interest, in those cases where it is allowed at all, must be computed from that period. 2 Roper on Legacies 3rd Ed p 308

OF THE REFUNDINGS OF LEGACIES

356 [Sue S 316 & Pro Ss 135 148] When an executor or administrator has paid a legacy under the order of a Court, he is entitled to call upon the legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

Notes—In Newman v Barton 1 Ves Sen 194 the Court held that he could not oblige the legatee to do so in the second.

357 [Sue S 357 & Pro S 136] When an executor or administrator has voluntarily paid a legacy, he cannot call upon a legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

Notes—Where the payment of the legacy by the executor or administrator is voluntary, he can not sue the legatee for a refund even when the assets prove insufficient to pay all the legacies. Coppin v Coppin 2 P Will 292 (295)

358 [Sue S 318 & Pro S 137.] When the time prescribed by the Will for the performance of a condition has elapsed, without the condition having been performed, and the executor or administrator has thereupon without fraud distributed the assets, in such case if further time has been allowed under section 137 for the performance of the condition and the condition has been performed accordingly, the legacy cannot be claimed from the executor or administrator, but those to whom he has paid it are liable to refund the amount.

Notes—The principle upon which an executor is compellable to pay is thus stated by Sir Strange R in Orr v Kains, 2 Ves Sen 194 "The rule is that whenever an executor pays a legacy it is presumed he has sufficient to pay all legacies, and the Court will oblige him if solvent to pay the rest and not permit him to maintain a suit to compel the legatee whom he voluntarily paid to refund."

359 [Sue S 319 & Pro S 138] When the executor or administrator has paid away the assets in legacies and he is afterwards obliged to discharge a debt of which he had no previous notice, he is entitled to call upon each legatee to refund in proportion.

Notes—If executors pay away the assets in legacies and afterwards debts appear, and they be obliged to discharge them (of which debts they had no notice before the legacies were paid) the executors may by a suit compel the legatees to refund. Nelkroff v Bucke 1 Chan Ca 135, Doe v Guf, 3 Last 620 123

360 [Sue S. 320 & Pro E 139] Where an executor or administrator has given such notices as the High Court may, by Distribution of assets any general rule, prescribe or, if no such rule has been made, as the High Court would give in an administration suit, for creditors to any person of whose claims he shall not have had notice at the time of such distribution

Provided that nothing herein contained shall prejudice the right of any creditor or claimant to follow the assets, or any part thereof, in the hands of the persons who may have received the same respectively

Notes—This section is based on section 29 of Stat 22 & 23 Vict c 35. The creditors and other beneficiaries claim, may at the expiration of the estate without being liable notice at the time of the distribution Clegg v Rawland, 3 L R Fq 368

361. [Sue S 321 & Pro Ss 140, 148] A creditor who has not received payment of his debt may call upon a legatee who has received payment of his legacy to refund, whether the assets of the testator's estate were or were not sufficient at the time of his death to pay both debts and legacies and whether the payment of the legacy by the executor or administrator was voluntary or not.

Notes—That a creditor has a right to call upon the legatees to refund is a proposition which can not be doubted. The certainty that a creditor has such a privilege was declared by the Court of Chancery in Noel v Robinson, 1 Vern 94 and Newman v Barton, 2 Vern 205

362 [Sue S. 362 & Pro S 141] If the assets were sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death, a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy, or who has been compelled to refund under section 361, cannot oblige one who has received payment in full to refund, whether the legacy were paid to him with or without suit, although the assets have subsequently become deficient by the wasting of the executor

all the legacies and one or without suit, payment of his render it deficient to discharge the satisfied legatee to refund, andly because the legatee is utibus jura subreptum (the law over their rights) Rop 2nd Ed

363 [Sue S 323 & Pro E 142] If the assets were not sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy must, before he can call on a satisfied legatee to refund first proceed against the executor or administrator if he is solvent, but if the executor or administrator is insolvent or not liable to pay, the unsatisfied legatee can oblige each satisfied legatee to refund in proportion general rule that an unsatisfied legatee cannot who has been paid by the executor because the inst the executor (Noel v Robinson 1 Vern 90) is admitted assets for payment of all. But an the executor is in insolvent circumstances for e no redress against him he would be without it a upon the other legatees to refund Orr v Kaines

364 [Sue S 324 & Pro S 143] The refunding of one legatee to another shall not exceed the sum by which the satisfied legacy ought to have been reduced if the estate had been properly administered

Limit to refunding of one legatee to another

Illustration

A has bequeathed 240 rupees to B 480 rupees to C, and 720 rupees to D. The assets are only 1,200 rupees and, if properly administered, would give 200 rupees to B, 400 rupees to C and 600 rupees to D. C and D have been paid their legacies in full, leaving nothing to B. B can oblige C to refund 80 rupees, and D to refund 120 rupees.

Notes—That as all the legatees are, upon a deficiency of assets to be paid in proportion, so if the executor paid one of them the rest should make him refund in 'proportion'. Per Joseph Jekeyel in Anon 1 P Will 405

Refunding to be without interest

365 [Sue S 325 & Pro S 144] The refunding shall in all cases be without interest

Notes—The rule underlying this section is thus stated by Lord Eldon in Gill v Steele 1 Swanst 200. 'If a legacy have been erroneously paid to a legatee who has no further property in the estate in recalling that payment, I apprehend that the rule of the Court is not to charge interest; but if the legatee is entitled to another fund making interest in hand of the Court justice must be done out of his share.'

366 [Sue S 326 & Pro S. 145] The surplus or residue of the deceased's property, after payment of debts and legacies shall be paid to the residuary legatee when any has been appointed by the Will

OF THE LIABILITY OF AN EXECUTOR OR ADMINISTRATOR FOR DEVASTATION

368 [SUC § 327 & PRO S 146] When an executor or administrator misapplies the estate of the deceased, or subjects it to loss or damage, he is liable to make good the loss or damage so occasioned

Liability of executor or administrator for devastation

(i) The executor pays out of the estate an unfounded claim. He is liable to make good the loss.

(ii) The deceased had a valuable lease renewable by notice which the executor neglects to give at the proper time. The executor is liable to make good the loss.

(iii) The deceased had a lease of less value than the rent payable for it, but terminable on notice at a particular time. The executor neglects to give the notice. He is liable to make good the loss.

Notes—"The general rule adopted, with respect to the liability of executors and administrators, is based on two principles, 1st that in order to do justice the Court is extremely liberal in its construction of the law, and 2nd that it is not to hold executors and administrators liable for every mistake or omission, but only for such as are the result of negligence or fraud."

(i) The executor absolutely releases a debt due to the deceased from a solvent person, or compounds with a debtor who is able to pay in full. The executor is liable to make good the amount.

(ii) The executor neglects to sue for a debt till the debtor is able to plead that the claim is barred by limitation and the debt is thereby lost to the estate. The executor is liable to make good the amount.

Notes—An executor or administrator is liable at law as far as devastavit, for assets wasted by his negligence. Seamen v Dee 1 Vent. 193. An executor who permits an interest bearing debt of his testator to remain unpaid while possessed of assets sufficient to satisfy the principal cannot set up the payment of interest accrued since the death of the testator against the claim of a creditor. Ibid. Acts of negligence or careless administration as defeat the rights of creditors or legatees, or parties entitled in distribution amounts to a devastavit. For if a person accepts the trust of a testator he must perform it: he must use due diligence, and not suffer the estate to be injured by his neglect. Williams on Executors, 11th Ed p 1474.

PART I

SUITS RELATING TO LAND

2 This Part shall extend to such local areas, and come into force therein on such dates, as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India directs.*

Extent and commencement of Part I

3 (1) The Local Government may, "subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, make rules for determining the value of land for purposes of jurisdiction in the suits mentioned in the Court Fees Act, 1870, section 7, paragraphs v and vi and paragraph x, clause (d)"

Power for Local Government to make rules for determining value of land for jurisdictional purposes

(2) The rules may determine the value of any class of land, or of any interest in land, in the whole or any part of a local area and may prescribe different values for different places within the same local area

Notes—Where the suit is for the acquisition of a contingent interest in land and not for possession or for a present interest, the rules of the Local Government framed under s. 3 will not apply, and the value for purposes of jurisdiction will be that set forth in the plaint. 18 J. R. 1897

4 Where a suit mentioned in the Court Fees Act, 1870, section 7, paragraph iv, of Schedule II article 17, relates to land or an interest in land of which the value has been determined by rules under the last foregoing section, the amount at which, for purposes of jurisdiction, the relief sought in the suit is valued shall not exceed the value of the land or interest as determined by those rules

Valuation of relief in certain suits relating to land not to exceed the value of the land

Notes—A suit which is one for declaration and relates to occupancy land or interest in occupancy land is clearly covered by s. 4 of the Act, which must be read with the rules framed under the provisions of s. 3 to determine the value for purposes of jurisdiction. 54 P. R. 1914—238 P. L. R. 1914—153 P. W. R. 1914. The proper valuation for purposes of jurisdiction of a suit for declaration that certain property is the absolute property of the plaintiff and is not liable to partition is thirty times the jama. 81 P. R. 1918—46 Ind. Cas. 490

5 (1) The Local Government shall, before making rules under section 3, consult the High Court with respect thereto

Making an enforcement of rules

(2) A rule under that section shall not take effect till the expiration of one month after the rule has been published in the local official Gazette

6 On and from the date on which rules under section 3 take effect in any part of the territories under the administration of the Governor of Fort St. George in Council to which the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, extends section 14 of that Act shall be repealed as regards that part of those territories

ACT NO VII OF 1929

(RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL ON THE 12TH APRIL, 1929)

An Act to make provision for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes, and for certain other purposes

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes, and for certain other purposes hereinafter appearing, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Short title, extent, commencement and duration 1 (1) This Act may be called The Trade Disputes Act, 1929

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Paraganas

(3) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, appoint

Notes — The out break of industrial unrest on a large scale was a feature of the movement of India to explore the extent of industrial disputes the conclusion that in the not likely to be effective by reason of the growth

Interpretations

2 In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,

(a) "Board" means a Board of Conciliation constituted under this Act,

(b) "Court" means a Court of Inquiry constituted under this Act,

(c) "employer" in the case of any industry, business or undertaking carried on by any department of the Government, means the authority prescribed in this behalf or, where no authority is prescribed,

(d) a person shall be deemed to be appointed as the chairman or other member of the Board if he is appointed and with any trade or industry directly affected by the dispute,

(e) "lock out" means the closing of a place of employment, or the suspension of work, or the refusal by an employer to continue to employ any number of persons employed by him, where such closing, suspension or refusal occurs in consequence of a dispute and is intended for the purpose of compelling those persons, or of adding another employer in compelling persons employed by him, to accept terms or conditions of or affecting employment,

(f) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act,

(g) "public utility service" means—

(i) any railway service which the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be a public utility service for the purposes of this Act, or

(ii) any postal, telegraph or telephone service, or

(iii) any industry, business or undertaking which supplies light or water to the public, or

(iv) and system of public conservancy or sanitation,

(h) "railway company" means a railway company as defined in section 3 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890,

(i) "strike" means a cessation of work by a body of persons employed in any trade or industry acting in combination, or a concerted refusal, or a refusal under a common understanding, of any number of persons who are or have been so employed to continue work or to accept employment,

(j) "trade dispute" means any dispute or difference between employers and workmen, or between workmen and workmen which is connected with the employment or non employment or the terms of the employment, or with the conditions of labour of any persons, and

(k) "workman" means any person employed in any trade or industry to do any skilled or unskilled manual or clerical work for hire or reward, but does not include any person employed in the naval, military or air service of the Crown or in the Royal Indian Marine Service

Sub Clause (c)—From the wording of this clause it is clear that the definition of the word 'employer' is not intended to be exhaustive—Report of the Select Committee

Sub Clause (d)—In view of the provision which we have made in clause (4) that all the members of a Court of Inquiry shall be persons unconnected with the dispute or with any industry affected thereby, we have considered it desirable to give some definition of what we mean by the expression 'an independent person' and have inserted a definition accordingly as clause (d) of this clause'—Report of the Select Committee

Sub Clause (g)—'We are of opinion that a wide power enabling the Government to declare any industry business or undertaking to be a public utility service is desirable on all accounts'—Report of the Select Committee

Before omitted it After considering certain other industries reached the conclusion that comprised all the services in view of the fact that the power which the Bill as introduced conferred upon the Government is only exercisable after three months' notice, we think there should be no difficulty in providing for any necessary additions to the clause by an amendment of the Act should occasion arise'—Report of the Select Committee

Clause (k)—'We have amplified the definition of workman on the lines of the similar definition in the Canadian Act and at the same time made it clear that the expression includes clerical workers, and we have added the Royal Indian Marine Service to the services which the Bill excludes from its scope'—Report of the Select Committee

Reference of Disputes to Courts and Boards

§ If any trade dispute exists or is apprehended between an employer and any of his workmen, the Local Government or, where the employer is the head of a department under the control of the Governor General in Council or is a Railway Company, the Governor General in Council may, by order in writing—

(a) refer any matters appearing to be connected with or relevant to the dispute to a Court of Inquiry to be appointed by the Local Government or the Governor General in Council, as the case may be; or

(b) refer the dispute to a Board of Conciliation to be appointed by the Local Government or the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, for promoting a settlement thereof

Provided that, where both parties to the dispute apply, whether separately or conjointly, for a reference to a Court or where both parties apply whether separately or conjointly for a reference to a Board and the authority having the power to appoint is satisfied that the persons applying represent the majority of each party, a Court or a Board as the case may be, shall be appointed accordingly

Notes—The main part of the Bill falls into three parts. Clauses 3 to 14 relate to the establishment of tribunals for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes. This part of the Bill is based generally on the British Industrial Courts Act of 1919 and its detailed provisions are adopted for the most part from clauses in that Act. The main difference is that, whereas the British Act sets up a standing Industrial Court, the Conciliation Boards which the Bill purposes to establish are intended to be appointed ad hoc like the Courts of Inquiry in order to deal with particular disputes.—Statement of Objects and Reasons 'We have considered various proposals designed to lay upon the Government a definite obligation to convene a Court of Inquiry or a Board of Conciliation in cases where one of the parties so required. We think however, that unless both parties are agreed in desiring a reference it would be useless to fetter the discretion of the Government as to the time at which the matter is ripe for action under this clause. At the same time, we think that no option should be left to the Government to refuse to appoint a Court or Board where the Government is assured that both parties are agreed as to the necessity of a reference as well as to the form which it should take'—Report of the Select Committee

Courts of Inquiry.

4 (1) A Court shall consist of an independent chairman and such other independent persons as the appointing authority thinks fit, or may, if such authority thinks fit, consist of one independent person.

(2) A Court, having the prescribed quorum may act notwithstanding any vacancy in the number of its members other than the chairman.

Notes.—This section lays down as to how a Board is to be constituted. As regards the definition of the word 'independent,'—the clause (4) of section 2. Two things are necessary for a Court to act namely (1) quorum and (2) appointment of Chairman. When a Chairman is appointed he can proceed to perform its function notwithstanding the fact that there is a vacancy in the number of its members. As already mentioned, we have provided that in every case a Court of inquiry whether it consists of one or more persons, shall not include persons having any interest in the dispute or any industry affected by it.—Report of the Select Committee

5 (1) A Court shall, either in public or in private, at its discretion, inquire into the matters referred to it and report thereon to the authority by which the Court was appointed

(2) A Court may, if it thinks fit, make interim reports

Notes.—The object of Courts of inquiry which will ordinarily be composed of persons having no direct interest in the dispute will be to investigate and report on such questions connected with dispute as may be referred to them.—Statement of Objects and Reasons

Boards of Conciliation

6 (1) A Board shall consist of a chairman and two or four other members, as the appointing authority thinks fit, or may, if such authority thinks fit, consist of one independent person

(2) Where the Board consists of more than one person, the chairman shall be an independent person and the other members shall be either independent person or persons appointed in equal numbers to represent the parties to the dispute. All persons appointed to represent any party shall be appointed on the recommendation of that party

Provided that, if any party fails to make the necessary recommendation within the prescribed time the appointing authority shall select and appoint such persons as it thinks fit to represent that party

(3) A Board having the prescribed quorum, may act notwithstanding any vacancy in the number of its members other than the chairman

Provided that, where a Board includes an equal number of persons representing the parties to the dispute and the services of any such person cease to be available before the Board has completed its work, the authority appointing the Board shall appoint, in the manner specified in sub section (2) another person to take his place, and the proceedings shall be continued before the Board so reconstituted

Notes.—A Board of Conciliation may consist of (1) one independent person or (2) one chairman who must be an independent person and two or four other members. In the latter case the members may be either independent persons or may be persons appointed in equal numbers to represent the parties to the dispute. When the prescribed quorum is present the Board is entitled to act notwithstanding any vacancy in its members provided the chairman is duly appointed. We have made an amendment to sub clause (2) to make clear the original intention which was that only persons appointed to a Board to represent the parties should be appointed on the recommendation of the parties and we have made slight alterations in the proviso to sub clause (3) in order to bring it into line with the wording of clause 10.—Report of the Select Committee

7 (1) Where a dispute has been referred to a Board under this Act, it shall be the duty of the Board to endeavour to bring about a settlement of the same and for this purpose the Board shall in such manner as it thinks fit and without delay, investigate the dispute and all matters affecting the merits thereof and the right settlement thereof, and in so doing may do all such things as it thinks fit for the purpose of inducing the parties to come to a fair and amicable settlement of the dispute, and may adjourn the proceedings for any period sufficient in its opinion to allow the parties to agree upon terms of settlement

(2) If a settlement of a dispute is arrived at by the parties thereto after it has been referred to a Board and during the course of the investigation thereof, a memorandum of the settlement shall be drawn up by the Board and signed by the parties, and the Board shall send a report of the settlement, together with the memorandum, to the authority by which the Board was appointed

(3) If no such settlement is arrived at during the course of the investigation, the Board shall as soon as possible after the close thereof, send a full report regarding the dispute to the authority by which the Board was appointed, setting forth the proceedings and steps taken by the Board for the purpose of ascertaining the facts and circumstances relating to the dispute and of bringing about a settlement thereof, together with a full statement of such facts and circumstances and its findings thereon and the recommendation of the Board for the determination of the dispute

(4) The recommendation of the Board shall deal with each item of the dispute, and shall state in plain language what in the opinion of the Board ought and ought not to be done by the respective parties concerned

Notes—This object of Boards of Conciliation, which will ordinarily include dispute, will be to secure a settlement of the and Reasons Neither party will be under any of the Court or the advice of the Board, and in brought to an end during the deliberations of the d reliance is placed on the force of public opinion publication of the report of the tribunal to arrive at just conclusions on the merits of the dispute Ibid

and may in the case of any other member, appoint another independent person to fill the vacancy, and the proceedings shall be continued before the Court or Board so re constituted

(2) Where the Court or Board consists of one person only and his services cease to be available as aforesaid, the appointing authority shall appoint another independent person in his place, and the proceedings shall be continued before the person so appointed

Notes—In view of the fact that members of Courts and Boards will now invariably be independent persons except in the case where a Board is composed of an independent chairman and an equal number of representatives of each party and that the case of a vacancy in the office of any such representative member is already dealt with in clause 6, clause 10 will now apply to independent members only, and we have amended it accordingly —Report of the Select Committee

Form of report 11 The report of a Court or Board shall be in writing and shall be signed by all the members of the Court or Board

Provided that nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent any member of a Court or Board from recording a minute of dissent from a report or from any recommendation made therein

Notes—The report of the Court or Board must be in writing but it need not be unanimous

12 (1) The final and any interim report of a Court or Board, together with any minute of dissent recorded therewith, shall, as soon as possible after its receipt by the authority by which the Court or Board was appointed, be published by that authority in such manner as it thinks fit

(2) The said authority may publish or cause to be published from time to time, in such manner as such authority thinks fit, any information obtained, or conclusions arrived at by the Court or Board as the result or in the course of its inquiry or investigation

Notes—The report of Court or Board is to be published —Statement of Objects and Reasons 'We have amended this clause on the lines of the English Act to make it quite clear that every report of a Court or Board, whether a final or interim report, must be published, and that only the publication of such information or evidence as the appointing authority thinks fit should be left to its discretion —Report of the Select Committee

13 (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 12, there shall not be included in any report or publication made or authorised by a Court or Board or the authority appointing a Court or Board any information obtained by the Court or Board in the course of its inquiry or investigation as to any Trade Union or as to any individual business (whether carried on by a person firm or company) which is not available otherwise than through evidence given before the Court or Board "if the Trade Union, person, firm or company in question has preferred a request to the Court or Board that such information shall be treated as confidential",* nor shall any individual member of the Court or Board or any person concerned in the proceedings before it disclose any such information without the consent in writing of the Secretary of Trade Union or the person, firm or company in question, as the case may be"†

(2) If any member of a Court or Board or any person present at or concerned in the proceedings before a Court or Board wilfully† discloses an information in contravention of the provisions of sub section (1), he shall, on complaint made by or under the authority of the Trade Union or individual business affected, be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees

"(3) No criminal Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence under this section

(4) No criminal Court shall take cognizance of any offence under this section except with the previous sanction of the authority appointing such Court or Board, and no civil Court shall without the like sanction entertain any suit against a member of a Court or Board, or any person present at or concerned in the proceedings before a Court or Board, for any matter arising out of such proceedings"

Notes—Not only members of a Court or Board but also any person present at or concerned in the proceeding before a Court or Board shall be punishable for disclosing any information in contravention of the provision of sub section (1)

14 Subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be prescribed, any party to a dispute under inquiry or investigation Representation of parties by a Court or Board shall be entitled to be represented before the Court or Board by a legal practitioner

Notes—"We consider it inadvisable to forbid the representation of parties before Courts and Boards by legal practitioners subject only to exception. As we have redrafted the clause such representation will ordinarily be permissible, subject however to such conditions and restrictions as may be provided by rules"—Report of the Select Committee

Special Provision regarding Public Utility Services

15 (1) Any person who, being employed in a public utility service goes on strike in breach of contract without having given to his employer, within one month before so striking not less than fourteen days previous notice, or, having given such notice, is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to fifty rupees, or with both

(2) Any employer carrying on any public utility service who locks out his workmen in breach of contract without having given them, within one month before such lockout, not less than fourteen days notice in writing on his intention to lock them out or, having given such notice locks them out before the expiration of such notice, is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one month or with both

Provided that in any case where the offence under sub section (2) is a corporation, company or other association of persons any secretary, director or other officer or person concerned with the management thereof shall be punishable as therein provided unless he proves that the offence was committed without his consent

Provided that no offence under this section shall be tried in any Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class or in Council or the Local Government

Notes—"The second part of the Bill consists of clause 15 which relates to public utility services. "Public utility services" is defined in clause 2 (f), and it will be observed that, in accordance with this definition clause 15 is only applicable to such railway services as have been notified by the Governor in Council. The clause makes it penal offence for workers employed on monthly wages in public utility services to strike without previous notice. The clause is based on the principle that persons whose work is vital to the welfare of the community generally should not be entitled to enter into a strike before sufficient time has been given to examine the merits of their grievances and to explore the possibilities of arriving at a peaceful settlement. A somewhat similar type already exists in the provisions of Municipal Acts in India, and the same principle is followed in other countries.—Statement of Objects and Reasons.—The principle of this clause which has attracted certain criticisms. For example, it was pointed out that many persons are actually employed upon daily wages which in practice paid monthly, also that the clause would appear to penalise abstention from work on the part of a particular individual, and further that the clause is one-sided and inflicts no penalty upon an employer who locks out his workmen. The latter part we think, one which must certainly be met and is by the nature of his employment as casual or day to day labourer he must be entitled to cease work at any moment and be similarly liable to dismissal we agree that he should be excluded altogether from the operation of this clause. We have accordingly adopted a suggestion made by the Bombay Government which makes it clear that the cessation of work must be in the nature of a strike as defined in the Bill and we have provided that in order to render it penal offence the strike must be in breach of a definite contract between the employer and the workmen, we have further made a collateral provision penalising an employer for locking out his workmen in breach of any contract. We have decided to omit sub clause (2) of the Bill as introduced which imposed a severe penalty upon the abettor of an offence under sub clause (1) as we think such persons can be sufficiently dealt with under the ordinary criminal law of abetment.—Report of the Select Committee.

Special provision for Illegal Strikes and Lockouts

Illegal strikes and lockouts 16 (1) A strike or lockout shall be illegal which—

(a) has any object other than the furtherance of a trade dispute within the trade or industry in which the strikers or employers locking out are engaged, and

(b) is designed or calculated to inflict, severe, general and prolonged hardship upon the community and thereby to compel the Government to take action, or to apply any sums in aid of the strike or lockout.

(a) a trade dispute shall not be deemed to be within a trade or industry unless it is a dispute between employers and workmen or between workmen and workmen in that trade or industry which is connected with the employment or non employment or the terms of the employment or with the conditions of labour, of persons in that trade or industry,

(b) without prejudice to the generality of the expression 'trade or industry,' workmen shall be deemed to be within the same trade or industry if their wages or conditions of employment are determined in accordance with agreements made with the same employer or group of employers.

(4) A strike or lockout shall not be deemed to be calculated to compel the Government unless such compulsion might reasonably be expected as a consequence thereof.

Illegal strikes
, 2 and 7 of Act only in the first place, the strike or lockout must have other objects than the mere furtherance of a trade dispute within the industry to which the strikers or employers belong and, in the second place, the strike or lockout must be designed to coerce Government either directly or by inflicting hardship on the community. If these conditions are satisfied the strikes or lockouts are liable to punishment and are deprived of the protection granted to them by the Indian Trade Unions Act while persons refusing to take part in it are protected from trade union disabilities to which they might otherwise be subjected."—Statement of Objects and Reasons

Section 16 — "We have adopted this clause but with some amendments which we think will restrict its scope without materially impairing its effectiveness. Our attention has been practically directed to the provision of clause (b) of sub clause (1), which, as drafted we consider to be too wide and uncertain in its meaning. It is possible to hold that any strike inflicts a certain degree of hardship upon the community, and it would therefore be possible for a strike which fulfils both the conditions in (a) and (b) to be brought within this clause, although it was in the nature of a demonstration and lasted for no more than one day. The amendments which we suggest apart from the omission in clause (a), of the words 'or in addition to' accordingly make it clear that the strike or lockout must be designed to cause really severe, general and prolonged hardship to the community for the purpose of compelling Government to take any particular action, whether in connection with the dispute or otherwise. In sub clause (2) we have made it clear that, for the application of money to be illegal it must not merely tend to further or support the strike but have direct effect of so doing. This is intended to exclude a case in which money is spent upon the relief of the dependants of strikers. In sub clause 3 we have borrowed a provision from the English Act of 1927 further explaining the circumstances in which a group of workmen should be deemed to be within the same trade or industry."—Report of the Select Committee

17 (1) If any person declares, instigates, incites others to take part in, or otherwise acts in furtherance of, a strike or lockout which is illegal under the provisions of section 16, he shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both

Provided that no person shall be deemed to have committed an offence under this section by reason only of his having ceased to work or refused to continue to work or to accept employment

(2) No Court shall take cognizance of any offence under this section save on complaint made by, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government

(3) No Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence under this section

Notes — "We have somewhat modified the penalties provided for the instigation of an illegal strike."—Report of the Select Committee

18 (1) No person refusing to take part, or to continue to take part in any strike or lockout which is illegal under the provisions of section 16 shall, by reason of such refusal or by reason of any action taken by him under this section, be subject to expulsion from any trade union or society or to any fine or penalty, or to deprivation of any right or benefit to which he or his legal representatives would otherwise be entitled, or be liable to be placed in any respect, either directly or indirectly, under any disability or at any disadvantage as compared with other members of the union or society, anything to the contrary in the rules of a Trade Union or society notwithstanding

(2) Nothing in the rules of a trade union or society requiring the settlement of disputes in any manner shall apply to any proceeding for enforcing any right of exemption secured by this section, and in any such proceedings the Civil Court may, in lieu of ordering a person who has been expelled from membership of a trade union or society to be restored to membership order that he be paid out of the funds of the trade union or society such sum by way of compensation or damages as that Court thinks just

Rules

19. (1) The Governor General in Council in respect of industries, businesses and undertakings carried on by him or under his authority, or by a railway company, and the Local Government in respect of other businesses industries or undertakings within their respective provinces, may make rules for the purpose of giving effect to the provisions of this Act

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for all or any of the following matters namely—

(a) the powers and procedure of Courts and Boards, including rules as to the summoning of witnesses the production of documents relevant to the subject matter of an inquiry or investigation and the number of members necessary to form a quorum ;

(b) the allowances admissible to members of Courts and Boards and to witnesses ;

(c) the ministerial establishment which may be allotted to a Court or Board and the salaries and allowances payable to members of such establishments ;

(d) the conditions and restrictions subject to which persons may be represented by legal practitioners in proceedings under this Act before a Court or Board ;

(e) any other matter which is to be or may be prescribed

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India or the local official Gazette, as the case may be, and shall, on such publication, have effect as if enacted in this Act

Notes— The only alteration which we have made in this clause is consequential upon the amendment made to clause 14 —Notes on Clauses

CHAPTER II

Registration of Trade Unions

Appointment of Registrars 3 Each Local Government shall appoint a person to be the Registrar of Trade Unions for the province

Notes—Registrars of Trade Unions are appointed by the Local Governments

4 Any seven or more members of a Trade Union may, by subscribing their names to the rules of the Trade Union and

Mode of registration by otherwise complying with the provisions of this Act with respect to registration, apply for registration of the Trade Union under this Act

Notes—Registration is purely voluntary and it is open to a registered trade union to apply for cancellation of registration at any time—Notes on Clauses. For the forms of application, vide Encyclopaedia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIV, p. 515

5 (1) Every application for registration of a Trade Union shall be made to the Registrar and shall be accompanied by a copy of the rules of the Trade Union and a statement of the following particulars, namely—

(a) the names, occupations and addresses of the members making the application,

(b) the name of the Trade Union and the address of its head office, and

(c) the titles, names, ages, addresses and occupations of the officers of the Trade Union

(2) Where a Trade Union has been in existence for more than one year before the making of an application for its registration, there shall be delivered to the Registrar together with the application a general statement of the assets and liabilities of the Trade Union prepared in such form and containing such particulars as may be prescribed

Notes—This section corresponds to ss. 13 (1) and 17 of the British Trade Unions Act 1871. The information is required to enable the Registrar to satisfy himself that the organization applying for registration is a Trade Union and that its rules satisfy the requirement of clause 6—Notes on Clauses

Provisions to be contained in the rules of a Trade Union A Trade Union shall not be entitled to registration under this Act, unless the executive thereof is constituted in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and the rules thereof provide for the following matters, namely—

(a) the name of the Trade Union,

(b) the whole of the objects for which the Trade Union has been established,

(c) the whole of the purposes for which the general funds of the Trade Union shall be applied to which such members of the Trade Union and by the officers and members of the

(i) the safe custody of the funds of the Trade Union, an annual audit in such manner as may be prescribed, of the accounts thereof, and adequate facilities for the inspection of the account books by the officers and members of the Trade Union; and

(j) the manner in which the Trade Union may be dissolved

Notes—This is adopted from the First Schedule of the British Trade Union Act, 1871. In deciding whether any association comes within the definition of a Trade Union its objects and rules must be read as a whole Chamberlain's Will v. Smith (1900) 2 Ch 603. The objects which could be specified in the rules included only objects strictly within the scope of the Trade Unions Act [(1910) A C 87 96] and the rules were held to constitute an exhaustive Code (1900) 17 T L R 39 C A, (1911) 11 Ch 259 266.

7. (1) The Registrar may call for further information for the purpose of satisfying himself that any application complies with the provisions of section 5, or that the Trade Union is entitled to registration under section 6, and may refuse to register the Trade Union until such information is supplied.

Power to call for further particulars and to require alteration of name

(2) If the name under which a Trade Union is proposed to be registered is identical with that by which any other existing Trade Union has been registered or, in the opinion of the Registrar, so nearly resembles such name as to be likely to deceive the public or the members of either Trade Union, the Registrar shall require the persons applying for registration to alter the name of the Trade Union stated in the application, and shall refuse to register the Union until such alteration has been made.

Notes—An application to register and printed copies of the rules with a list of the titles and names of the officers, must be sent to Registrar who upon being satisfied that the union has complied with the regulations in force respecting registry, must register the Union and the rules [Vide ss 13 (1), 13 (2) 17 of the Trade Unions Act, 1871]. Sub section (2) corresponds to section 13 (3) of the Trade Unions Act, 1871, Cf also R v Registrar of Friendly Societies (1871) L R 7 B 741.

8 The Registrar, on being satisfied that the Trade Union has complied with all the requirements of this Act in regard to registration, shall register the Trade Union by entering in a register, to be maintained in such form as may be prescribed, the particulars relating to the Trade Union contained in the statement accompanying the application for registration.

Notes—The Registrar may not register any combination as a Trade Union unless in his opinion having regard to the constitution of the combination its principal objects are statutory objects British Trade Unions Act, 1913, s 2 (2).

9 The Registrar, on registering a Trade Union under section 8, shall issue a certificate of registration in the prescribed form which shall be conclusive evidence that the Trade Union has been duly registered under this Act.

Notes—The Registrar, on registering the Union, issue a certificate which, unless known to have been withdrawn or cancelled is conclusive evidence that the regulations with respect to registry have been complied with Vide s 13(4) of the British Trade Unions Act, 1871

Cancellation of registration 10 A certificate of registration of a Trade Union may be withdrawn or cancelled by the Registrar—

(a) on the application of the Trade Union to be verified in such manner as may be prescribed, or

(b) if the Registrar is satisfied that the certificate has been obtained by fraud or mistake or that the Trade Union has ceased to exist or has wilfully and after notice from the Registrar contravened any provision of this Act or allowed any rule to continue in force which is inconsistent with any such provisions, or has rescinded any rule providing for any matter provision for which is required by section 6

Provided that not less than two months' previous notice in writing specifying the ground on which it is proposed to withdraw or cancel the certificate shall be given by the Registrar to the Trade Union before the certificate is withdrawn or cancelled otherwise than on the application of the Trade Union

Notes—Until the withdrawal or cancellation of its certificate a registered Union can be sued in its registered name notwithstanding that one of its objects is illegal (1913) 1 Ch 366

(2) The appellate Court may dismiss the appeal, or pass an order directing the Registrar to register the Union and to issue a certificate of registration under the provisions of section 9, or setting aside the order for withdrawal or cancellation of the certificate, as the case may be, and the Registrar shall comply with such order

(3) For the purpose of an appeal under sub section (1), an appellate Court shall so far as may be, follow the same procedure and have the same powers as it follows and has when trying a suit under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and may direct by whom the whole or any part of the costs of the appeal shall be paid and such costs shall be recovered as if they had been awarded in a suit under the said Code change in the address of the head office shall be given within fourteen days of such change to the Registrar in writing, and the changed address shall be recorded in the register referred to in section 8

Notes—This section corresponds to section 15 of the British Trade Union Act, 1871. Apparently this provision does not in itself confine the union to the jurisdiction of the Courts within whose jurisdiction the office is situated Mackendrick v

National Union of the Dock Labourers, (1910) 141 Sc. L. R. 17, Halsbury Vol 27, p 625

- (b) the payment of expenses for the administration of the Trade Union, including audit of the account of the general fund of the Trade Union,

(k) subject to any conditions contained in the notification, any other object notified by the Governor General in Council in the Gazette of India

Notes—The objects on which the funds may be spent have been limited to the objects specified in sub-section (1). As, however, the is proposed to empower the his will make it possible to ade Unions if the development

16 (1) A registered Trade Union may constitute a separate fund, from Constitution of a separate funds for political purposes that fund, from which payments may be made, for the promotion of the civic and political interests of its members, in furtherance of any of the objects specified in sub-section (2)

(2) The objects referred to in sub-section (1) are —

(a) the payment of any expenses incurred, either directly or indirectly by a candidate or prospective candidate for election as a member of any legislative body constituted under the Government of India Act or of any local authority, before, during, or after the election in connection with his candidature or election, or

(b) the holding of any meeting or the distribution of any literature or documents in support of any such candidate or prospective candidate, or

Notes—This clause is based on section 3 (3) of the British Trade Unions Act, 1913

17. No officer or member of a registered Trade Union shall be liable to Criminal conspiracy in trade disputes punishment under Sub-section (2) of section 120B of the Indian Penal Code, in respect of any agreement made between the members for the purpose of furthering any such objects of the Trade Union as specified in section 15, unless the agreement is an agreement to commit an offence

Notes—Under the existing criminal law an agreement to do an illegal act is itself a criminal offence. "Illegal acts" includes all acts which provide ground for civil actions. Thus for example, two men who agree to persuade workmen to break their contracts with their employers are guilty of criminal conspiracy. The clause which is similar in its effects to the corresponding provisions of the English law, protects Trade Unions from prosecutions for criminal conspiracy where the agreement into which they have entered is not an agreement to commit an offence.—Notes on Clauses, see also (1909) 1 K B 901 C A ; 23 Q B D 598 ; (1891) 2 Q B 549. When no trade dispute can be shown to exist a general strike called by the Trade Union Congress is illegal. (1926) 1 Ch 536

18 (1) No suit or other legal proceeding shall be maintainable in any Civil Court against any registered Trade Union of any officer or member thereof in respect of any act done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute to which a member of the Trade Union is a party on the ground only that such act induces some other person to break a contract of employment, or that it is in interference with the trade, business or employment of some other person or with the right of some other person to dispose of the capital or of his labour as he wills

(2) A registered Trade Union shall not be liable in any suit or other legal proceeding in any Civil Court in respect of any tortious act done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute by an agent of the Trade Union if it is proved that such person acted without the knowledge of, or contrary to express instructions given by the executive of the Trade Union

Notes—The first part of this clause corresponds to sections 1 and 3 of the British Trade Disputes Act, 1906, and protects trade unions and their officers and members from certain civil actions. An important type of action which this clause will prevent is a suit arising out of the persuasion exercised on Trade Union members and others to join in a strike where that strike (as is frequently the case) involves breach of contract on the part of workmen. The second part of this clause gives Trade Unions a large measure of immunity from liabilities arising out of acts of their agents, and is in accordance with a recommendation made by the majority of the Royal Commission on Trade Disputes and Trade Combinations in England in 1906.—Notes on Clauses, see also (1892) A C 25, (1906) 82 L T 769, (1903) 19 T L R 360, (1909) A C 506

19 Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, an agreement between the members of the registered Trade Union shall not be void or voidable merely by reason of the fact that any of the objects of the agreement are in restraint of trade

Provided that nothing in this section shall enable any Civil Court to entertain any legal proceedings instituted for the express purpose of enforcing or recovering damages for the breach of any agreement concerning the conditions on which any members of a Trade Union shall or shall sell their goods, transact business, work, employ or be employed

21 Any person who has attained the age of fifteen years may be a member of a registered Trade Union subject to any rules of the Trade Union to the contrary, and may, subject as aforesaid, enjoy all the rights of a member and execute all instruments and give all acquittances necessary to be executed or given under the rules

Provided that no person who has not attained the age of eighteen years shall be an officer on any such Trade Union.

(2) If the proposed name is identical with that by which any other existing Trade Union has been registered or, in the opinion of the Registrar, so nearly resembles such name as to be likely to deceive the public or the members of either Trade Union, the Registrar shall refuse to register the change of name

(2) An amalgamation of two or more registered Trade Unions shall not prejudice any right of any such Trade Unions or any of right of a creditor of any of them

Notes—This section corresponds to section 13 of the British Trade Unions (Amendment) Act 1876 (39 and 40 Vict, c 22)

27 (1) When a registered Trade Union is dissolved, notice of the dissolution signed by seven members and by the Secretary of the Trade Union shall, within fourteen days of the dissolution, be sent to the Registrar, and shall be registered by him if he is satisfied that the dissolution has been effected in accordance with the rules of the Trade Union, and the dissolution shall have effect from the date of such registration

(2) Where the dissolution of a registered Trade Union has been registered and the rules of the Trade Union do not provide for the distribution of funds of the Trade Union on dissolution, the Registrar shall divide the funds amongst the members in such manner as may be prescribed

[RECEIVED THE GOVERNMENT'S ASSENT ON THE 17TH FEBRUARY, 1882]

An Act to amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property by Act of Parties

WHEREAS it is expedient to define and amend certain parts of the law relating to the transfer of property by act of parties, It is hereby enacted as follows—

Preamble

PRELIMINARY

Short title

1 This Act may be called "The Transfer of Property Act, 1882"

Commencement

It shall come into force on the first day of July, 1882

Clause (a)—The provisions of any enactment not expressly repealed by this Act are in force. All local laws regulating the relations of landlord and tenant are unaffected by this Act. Various other Acts dealing with subject matter provided in this Act are also unaffected. See also 8 A 402=A W N 1886 139

Clause (b)—The dandapat rule is inapplicable to cases of mortgage governed by this Act. 26 M. 662. This Act did not save a bat bil waft mortgage executed before the Act. A W N 1884, 269, but see 2 C P L R 130

Clause (c)—The Transfer of Property Act had no retrospective effect. 19 M 382=6 M L J 88. Where a legal relation was constituted, before the Transfer of Property Act came into force, this Act has no application. 10 C L J 110, 7 C L J 553. The formalities of this Act were held not to apply to mortgage bond. C 227. Where contract has been made before the Act does not affect the. W N 527=34 C 358, see also 12

is Act came into force, a transfer of manner not prescribed by the Act

Matters of substantive right as well as matters of procedure—It is a general rule in construing a statute that in matters of substantive right they are not to be so read as to take away. They are general in their operation. It is beyond reasonable doubt concluded that this settled principle of legislation. The mode or procedure for obtaining such change of procedure. 12 C 583 (F B), 10 C 432, 13 A 432 (F B), 15 C 376. See also the Full Court decision of the Calcutta High Court reported in 22 C 767 where Mr Justice Banerji in delivering the judgment observe:—

Ordinarily, no doubt, a new law should affect only future transactions and not past ones. Urquhart v Urquhart, (1 Macq H L C 662) But the rule against character of past transactions that the rule in question operates. Every statute which has been said which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing laws or creates a new obligation or imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability in respect of transactions or considerations already passed, must be presumed, out of respect to the legislature, to be intended not to have a retrospective operation. (2nd edition, p 257) [See also Wilberforce on Statute Law, page 157, Sedgwick on Statutory Law, 2nd edition, 160] So far as this applies to mortgages executed before the Act. 432, 25 B 101, 10 M 17, 26 C 29 P C 114. Made after the Act came into force before the commencement of Regulation XVII of 1861 to extend by mutual agreement under the Act. See a quired an. Right to have a decree declaring the property to be his absolutely. Right so acquired by the mortgage while the Regulation was in force. Right which falls within the meaning of this clause. 14 C 451. Even if a year of grace had not expired when the Act came into force and the complete right of the mortgagee had not accrued, he had acquired the right to bring a suit under the provisions of Reg XVII of 1861 at the expiration of grace. 14 C 509, 15 C 357. But see contra, 6 A 262=1848 A W N 11 C 582. The right of a decree holder obtaining a decree before the Act is saved by this clause but s 92 of the Act was held not to affect a decree. 12 C 439, 19 M 382=6 M L J 88. A W N 1884, 274. By this clause s 36 of the Act does not apply to execution.

There is nothing in the clause (c) to disentitle the parties from seeking the relief given by the Act. It is a provision intended to preserve existing rights and is not a disabling provision. That section appears to have been intended to preserve the earlier remedies if the parties choose to avail themselves of them and not to take away the remedy given under the Act. 30 M L J 338 = 34 Ind Cas 475

Clause (d) — This clause exempts transfers in execution of a decree from the operation of Chapter III of the Act. Therefore a transfer by sale in execution of a decree need not be made by a registered instrument. 2 C P L R 137, see also 28 C 744 and 33 C 786

Effect of Amendment by Act XX of 1929 — Section 2, which is a saving clause, does not provide that Chapter II shall not apply to Hindus, Muhammadans or Buddhists. It merely saves any rule of Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist law which is not consistent with its provisions. The chapter contains general rules regarding transfers. It is obvious that sections 5 to 10 contain rules which are of general application and do not in any way contravene any rule or principle peculiar to the personal laws of Hindus or Buddhists. So also sections 38 to 53 are not peculiar to any particular system of law and are rules of justice, equity and good conscience. Sections 11 to 35 correspond to parallel provisions of the Indian Succession Act, and were introduced in the Transfer of Property Act in order to bring the rules which regulated the transfer of property between living persons into harmony with the rules affecting its devolution upon death. Sections 13 and 20 relate to transfers in favour of unborn persons, and section 14 enacts a modification of the rule against perpetuity. According to the strict principles of the Hindu Law, as laid down in the Privy Council decision in Tagore v Tagore,¹ A Sup 47 transfers or bequests in favour of unborn persons are wholly void. That principle is however now modified by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act [XV of 1916] and the Hindu Transfers of Bequests (City of Madras) Act VII of 1921. So far, therefore, as the rules of Hindu law are concerned, it is unnecessary and we propose that the Government should also understand that the Government have no objection to the omission of section 2. We therefore propose to insert the amendment in not to 1929

Interpretation clause

3 In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

Immovable property

“Immovable property” does not include standing timber growing crops or grass;

“instrument” means a non testamentary instrument,

“attested” in relation to an instrument, means “and shall be deemed always to have meant” * attested by two or more witnesses each of whom has seen the executant sign or affix his mark to the instrument, or has seen some other person sign the instrument in the presence and by the direction of the executant, or has received from the executant a personal acknowledgement of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person, and each of whom has signed the instrument in the presence of the executant, but it shall not be necessary that more than one of such witnesses shall have been present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.”†

“registered”

“registered” means registered in British India under the law in force for the time being in force regulating the registration of documents,

“attached to the earth”

“attached to the earth” means—

(a) rooted in the earth, as in the case of trees and shrubs,

(b) imbedded in the earth, as in the case of walls or buildings, or

(c) attached to what is so imbedded for the permanent beneficial enjoyment of that to which it is attached,

"actionable claim" means a claim to any debt, other than a debt secured by mortgage of immovable property, or by hypothecation or pledge of immovable property, or to any beneficial interest in movable property, not in the possession, either actual or constructive, of the claimant, which the Civil Courts recognize as such debt or beneficial interest being existent, of a fact when he actually knows that fact, or when, but for wilful abstention from an inquiry or search which he ought to have made, or gross negligence, he would have known it

Explanation I—Where any transaction relating to immovable property is required by law to be and has been effected by a registered instrument, any person acquiring such property or any part of, or share or interest in, such property shall be deemed to have notice of such instrument as from the date of registration or, [where the property is not all situated in one sub district, or where the registered instrument has been registered under subsection 2 of section 30 of the Indian Registration Act, 1908 from the earliest date on which any memorandum of such registered instrument has been filed by any Sub Registrar within whose sub district any part of the property which is being acquired, or of the property wherein a share or interest is being acquired, is situated.]^{*}

Provided that—

(1) the instrument has been registered and its registration completed in the manner prescribed by the Indian Registration Act, 1908, and the rules made thereunder,

(2) the instrument [or memorandum][†] has been duly entered or filed, in the case may be, in books kept under section 51 of that Act, and

(3) the particulars regarding the transaction to which the instrument relates have been correctly entered in the indexes kept under section 55 of that Act

Explanation II—Any person acquiring any immovable property or any share or interest in any such property shall be deemed to have notice of the title, if any, of any person who is for the time being in actual possession thereof.

Explanation III—A person shall be deemed to have had notice of any fact if he has been put on inquiry by the person with whom he is dealing whilst acting on his behalf in the course of the transaction, and if he conceals the fact, the principal shall not be charged with notice thereof as against any person who was a party to or otherwise cognizant of the fraud.[‡]

"General land, benefits to arise out of land, and things attached to land" defined in this Act. According to General Land Act. An interest in Royalty is not an interest in land. Whether machinery is immovable property.

Immovable property comprehends all that would be real property according to English law and possibly more—13 M L R 234 (P C)

Standing timber—Growing trees are immovable property 10 A L J 516; see also 13 Bom L R 874, 9 Ind Cas 478, 81 Ind Cas 650

Growing crops—are movable property 13 C 262, 13 A 133, 32 C 66, 15 M 429

Notice—The definition of the word "notice" in this section correctly construed—

the law as to notice which existed prior to the passing of the Act 9 A 591. When ever a party has obtained a full knowledge although not in accordance with the rules which define the nature of notice and regulate the mode of its being given and received, there is no longer any need of invoking the legal conception of notice, the rules concerning it no longer apply, the very fact for which it is intended as substitute has been more accurately accomplished in another manner. If the party has in any way obtained the full knowledge, those same results must necessarily and even in a higher degree, be attributed to it—the very substance itself—which are from motives of general policy attributed to notice as its representatives and substitutes 34 C L J 256=26 C W N 36

Two kinds of notice—(1) Express, and (2) constructive

Express notice—when the party actually knows the fact

Constructive notice

this section notice is presumed from (1) wilful abstention, (2) gross negligence and (3) agent's knowledge. This doctrine of constructive notice is applied to transactions relating to land and has not been extended to commercial relations—Manchester Trust v Furness (1895) 2 Q B 539

Explanation I—Notice as defined in section 3, includes both actual and constructive notice. There is a conflict of decisions whether the registration of a document under the Indian Registration Act is of itself constructive notice of the transaction effected by the document. The High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad held that it is 6 B 158, 9 B 427, 26 B 538, 45 B 170=59 Ind Cas 506, 16 A 478, 9 A L J 759=16 Ind Cas, 102. The Madras High Court held that registration does not constitute constructive notice 1268, 13 M 383, see also 89 Ind Cas 625=A 1

In some cases the Calcutta High Court took the view that registration is not constructive notice. See 23 C 790, 27 C 71, 27 C 358, 34 Ind Cas N 750, Sir Lawrence Jenkins says—'Apart from having regard to the statutes applicable in this country that the proposition involved is not one of law but of fact, and that in each case arises it should be determined whether in that individual case the omission to search a register, taken together with other facts amounts to such gross negligence as to attract the consequence which results from notice, and it will be that this test will serve to reconcile the apparent conflict of view that at first sight the cases suggest.' Following that decision in 7 C W N 11, the same High Court held as follows: "Whether registration is or is not notice in itself depends we think, upon the facts and circumstances of each case upon the degree of care and caution which an ordinary prudent man would necessarily take for the protection of his own interest by search into the register kept under the Registration Act." See also 84 Ind Cas 1174, A 1 R 1925 Lah 25, 59 Ind Cas 506=45 B 170, 4 L L J 23=A 1 R 1922 Lah 64, 39 Ind Cas 778, 4 P R 1915; 1 Pat L R 80, A 1 R 1924 P 359. The question was considered by the Judicial Committee in Tilak Lal v Khedani Lal 47 I A 339=48 C 1. After reviewing all the Indian decisions, their Lordships of the Privy Council approved of the view taken in the Calcutta cases in 2 C W N 750 and 7 C W N 11 and observed:—"Their Lordships are impressed with the view that since registration has for nearly two centuries been held not to operate as constructive notice, the law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved."

appellant's contention it is essential that the register should provide for these reasons their Lordships think that notice cannot in all cases be imputed from the contents of the register. The law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved. The different Indian law which was then old must be preserved."

last the Judicial Committee also observe that the real purpose of registration is to secure that every person dealing with property, when such dealings require registration may rely with confidence upon the statements contained in the register as a full and complete account of all transactions by which his title may be affected unless indeed he has actual notice of some unregistered transaction which may be valid apart from registration. In America registration of a conveyance has been deemed to operate as constructive notice to all subsequent purchasers of any estate legal or equitable in the same property. The reason assigned for the application of this doctrine is as follows—

"The reasoning upon which this doctrine is founded is the obvious policy of the Registration Acts, the duty of the party purchasing under such circumstances to search for prior encumbrances the means of which search are within his power, and the danger of letting in parol proof of notice or want of notice of the actual existence of the conveyance. This doctrine certainly has the advantage of certainty and universality of application, and it imposes upon subsequent purchasers a reasonable degree of diligence only in examining the titles to estates.—Story on Equity Jurisprudence, Art 534 pp 510 511

In England also in the counties of Middlesex and Yorkshire, where the system of local deeds registries prevails section 197 of the Property Act 1925 provides that registration in a local deed Registry of a memorial of any instrument transferring or creating a legal estate or charge shall be deemed to constitute actual notice of the transfer or the creation of the legal estate or charge to all persons and for all purposes whatsoever as from the date of registration and so long as the registration continues in force. So also under section 198 the case of instruments which have been provided that the registration of such instrument to all persons the system of registration has been generally applied if registration is to be held as not implying notice one of the objects for which instruments are required to be registered would be defeated. Moreover as will be seen below one of the important changes suggested by us is compulsory registration. It is therefore necessary that express provision should be made in the Act making it clear that registration of an instrument relating to immovable property amounts to notice of the instrument from the date of the registration. For this purpose we propose to add Explanation I to the definition of 'Notice in section 3.—Report of the Special Committee

Or if the instrument etc.—In regard to Explanation I which it is proposed to add to the definition of notice in section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882, (in this Report referred to as the principal Act), it has been pointed out that the provision that the registration of a document amounts to notice from the date on which it is registered, will cause difficulties in a case in which the document has not been registered at the place where the property is situate. This objection has some force. We have, therefore, added at the end of Explanation I, the following words. Or if the instrument 66 of that Act.—Report of the Select Committee

Effect of Amendment by Act V of 1930.—The formal amendments in Explanation I contained in section 19. The difficulties sought to be met on are not confined to cases where section 30 of the Indian Registration Act requires an instrument relating to scattered properties to be registered in the ordinary manner. Further, it is possible, under the present explanation, that a subsequent transfer may make a genuine search in the offices of all the sub districts in which the property he seeks to acquire is situated and finds no record of a transfer but may still find himself saddled with notice of a transfer by reason of a memorandum relating to some other property, included in a previous transfer along with the property he is interested in, having been filed in some distant sub district.—Statement of Objects and Reasons. This amendment is not to have any retrospective effect vide s 63 of Act XX of 1929

Explanation I.—It is not clear how far possession is to be regarded as notice. In some cases it has been held that possession amounts to such notice of title as the person in possession may have 25 A 366, 16 M 148, 16 Ind Cas 811=17 C L J 109, 3 Lah L J 447, & Lah L J 720, 41 Ind Cas 628, 33 Ind Cas 121, but see 45 M L J 275=A I R 1924 Mad 67. In other cases, Courts have felt difficulty in expressing any opinion on the point. C 597. Possession which operates as notice, however, must be actual possession 27 B 43. As regards whether constructive possession is notice vide, 7 C W N 294. "It does not seem reasonable that a person entering into a transaction regarding immovable property should be in a position to ignore the question of possession or should neglect to inquire into the nature of the possession or the title of the person who is in actual possession of such property, if he is not the person with whom he is dealing. We propose to add Explanation II to the definition of 'notice' proving that the person dealing with any immovable property shall be deemed to have notice of the title of any person who for the time being is in actual possession thereof. It may be noted that notice in this case is not extended to possession which is merely of a constructive nature. The explanation is in accordance with illustration 3 to section 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act.—Report of the Special Committee

Explanation II—“The last portion of the existing definition of notice which relates to notice through an agent seems to us to be defective. It provides that a person has notice of the fact when information of the fact is given to or obtained by his agent under the circumstances mentioned in section 229 of the Indian Contract Act. The words given to or obtained by his agent used in the definition suggest that the rule is restricted to facts of which the agent has actual knowledge, or, in other words, express notice (vide observations of Pontiffs in I L R 4 Cal 897). The reference to section 229 of the Indian Contract Act does not extend the scope of the definition. That section merely provides that in order that notice to an agent as in Naripai Singh v Baladannar Singh, 29 I A 203=25 A 1, it is not a mere question of constructive notice or inference of fact but a rule of law which imputes the knowledge of the agents to the principal or (in other words) the agency extends to receiving notice on behalf of his principal of whatever is material to be stated in the course of the proceedings. In Mohori Bibee v Dhuramda Ghore, (30 I A 114) their Lordships of the Privy Council held that although the principal was absent in Calcutta and personally did not take part in the transaction his agent in Calcutta stood in his place for the purposes of the transaction, and the acts and knowledge of the latter were the acts and knowledge of the principal. If notice to the agent, whether actual or constructive is not made notice to the principal it has been said that notice would be avoided in every case by employing agents. Berwick and Co v Price, (1905) 1 Ch 632.

The knowledge of the principal is a matter for which it is necessary that business for which he is embodied in section to add Explanation agent whilst acting in the course of business is notice to his principal has been properly criticised as being too general and vague. We have added provisions to the effect that the notice must be of a fact which is material to the course of the business in which the agent is engaged, and that the agent must not fraudulently have concealed the fact from his principal.—Report of the Select Committee

OF TRANSFERS OF PROPERTY BY ACT OF PARTIES

(A) Transfer of Property, whether movable or immovable

§ In the following sections "transfer of property" means an act by which a living person conveys property in present or in future, to one or more other living persons, or to himself* and one or more other living persons, and "to transfer property" is to perform such act

"In this section, 'living person' includes a company or association or body of individuals, whether incorporated or not, but nothing herein contained shall affect any law for the time being in force relating to transfer of property to or by companies, associations or bodies of individuals"*

Transfer of property—The term Transfer of Property Act is a general one and is not confined to transfer of a contractual and literal character Besides including a conveyance and assignment of a contractual character, it appears from the definition of "transfer of property" given in s 5, to include the exercise of a power of appointment under a settlement 22 C 185 This definition does not apply transfer contemplated by Presidency Towns Insolvency Act 24 Bom L R 861

Chapter II Sub head A—Covering ss 5 to 37 applies to property whether movable or immovable Therefore, where a reversioner transferred his interest in certain promissory notes to a female, who had at the time of transfer a life estate in the notes, Held that the transfer was invalid.—4 Ind Cas 144—7 A L J 11

Object of Amendment by Act XX of 1929—"We have amended section 5 to make it clear that a transfer can be made by a person to himself as for instance by a person making a settlement or trust in which he constitutes himself a trustee An Explanation has been added to the section to make it clear that the words 'living person' include corporations and other associations of persons"—Report of the Select Committee

6 Property of any kind may be transferred, except as otherwise provided by this Act, or by any other law for the time being in force

(b) A mere right of re entry for breach of a condition subsequent cannot be transferred to any one except the owner of the property affected thereby

(c) An easement cannot be transferred apart from the dominant heritage

(d) An interest in property restricted in its enjoyment to the owner personally cannot be transferred by him

(dd) A right to future maintenance in whatsoever manner arising, secured or determined, cannot be transferred

(e) A mere right to sue † cannot be transferred

(f) A public office cannot be transferred, nor can the salary of a public officer, whether before or after it has become payable

(g) Stipends allowed to military "naval" ‡ "air force" † and civil pensioners of Government and political pensions cannot be transferred

(h) No transfer can be made (1) in so far as it is opposed to the nature of the interest affected thereby, or (2) for an unlawful object or consideration within the meaning of section 23 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, § or (3) to a person legally disqualified to be transferee

Clause (a)—It was not intended by this clause to establish and perpetuate the distinction between that which according to the phraseology of English lawyers is assignable in law and that which is assignable in equity. The exception in cl (a) cannot be by reason of the future character of the chance, it must be because it was thought undesirable that it should be capable of transfer. 31 M 165=8 Bom L R 781. A right to receive maintenance is a personal right, although any particular property or the income thereof may be charged with it. It is in accordance with public policy that these rights which are generally created for the maintenance of a person, of a child or of a Hindu female cases it has by a decree decree would nal benefit of Code of Civil irt does not make any exception in the case of maintenance fixed by agreement or decree. Object of Amendment by Act XX of 1929—"Sections 11 and 40 of the Act refer to affirmative and negative covenants in a transfer Section 11 refers to rights as between a transferor and a transferee, while section 40 relates to the rights of third parties against transferees. The words 'to compel its enjoyment,' used in the second paragraph of section 40, indicate that affirmative covenants for the beneficial enjoyment of one piece of the property of which the other piece has been transferred can in all cases be enforced. This paragraph seems to have been based on the observations of Lord Cottenham in Tulk v. Muxhay 2 P. L. 774, a case decided in 1848. But in later English decision, such as Hayward v. Burnswick Building Society, 8 C. B. D. 403, the observations in Tulk's case were not approved, and it is now settled that except in certain special cases affirmative covenants be specifically enforced. Thus in Austerbury v. Corporation of Oldham, (1885) 29 Ch. D. 750, a covenant to spend money on the land was held as not binding on the purchaser of the land although he had notice of the same. In Indian Courts have followed the same principle (27 Bom. L. R. 73). We propose that the second paragraph of section 11 and the first paragraph of section 40 should be so amended as to make it clear that, although an affirmative covenant is not by itself invalid as between a transferor and a transferee (section 11), negative or restrictive covenants only can be specifically enforced against a third person (section 40).—Report of the Special Committee

12 Where property is transferred subject to a condition or limitation, making any interest therein reserved or given to or for the benefit of any person, to cease on his becoming insolvent or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, such condition or limitation is void.

A transfers property, of which he is the owner to B in trust for A and his intended wife successively for their lives, and, after the death of the survivor, for the eldest son of the intended marriage for life and after his death for A's second son. The interest so created for the benefit of the eldest son does not take effect, because it does not extend to the whole of A's remaining interest in the property.

14 No transfer of property can operate to create an interest which is to take effect after the lifetime of one or more persons living at the date of such transfer and the minority of some person who shall be in existence at the expiration of that period, and to whom, if he attains full age, the interest created is to belong.

Notes—S. 2 (d) of the Transfer of Property Act provides that nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to affect any rule of Hindu law 29 M. 412=1 M. L. T. 227. A contract with regard to land which is calculated to defeat the rule against perpetuities which is one of public policy is void 24 Bom. L. R. 449=1972 (Bom) 84, see also 26 C. W. N. 874=67 Ind. Cas. 719. A covenant for pre-emption unlimited in point of time is void as offending the rule against perpetuities. Therefore an agreement among the members of a family that in case one of them had to sell his portion of the family property he would offer it for sale in the first instance to the other members cannot be specifically enforced 64 Ind. Cas. 100, 25 C. W. N. 905, but see 22 A. L. J. 265, 82 Ind. Cas. 326.

A covenant entered into by the owner of a mill, by which he agreed to give the appellant lands for building purposes whenever required free of cost is not a covenant running with the land and could not be so enforced against the assignees from the owner 48 I. A. 376 P. C.

15 If, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created for the benefit of a class of persons, with regard to some of whom such interest fails by reason of any of the rules contained in sections 13 and 14, such interest fails "in regard to those persons only and not in regard to the whole class."

Scope of section 15—Section 15 of the Transfer of Property Act deals with gift to a class. It reproduces with slight alterations the provisions of section 102 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865 (now section 115 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925), which was enacted on the principle of the decision in Leake v. Robinson (1817) 2 Mer 363. The reason of the rule is thus stated by Sir W Grant M R "The bequests in question are not made to individuals, but to classes: and what I have to determine is whether the classes can take. I must make a new Will for the testator, if I split into portions his general bequest of the class, and say that because the rule of law forbids his intention from operating in favour of the whole class, I will make his bequests what he never intended them to be, viz a series of particular legacies to particular individuals; or, what he has as little in his contemplation, distinct bequest, in each instance, to different classes, namely, to grand-children living at his death, and to grand-children born after his death." The doctrine of Leake v Robinson, was discussed in Hale v Hale, 3 Ch D 643 and Peirce v Mosely 5 App Cas 714. In the latter case Lord Selborne said. "The rule is that the voice of remoteness affects the class as a whole if it may affect an ascertained number of its members." See also Dungannon v Smith, 12 Cl & D 575. So "where the bequest is to an ascertained living person who h offend the 1865, enacts whom it here a limited interest is given to an unborn person, or (2) by reason of the rule contained in section 101 being the rule against perpetuity such bequest shall be wholly void."

Prior to certain special Acts, to be presently noted, Hindu Law did not permit a gift in favour of a person who was not in existence at the date of the gift or a bequest in favour of a person who was not in existence at the death of the testator (Tagore v Tagore, 1872, 9 B L R 377 400=1 A Sup vol 47), on the ground that a person capable of taking must be in existence at the material date. Difficulties, however, arose where a gift was made and some were not in existence at the date of the gift. subject to that of Rai Bishen Chait v Ai 104=6 A 560, wherein a Hindu made a gift of was then in existence and his (S's) brothers who may be born thereafter. It was Leake v Robinson and the analogy of section

It was held that the rule that where a bequest is made to a class of persons, and the gift is wholly void, is not true in all cases. In sections 100 and 101 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was observed that it did not apply where the bequest did not fail by reason of the rule against perpetuity, but by reason of the personal incapacity of the donee. The scope of the judgment in section 102 imports into India the intention of the testator. It was held that it is not necessary to construe the rule of construction drawn from English Law and applicable to English deeds of gift. So the rule laid down in Leake v Robinson, and followed in the case of Hindu Wills in several earlier cases (vide 8 B L R 400, 2 C 212, 4 C 455=2 C L R. 315, 5 C L R

that a person were to be the subject of the Act, or the 1921 ends to the whole of British India except the Province of Madras and affects disposition of Hindu law existing at the date of the Act, is 'a sentient being' provisions of section 16 of Hindu law to the effect that a gift inter vivos, or a bequest to a class of persons some of whom are incapable of taking by reason of the peculiar rule of Hindu law that the gift is valid only if it is made to a sentient being capable of taking is void also as regards provisions of section 16 of Hindu law should apply. But the rule is not a rule of policy of Hindu Wills, irrespective of Hindu law as laid down in the joint family estate. Batu v. Succession Act, lies having regard to the Transfer of Property Act and section 16 of the Interpretation Act so the interpretation of P.C. no longer applies.

such direction was neither so unreasonable in its conditions as to be against public policy nor was it directed towards an illegal object, the direction was valid. In a case quoted in a foot note in L. L. R. 1914, 100 (the Chandrasekhar case) after reviewing English and Indian law, the Privy Council held that "A direction to accumulate with a gift of the accumulation is not fundamentally bad if it only fails if it offends some independent rule of Hindu Law. Or the direction to accumulate may be repugnant and so void, but it is not void if it is not repugnant to any rule of Hindu Law which has become part of the law of the land within the power of the court to enforce. Here would seem to be a case where the gift may become entitled to original corpus of the testator's property. What then is the period during which an accumulation can be directed? On principle I think it must be for so long a time as the absolute vesting of the entire interest can be withheld, or for so long a time as that during which the corpus of the property can be rendered inalienable, or its devolution can be directed and controlled by a testator." Chandrasekhar v. The Collector of Madras, (1914) 100 L. L. R. 100.

It is, however, difficult to adopt the English Law contained in the Property Act, 1925, in its entirety. Section 164 prescribes four periods during which accumulation can validly be directed, viz —

- (a) The life of the grantor or settlor,
- (b) a term of 21 years from the death of the grantor, settlor or testator,
- (c) the duration of the minority or respective minorities only of any person or persons living or en ventre sa mere at the death of the grantor, settlor or testator,
- (d) the duration of the minority or respective minorities only of any person or persons who under the limitations of the gift would for the time being, if of full age, be entitled to the property accumulated.

Rules regarding accumulation are closely connected with the rule against perpetuities (Cheshire on Modern Real Property, p 482, Fearne on Contingent Remainders, p 537). The English rule has not been wholly adopted in India. The period is the life of any person or of those who are alive or en ventre sa mere at the death of the grantor, settlor or testator. If the interest created begins to operate plus a period of 21 years from the time when such designated person dies (Cadell v Palmer, (1833) 1 C. L. & F. 372). The rules of the Property Act, 1925, as transfer inter vivos are concerned are contained in sections 14 and 15. No transfer of property can operate to take effect after the lifetime of one or more persons living or en ventre sa mere at the death of the grantor, settlor or testator and the minority of some persons who shall be living or en ventre sa mere at the expiration of that period and to whom, if he attains full age the interest created is to belong. The periods in section 164 of the Property Act, 1925, cannot be incorporated in its entirety in the Transfer of Property Act without affecting the provisions of sections 13 and 14. We, therefore, consider it desirable to permit accumulations during the following periods only —

- (1) the life of the transferor, or
- (2) a period of 18 years thereafter

This would avoid difficulty of construction. At the same time we think it desirable to accept certain well recognised exceptions in law such as those relating to provisions for the payment of debts, raising portions for children and the repairs to the property transferred. Section 18 therefore should be amended accordingly —

19. Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created in favour of a person without specifying the time when it is to take effect or in terms specifying that it is to take effect forthwith, or on the happening on an event which must happen, such interest is vested, unless a contrary intention appears from the terms of the transfer.

A vested interest is not defeated by the death of the transferee before he obtains possession.

Explanation — An intention that an interest shall not be vested is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the enjoyment thereof is postponed or whereby a prior interest in the same property is given or reserved to some other person, or whereby income arising from the property is directed to be accumulated until the time of enjoyment arrives, or from a provision that, if a particular event shall happen, the interest shall pass to another person.

20 Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created for the benefit of a person not then living he acquires upon his birth, unless a contrary intention appears from the terms of the transfer, a vested interest, although he may not be entitled to the enjoyment thereof immediately on his birth.

21. Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created in favour of a person to take effect only on the happening of a specified uncertain event, or if a specified uncertain event shall not happen, such person thereby acquires a contingent interest in the property. Such interest becomes a vested interest, in the former case, on the happening of the event, in the latter, when the happening of the event becomes impossible.

Exception — Where, under a transfer of property a person becomes entitled to an interest therein upon attaining a particular age, and the transferor also gives to him absolutely the income to arise from such interest before he reaches that age, or directs the income or so much thereof as may be necessary to be applied for his benefit, such interest is not contingent.

Conditional transfer

A vested interest is not defeated by the death of the transferee before he obtains possession.

Explanation—An intention that an interest shall not be vested is not to be inferred merely from a provision whereby the enjoyment thereof is postponed, or whereby a prior interest in the same property is given or reserved to some other person, or whereby income arising from the property is directed to be accumulated until the time of enjoyment arrives, or from a provision that, if a particular event shall happen, the interest shall pass to another person.

21. Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created in favour of a person to take effect only on the happening of a specified uncertain event, or if a specified uncertain event shall not happen, such person thereby acquires a contingent interest in the property. Such interest becomes a vested interest, in the former case, on the happening of the event, in the latter, when the happening of the event becomes impossible.

Exception—Where, under a transfer of property, a person becomes entitled to an interest therein upon attaining a particular age, and the transferor also gives to him absolutely the income to arise from such interest before he reaches that age, or directs the income, or so much thereof as may be necessary to be applied for his benefit, such interest is not contingent.

Notes—The right of a son or daughter or other heir of a person to inherit that person's property on his death is neither a vested nor contingent right. 7 Bom L R 742=30 M 30. Right, title or interest whether vested or contingent is a present right and not a future right. 89 P R 1908=145 P W R 1908.

22 Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created in favour of such members only of a class as shall attain a particular age, such interest does not vest in any member of the class who has not attained that age.

23 Where, on a transfer of property, an interest therein is to accrue to a specified person if a specified uncertain event shall happen and no time is mentioned for the occurrence of that event, the interest fails, unless such event happens before, or at the same time as the intermediate or precedent interest ceases to exist.

A transfers a farm to B for her life and if she does not desert her husband, to C. B is entitled to the farm during her life as if no condition had been inserted.

31 Subject to the provisions of section 12 on a transfer of property an interest therein may be created with the condition superadded that it shall cease to exist in case a specified uncertain event shall happen or in case a specified uncertain event shall not happen.

Condition that transfer shall cease to have effect in case specified uncertain event happens or does not happen

(b) A transfers a farm to B provided that if B shall not go to England within three years after the date of the transfer, his interest in the farm shall cease. B does not go to England within the term prescribed. His interest in the farm ceases.

32 In order that a condition that an interest shall cease to exist may be valid it is necessary that the event to which it relates be one which could legally constitute the condition of the creation of an interest.

Such condition must not be invalid

33 Where on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created subject to a condition that the person taking it shall perform a certain act but no time is specified for the performance of the act the condition is broken when he renders impossible, permanently or for an indefinite period the performance of the act.

Transfer conditional on performance of act, no time being specified for performance

34 Where an act is to be performed by a person either as a condition to be fulfilled before an interest created on a transfer of property is enjoyed by him or as a condition on the non fulfilment of which the interest is to pass from him to another person and a time is specified for the performance of the act if such performance within the specified time is prevented by the fraud of a person who would be directly benefited by non fulfilment of the condition such further time shall as against him be allowed for performing the act as shall be requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud. But if no time is specified for the performance of the act then if its performance is by the fraud of a person interested in the non fulfilment of the condition rendered impossible or indefinitely postponed, the condition shall as against him be deemed to have been fulfilled.

In the same case A dies before the election. His representative must out of the Rs 1,000 pay Rs 800 to B.

The rule in the first paragraph of this section applies whether the transferor does or does not believe that which he professes to transfer to be his own.

A person taking no benefit directly under a transaction, but deriving a benefit under it indirectly, need not elect.

A person who in his own capacity takes a benefit under the transaction may in another dissent therefrom.

Excepting to the last preceding four rules—Where a particular benefit is expressed to be conferred on the owner of the property which the transferor professes to transfer and such benefit is expressed to be in lieu of that property, if such owner claim the property, he must relinquish the particular benefit, but he is not bound to relinquish any other benefit conferred upon him by the same transaction.

Acceptance of the benefit by the person on whom it is conferred constitutes an election by him to confirm the transfer, if he is aware of his duty to elect and of those circumstances which would influence the judgment of a reasonable man in making an election or if he waives enquiry into the circumstances.

Such knowledge or waiver shall in the absence of evidence to the contrary be presumed if the person on whom the benefit has been conferred has enjoyed it for two years without doing any act to express dissent.

Such knowledge or waiver may be inferred from any act of his which renders it impossible to place the persons interested in the property professed to be transferred in the same condition as if such act had not been done.

A transfers to B an estate to which C is entitled, and, as part of the same transaction gives C a coal mine. C takes possession of the mine and exhausts it. He has thereby confirmed the transfer of the estate to B.

If he does not within one year after the date of the transfer signify to the transferor or his representatives his intention to confirm or to dissent from the transfer, the transferor or his representatives may, upon the expiration of that period, require him to make his election, and, if he does not comply with such requisition within a reasonable time after he has received it, he shall be deemed to have elected to confirm the transfer.

In case of disability the election shall be postponed until the disability ceases, or until the election is made by some competent authority.

Notes—Section 39 is intended to protect persons who are entitled to receive maintenance or for whom provision is made for advancement or marriage from the profits of any immovable property transferred. The right may be enforced against a transferee of the property if the transferee has notice of the intention of defeating the right.

The Courts have therefore, always required proof of the intention on the part of the transferor and also of notice of the intention to the transferee (22 All 326, 24 All 160). The illustration to the section is not consistent with the section itself and does not make any reference to the intention of the transferor. In actual practice it is impossible to adduce proof of mere intention. As stated in 12 Bom L R 1075 at pp 1077 and 1078, in order to enable such proof to be adduced, a transferor must have announced his fraudulent intention of defeating the rights of persons entitled to maintenance and the transferee must have heard him doing so. As it is desirable to protect persons entitled to maintenance or for whom provision for advancement has been made from improvident holders of the property it is necessary that the reference to the transferor's intention should be omitted from the section, and the section should be amended accordingly—Report of the Special Committee

The section is intended to protect persons who are entitled to receive maintenance or for whom provision is made for advancement or marriage from the profits of any immovable property transferred. The right may be enforced against a transferee of the property if the transferee has notice of the intention of defeating the right.

is of a similar nature in which 22 Bom. 939 was a mortgage made after the decree for sale and before the date of sale. It was held following 21 W R 349 which was approved by the Judicial Committee in L R 15 I A 97, that the transfer was pendente lite—Report of the Special Committee

Notes—The doctrine of lis pendens is not founded on the equitable doctrine of notice, but on the ground that it is necessary to the administration of justice that the decision of the Court in a suit should be binding not only on the litigant parties but on those who derived title from the pendente lite whether with notice of the suit or not. The effect of the doctrine of lis pendens is not to prevent the transfer of property, but only to render it subject to the decision of the Court in the litigation. The doctrine is not applied to a defendant by virtue of a claim not interfering with the title of the plaintiff in the pending litigation. 9 Bom L R 173

This section imposes two conditions (a) the existence of a contentious suit, and (b) that the transfer should be made during its active prosecution in the Court of the kind described in the section. 31 B 393. The doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to administration suits. 1 Bur L J 133. But it applies to execution sale and revenue sale. 3 Pat L T 296. The doctrine of lis pendens is also applicable to conveyances made between the decree pass in a mortgage suit and the institution of proceedings for bringing the property to sale. 8 Ind Cas 288=6 N L R 140. This principle is applicable in cases where a decree is passed on a compromise. 13 O C 98=6 Ind Cas 750, 17 C W N 413. The doctrine of lis pendens applies to ex parte decrees and in mortgage suit. 13 C W N 138=3 Ind Cas 701. section. This section qualifies the doctrine of lis pendens that is to say, that there can be no lis pendens without a contentious suit. The expression 'during active prosecution' in the section subject to that qualification defines the point of time at which the rule comes into operation. The former rule fixed the commencement and continuance of the suit of any sort whatever, except contentious. And for the purpose of bringing the rule of lis pendens into operation, there must be active prosecution of that suit. What is and what is not an active prosecution must be, from the very nature of the thing, a question of fact. 11 B 393=9

It is not necessary that the suit should become contentious at the time of the transfer. It may become contentious subsequently. 28 A 100. Amendment—Contentious—As to the word 'contentious' it was held in some cases that a suit becomes contentious only from the date on which summons

On the statute 27 Eliz c 4 the English decisions are clear to the effect that a voluntary transfer of land, afterwards made the subject of a conveyance for valuable consideration, may be avoided by subsequent purchaser although in making the voluntary conveyance there was no actual fraud and although the purchaser had notice of the settlement, see 1 Smith's Leading Cases 12th edition, page 27th. From the fact that the settlor afterwards conveyed the land to a purchaser for consideration it was inferred that voluntary conveyance was made with intent to defeat the purchaser. "The principle appears to be that by selling the property for a valuable consideration, the settlor so entirely repudiates the former voluntary conveyance and shows his intention to sell, as that it shall be taken conclusively against him and the person to whom he conveyed, that such intention existed when he made the conveyance and that it was made in order to defeat the purchaser." "It may be assumed," said Grant M R, that a voluntary settlement however free from actual fraud, is by the operation of that statute (27 Eliz c 4) deemed fraudulent and void against a subsequent purchaser for a valuable consideration even when the purchase has been made with notice of the voluntary settlement. He added, however, that he had great difficulty in persuading himself that the words of the statute warranted or that the purpose of it required such a construction, for it was not easy to see how a purchaser could be defrauded by a settlement of which he had notice before he made his purchase.

The English decisions were followed by Couch C J in Judith v Abdool, (1874) 22 W R 60, a case decided before the Transfer of Property Act came into force. Following the same principle Salé J held in Joshua v Alliance Bank of Simla, (1895) 22 Cal 185, that the words 'may be presumed' in paragraph 2 of the section should be construed as equivalent to 'shall be presumed' and that a voluntary transfer of immovable property afterwards made the subject of a transfer for consideration was void as against the subsequent transferee even though the subsequent transferee had notice of the previous transfer. An appeal was preferred from the judgment of Salé J to the appeal to Couch C J and specifically with the point of decision was confirmed on other from by Jenkins C J in Burrows v Munnamman, (1903) 10 Bom L R 101. As regard transfer made with intent to defraud creditors the Court in India have held that the phrase 'may be presumed' in the second paragraph should be given its plain meaning that is to say, the meaning which it bears in the Indian Evidence Act 1872 section 3. The result is that the same phrase "may be presumed" may have one meaning attached to it in case of transfers made to defraud subsequent transferees and another meaning in case of transfers made to defeat or delay creditors. Again paragraph 3 of the section can hardly apply to cases where there is contest between a prior voluntary Paragraph 2 of section 53 lays down a rule of evidence. It says that when the effect of any transfer of immovable property is to defeat or delay creditors, and the transfer is made gratuitously, the transfer may be presumed to have been made with intent to defeat or delay creditors. The words 'when the effect of any transfer is to defeat or delay creditors' have given rise to considerable difficulty and the Courts have resorted to English decisions to determine when a voluntary transfer can be said to have that effect. But even in England the course of decisions on the subject is not uniform. In Spiro v Willows, 3 De G J & S 294, Lord Westbury laid down two separate rules—one as to creditors existing at the date of the transfer and another as to subsequent creditors. In In re Lane Fox (1900) 2 Q B 508 Wright J, adopted the second rule laid down by Lord Westbury, and held that an honest voluntary settlement made by a solvent person was not to void merely because it proved some years afterwards to have the effect of defeating or delaying subsequent creditors. In Freeman v Pope, 5 Ch App 538 it was laid down that it is not necessary to prove any actual intention to delay creditors where the facts are such as to show that the necessary consequence of what was done was to delay them, and that in such cases the intent must be inferred. This doctrine that the intent must be inferred was criticised in Ex parte Mercer, 17 Q B D 290, a case which was approved by the Court of Appeal. In re Holland (1902) 2 Ch 360

The principle now generally adopted by the Courts in England is that laid down by Kindersley V C, in Thompson v Webster, 4 Drews, 628 at p 632 That principle is as follows —

'It is not necessary, in order to set aside a voluntary deed that a settlor should be actually in a state of insolvency The principle now established in this the language of the Act being that any conveyance of property is void against creditors if it is made with intent to defeat hinder or delay creditors the Court is to decide in each particular case whether, or all the circumstances, it can come to the conclusion that the intention of the settlor in making the settlement, was to defeat, hinder or delay his creditors'

The above statement of the law was accepted as correct by the Judicial Committee in Godfrey v Poole 3 App Cas 497 Again in In re Holland (1901) 2 Ch 360 it was held by the Court of Appeal that in considering whether a conveyance was void under the statute the Court must look at the whole of the circumstances surrounding the execution of the conveyance and see whether it was in fact executed with the intent to defeat and delay creditors It is therefore proposed to delete paragraph 2 of section 53 and to leave the determination of the question of intent to be dealt with according to the ordinary rules of evidence

Coming now to transfers made with intent to defraud subsequent transferees for value we have already referred to the English cases by which it was determined that every voluntary conveyance of immovable property was void as against a subsequent purchaser for value These decisions as stated above were followed by Sale but the law in England was altered by the Voluntary Conveyances Act 1893 (56 and 57) which provided that a voluntary conveyance if made bonafide should not be deemed fraudulent within the meaning of the subsequent purchase for value Section 2 of the Voluntary Conveyances Act has been repealed by the English Law of Property Act, 1925 and reproduced in section 173 of that Act We think that a similar provision should be made and we have done so accordingly in subsection (2)

For the reasons already given we have included paragraph 3 of section 53 in the new sub-section (1)

To make subsection (1) more comprehensive we have provided that is done in section 172 of the English Law of Property Act 1925 that nothing contained in subsection (1) shall affect the law of insolvency for the time being in force Thus

Insolvency Act and section 6 of the Provincial Insolvency Act or it may be void as amounting to a fraudulent preference within the meaning of section 56 of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act and section 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act suit to set aside a transfer on competent to any one creditor

Eliz 4 went the same way and it was held that a suit should be brought by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and all other unsatisfied creditors of the deceased, see French v French, 6 De G M & G 95 Richardson v Smallwood, Jac. 557 In 42 Mad 143, however the opinion was expressed that a suit to avoid a transfer made with intent to defraud creditors may be instituted by a single creditor We are unable to accept this opinion The practice followed by the High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay is in accordance with form No 13 Appendix D to Schedule I of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, and is based on the wholesome principle that the transferee should not be exposed to a multiplicity of suits at the instance of various creditors We think it is desirable to give statutory recognition to this practice We also do not agree with the view expressed by the High Court of Madras that a decree-holder is not a creditor and that he may therefore bring a suit on his own behalf to set aside the transfer. We have accordingly added a new paragraph

The first paragraph of section 53 contains the words "prior or subsequent transferees," but it is difficult to see in what cases prior transferee could have any reason to complain for a completed transfer must always, in the absence of a special contract binding the transferee, take precedence of a later transfer see section 48 of the Act. Hence we have omitted the word "prior"

The first paragraph also contains the words "having an interest in such property" It is difficult

these words find no place in any of accordingly omitted these words in

*"53A Where any person contracts to transfer for consideration any immovable property by writing signed by him or on his behalf from which the terms necessary to constitute the transfer can be ascertained with reasonable certainty, and the transferee has performed or is willing to perform his part of the contract, then, notwithstanding that the contract, though required to be registered, has not been registered, or, where there is an instrument of transfer, that the transfer has not been completed in the manner prescribed therefor by the law for the time being in force, the transferor or any person claiming under him shall be debarred from enforcing against the transferee and persons claiming under him any right in respect of the property of which the transferee has taken or continued in possession, other than a right expressly provided by the terms of the contract

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the rights of a transferee for consideration who has no notice of the contract or of the part performance thereof "

Reason of the amendment—We have proposed a more rigorous use of registration in the transfer of immovable properties than is now enjoined by law, and the changes we have proposed are, we think, calculated to minimise, if not to prevent perjuries and frauds. We cannot, however, ignore the fact that in actual practice circumstances do arise when the rigorous application of the law of registration may result in fraud instead of preventing it. Similar circumstances led to the introduction of the doctrine of part performance in England

By section 4 of the Statute of Frauds (1677) (29 Car II C 3) it is provided that reemement relating to land which is not

eral ground and that which that nothing is to be const rty into a situation which is (Ibid, section 1017)

In applying the doctrine of part performance the Courts have confined it within strict limits. From the decided cases the following may be taken as the essential elements necessary for the application of the doctrine —

- (1) that the transferee has been put in possession of the property ;
- (2) that his possession can be referred to the particular transfer and not to any other relationship ;
- (3) that it will amount to a fraud on the part of the transferor to back out of such transfer, and doctrine has been applied

by the Indian Courts to cases where the transfer was not effected by a registered instrument. In the case of Mohamed Musa v Aghore Kumar Ganguly, (42 I A 1), their Lordships of the Privy Council observed —

"They do not think that there is anything either in the law of India or of England inconsistent with it the doctrine of part performance but upon the contrary that the law of India is in accordance with it. Lord Selborne in Walton v Walton (1862) 11 L.J. 100, 101, said: 'The doctrine of part performance the acts done in execution of such equities were excluded, injustice of a kind, which the statute cannot be thought to have had in contemplation would follow'."

Their Lordships further said — "The matter has advanced beyond the stage of contract, and the equities which arise out of the stage which it has reached cannot be administered unless the contract is regarded. They go on to say —

Many authorities are cited in support of these propositions from English and Scotch Law and no countenance is given to the propositions that equity will fail to support a transaction clothed imperfectly in those legal forms to which finality attaches after the bargain has been acted upon. From these authorities one dictum quoted by Lord Selborne from Sir John Strange (1 Ves 441) may be here repeated, 'if confessed or in part carried into execution it will be binding on the parties and carried into further execution as such, inequity'. Their Lordships do not think that the law of India is inconsistent with these principles, on the contrary it follows them.

We do not think that the time has arrived when this equitable doctrine can be safely abrogated in favour of a rigid application of the law of registration. Ignorant transferees in this country who have partly performed the contract require a greater protection than in England. When a transferee has, according to law taken possession, and treats the transferee as a trespasser, the doctrine of part performance should be given to the doctrine of part performance. At the same time care should be taken that the law of registration is not evaded and that the introduction of the doctrine does not lead to 'perjuries and frauds' which it is the object of the doctrine to prevent. With this end in view we propose—

- (1) that the agreement should be in writing signed by the party or his agent whom it is sought to bind ;
- (2) that the transferee should in part performance of the contract take possession of the property or, if already in possession and in the latter case should do some act in furtherance of the contract ;
- (3) that the transferee seeking to avail himself of the doctrine should perform or be willing to perform his part of the bargain as contained in the writing ;
- (4) that when the contract has been partly performed all rights and liabilities under the contract should arise and be enforceable between the parties to the contract notwithstanding that the transaction has not been completed according to law, and

(5) that the application of the doctrine should not affect the rights of a transferee for consideration who has no notice of the contract or of the part performance thereof

We think that it should be made clear that by reason of the part performance, account of non registration no title has passed, yet by reason of part performance equities have arisen which Courts of law ought to recognise and enforce. As pointed out in Mahomed Musa's case when a contract has been partly performed, the matter has to be considered on its merits and not as a matter of law.

which arise out of the contract is regarded as a matter of law. We propose, therefore, to restrict the doctrine as expressed in the Act to the case of a sale or a mortgage because a contract for sale or mortgage is registered. Questions may arise in the case of an agreement to sell. Such agreements require to be performed. If the lessee takes possession he may not even sue for specific performance because he cannot prove the agreement if it be not registered. (See 26 C W N 320) Such a state of things enables the lessor to treat the lessee in possession as a trespasser and thereby practise a fraud upon him. We think that the Courts should be in a position to grant specific performance. We propose therefore that in such a case the agreement may be proved in Court notwithstanding non registration. If evidence, it is desirable in our opinion that the agreement should be in writing when the doctrine of part performance is sought to be invoked.

We are not unmindful of the weighty opinion expressed in chapter 35 of the report of the Civil Justice Committee. That Committee has recommended a rigid application of the law of registration and the rejection of the doctrine of part performance. The principal objections formulated by the Committee are—

(1) The recognition of the doctrine is inconsistent with the necessity for registration. We have shown that in as much as part performance cannot confer a title registration would still be necessary.

(2) A mass of perjured evidence will be introduced if oral agreements are allowed to be proved. To meet this objection we have proposed that the agreement people will get accustomed to the doctrine of part performance at a stage when the necessity for registration does not exist.

the doctrine should be restricted so as not to go beyond what the law requires. We have deliberately

as with regard to the period of limitation when there has been a part performance, it can be given only within the period of limitation. The other view being that the first section of the Specific Relief Act, 1936, which gives relief in the case of part performance, is subject to the period of limitation. We have deliberately restricted the doctrine to the same relation to each case which arose within the period of limitation.

that period remain the same. In fact the longer the possession in part performance the higher will be the equities. We, therefore, think that, in order that the relief may be effective it ought to be available at all times during which the transferee is in possession in part performance of the contract and subject to the other conditions which we have proposed. In 46 Mad 919 and 23 C W N 284 the Courts took the view that the relief was available even after the period of limitation for specific performance was over. We feel that in order that the relief may be real, it ought to be available as between the parties to the transaction even after such period of limitation.

It is necessary in this connection to have a new section in the Specific Relief Act dealing with the same subject, and we have, therefore, proposed the addition of section 30A at the end of Chapter II in the Specific Relief Act. We propose that statutory recognition of part performance is a matter of considerable importance we think it desirable to explain in further detail the reasons for the various recommendations we are making.

(1) In order to avoid perjured evidence which is likely to centre round an oral agreement we are providing for the agreement to be in writing.

(2) If possession be taken in part performance of the contract, that fact along with the writing ought to be sufficient to attribute the possession to the agreement. But in the case of a person already in possession we have recommended some further act of part performance, e.g. ; by payment of different rent or the spending of money, because the possession may not be exclusively referable to the agreement.

(3) In proving that the transferor shall be debarred from enforcing against a transferee any rights except such as arise out of the agreement we desire to make it clear that the rights arising out of the contract as between the transferor and the transferee should be enforceable as if the transfer has been completed according to law. This provision will prevent a transferor from ejecting a transferee who has in part performance of the contract taken possession, and at the same time enable the transferor to sue the transferee upon his covenant, say, to pay rent. The effect of this provision will be that the mutual covenants between the transferor and the transferee will be operative, though by reason of non registration no title has passed. This will necessitate the completion of the transfer according to law by execution and registration in order that the transferee may get a marketable title. Thus the law of registration will not be evaded.

(4) We have provided for a further safeguard in that the equities arising out of part performance may not affect the rights of a transferee for value without notice. This will again have the effect of requiring the completion of the transfer according to law because otherwise the first transferee will be in a precarious position in the case of a subsequent transferee for value without notice asserting his right under such subsequent transfer. The claims of the subsequent transferee will of course be subject to the doctrine that, ordinarily possession will constitute notice of the title of the person in possession. Thus the transferor will not find it easy to practise a fraud upon the transferee in possession by making a second transfer. The second transferee will have notice of the title of the first transferee in possession whatever that title may be. The protection given to the second transferee is not illusory because under the amended section 3 of this Act he will be regarded as having notice of the title of the person in actual possession and not of the title of the prior transferee who may be only in constructive possession. Therefore, it would be still necessary for the first transferee in constructive possession to have his transfer perfected according to law by registration and thereby acquire an indefeasible title.—Report of the Special Committee

view that the relief was available even after the period of limitation for specific performance was over. We feel that in order that the relief may be real, it ought to be available as between the parties to the transaction even after such period of limitation.

It is necessary in this connection to have a new section in the Specific Relief Act dealing with the same subject, and we have, therefore, proposed the addition of section 30A at the end of Chapter II in the Specific Relief Act. We propose that section 49 of the Registration Act should be amended so as to provide for the admission of unregistered documents required by law to be registered, for the purpose of proving part performance within the meaning of the new section 53A of the Transfer of Property Act and section 30A of the Specific Relief Act. Inasmuch as the statutory recognition of part performance is a matter of considerable importance we think it desirable to explain in further detail the reasons for the various recommendations we are making.

(1) In order to avoid perjured evidence which is likely to centre round an oral agreement we are providing for the agreement to be in writing.

OF SALES OF IMMOVABLE PROPERTY

54 'Sale' = a transfer of ownership in exchange for a price paid or promised, or part paid and part promised.

Such transfer, in the case of tangible immovable property of the value Sale how made of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument

In the case of tangible immovable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property

Delivery of tangible immovable property takes place when the seller places the buyer, or such person as he directs, in possession of the property

A contract for the sale of immovable property is a contract that a sale of Contract for sale such property shall take place on terms settled between the parties

It does not of itself, create any interest in, or charge on such property

55. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the buyer and the seller of immovable property respectively are subject to the liabilities, and have the rights, mentioned in the rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold —

(1) The seller is bound—

(a) to disclose to the buyer any material defect in the property "or in the seller's title thereto" of which the seller is, and the buyer is not aware, and which the buyer could not with ordinary care discover,

(b) to produce to the buyer on his request for examination all documents of title relating to the property which are in the seller's possession or power,

(c) to answer to the best of his information all relevant questions put to him by the buyer in respect of the property or the title thereto,

(d) on payment or tender of the amount due in respect of the price, to execute a proper conveyance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place,

(e) between the date of the contract of sale and the delivery of the property, to take as much care of the property and all documents of title relating thereto which are in his possession as an owner of ordinary prudence would take of such property and documents,

(f) to give, on being so required, the buyer, or such person as he directs, such possession of the property as its nature admits,

(g) to pay all public charges and rent accrued due in respect of the property up to the date of the sale, the interest on all incumbrances on such property due on such date, and except where the property is sold subject to incumbrances to discharge all incumbrances on the property then existing.

(2) The seller shall be deemed to contract with the buyer that the interest which the seller professes to transfer to the buyer subsists, and that he has power to transfer the same.

Provided that, where the sale is made by a person in a fiduciary character, he shall be deemed to contract with the buyer that the seller has done no act whereby the property is incumbered, or whereby he is hindered from transferring it.

The benefit of the contract mentioned in this rule shall be annexed to, and shall go with, the interest of the transferee as such, and may be enforced by every person in whom that interest is for the whole or any part thereof, from time to time, vested.

(3) Where the whole of the purchase money has been paid to the seller, he is also bound to deliver to the buyer all documents of title relating to the property which are in the seller's possession or power.

Provided that (a) where the seller retains any part of the property comprised in such documents he is entitled to retain them all, and (b) where the whole of such property is sold to different buyers, the buyer of the lot of greatest value is entitled to such documents. But in case (a), the seller, and in case (b) the buyer of the lot of greatest value is bound, upon every reasonable request by the buyer, or by any of the other buyers, as the case may be, and at the cost of the person making the request, to produce the said documents and furnish such true copies thereof or extracts therefrom as he may require and in the meantime, the seller or the buyer of the lot of greatest value, as the case may be, shall keep the said documents safe, uncanceled, and undefaced, unless prevented from so doing by fire or other inevitable accident.

(4) The seller is entitled—

(a) to the rents and profits of the property till the ownership thereof passes to the buyer,

(b) where the ownership of the property has passed to the buyer before payment of the whole of the purchase money, to a charge upon the property in the hands of the buyer "any transferee without consideration or any transferee with notice of the non payment" for the amount of the purchase money or any part thereof remaining unpaid, and for interest on such amount or part "from the date on which possession has been delivered"

(5) The buyer is bound—

(a) to disclose to the seller any fact as to the nature or extent of the seller's interest in the property of which the buyer is aware, but of which he has reason to believe that the seller is not aware, and which materially increases the value of such interest,

(b) to pay or tender, at the time and place of completing the sale, the purchase money to the seller or such person as he directs. Provided that where the property is sold free from incumbrances the buyer may retain, out of the purchase money, the amount of any incumbrances on the property existing at the date of the sale, and shall pay the amount so retained to the persons entitled thereto,

(c) where the ownership of the property has passed to the buyer, to bear any loss arising from the destruction, injury or decrease in value of the property not caused by the seller,

(d) where the ownership of the property has passed to the buyer as between himself and the seller, to pay all public charges and rent which may become payable in respect of the property the principal moneys due on any incumbrances subject to which the property is sold, and the interest thereon afterwards accruing due

(6) The buyer is entitled—

(a) Where the ownership of the property has passed to him to the benefit of any improvement in, or increase in value of, the property, and to the rents and profits thereof,

(b) unless he has improperly declined to accept delivery of the property to a charge on the property as against the seller and all persons claiming under him to the extent of the seller's interest in the property, for the amount of any purchase money properly paid by the buyer in anticipation of the delivery and for interest on such amount, and, when he properly declines to accept the delivery, also for the earnest (if any) and for the costs (if any) awarded to him of a suit to compel specific performance of the contract, or to obtain a decree for its rescission

An omission to make such disclosures as are mentioned in this section, paragraph 1, clause (a) and paragraph 5 clause (a), is fraudulent

Notes—It is not permissible to extract a single clause of this section and use it without relation to the clauses which have preceded it. Each clause seems to assume that the conditions imposed by those preceding it have been satisfied. 7 Ind Cas 541

Sub sec 1 cl (a)—The words "defects in the property" in this clause include not only the defects in the property itself, but also defects in the title of the property. This clause casts upon the seller the duty of disclosing to the buyer all defects whether in the title or in the estate itself. 7 W R 258, 58 Ind Cas 529, 9 M 82, 25 Ch D 357, 1 C P D 145, 20 B 522, 25 C 298, 21 M 8. There is no obligation cast on the vendor to disclose prior incumbrance. 2 A L J 268

Reason of the change—Sub-clause (a) of clause (1) of section 55 provides that a seller is bound to disclose to the buyer any material defect in the property of which the seller is aware. The expression material defect in the property has been held to include a defect in the title of the seller (1 L R 20 Bom 522). We propose to give effect to the decision by inserting the words "or in the seller's title thereto" in sub clause (1).

Sub Section 4 of the Act—Both in England and in India the vendor has a lien for unpaid purchase money which is non-possessory. He is only entitled to retain the title deeds and to a charge for the unpaid purchase money. 30 M 524=17 M L J 450. There is no lien for purchase money when there is an undertaking that the balance would be paid later on. 6 C W N 150. According to provisions of the Act the vendee is entitled to possession even though the purchase money is not paid and the vendor is entitled to have a statutory charge on the property for unpaid purchase money. 8 Ind Cas 354. The Transfer of Property Act gives a statutory charge upon the estate in an unpaid vendor unless it be excluded by contract such a charge stands quite different from vendors lien. The Court has to find something either an express contract, or at least something from which it is a necessary implication that such a contract exists in order to exclude the charge given by the statute. The charge is not excluded by a mere personal contract to defer payment of a portion of the purchase money or to take the purchase money by instalment, nor is it excluded by any contract covenant or agreement with respect to the purchase money which is not inconsistent with the continuance of the charge. 31 C 57 P C = 31 I A 238=8 C W N 41 see also 46 B 195. The question whether the acceptance of a personal security by the holder of a lien from a person other than the purchaser destroys the lien is really one of intention whether the vendors intended to do so. In the absence of any circumstances pointing to the conclusion there is no presumption in favour of abandonment of the lien. 10 M L T 189, see also 5 M L T 205, 7 Ind Cas 639.

The statutory charge in favour of the vendor is excluded by an express mortgage taken in respect of the amount of the unpaid purchase money. 15 N L R 109= 51 Ind Cas 721. The vendor of certain property took a mortgage for the balance of the purchase money, but the mortgage deed was not registered. The vendor brought a suit for the recovery and for enforcing his lien. 51 Ind Cas 503, see also 10 L W 518, 1911 M W N 514, 43 A 319, 43 A 544, 203 Bom L R 1000, 35 M L J 304.

Reason of the change—Sub-clause (b) of clause (4) of the same section provides that the vendor's lien for the purchase money can be enforced against the property in the hands of the buyer. The provision as it stands is insufficient as such lien can easily be defeated by the buyer by parting with the property. It is therefore, proposed to provide that it can be enforced against the property in the hands not only of the buyer, but also of all other persons claiming under him if they have notice of the sale. This clause is also silent as to the date from which interest on the unpaid purchase money should run. It seems fair that it should run from the date of the sale.

CHAPTER IV.

OF MORTGAGES OF IMMOVABLE PROPERTY AND CHARGES

58 (a) A mortgage is the transfer of an interest in specific immovable property for the purpose of securing the payment of money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan in existing or future debt, or the performance of an engagement which may give rise to a pecuniary liability

The transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the principal money and interest of which payment is secured for the time being are called the mortgage-money, and the instrument (if any) by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage deed

(b) Where, without delivering possession of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor binds himself personally to pay the mortgage money, and the mortgagee or his transferee has no right to take possession of the mortgaged property, that is called a simple mortgage

(c) Where the mortgagor ostensibly sells the mortgaged property—on condition that, on default of payment of the mortgage money on a certain date, the sale shall become absolute, or on condition that, on such payment being made, the sale shall become void, or on condition that, on such payment being made, the buyer shall transfer the property to the seller, the transaction is called a mortgage by conditional sale, and the mortgagee is called a mortgagee by conditional sale

' Provided that no such transaction shall be deemed to be a mortgage unless the condition is embodied in the document which effects or purports to effect the sale ' *

(d) Where the mortgagor delivers possession "or expressly or by implication binds himself to deliver possession " of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee, and authorizes him to retain such possession until payment of the mortgage money and to receive the rents and profits accruing from the property, "or any part of such rents and profits and to appropriate the same"† in lieu of interest, or in payment of the mortgage money, or partly in lieu of interest, "or"† partly in payment of the mortgage money, the transaction is called an usufructuary mortgage, and mortgagee an usufructuary mortgagee

(e) Where the mortgagor binds himself to repay the mortgage money on a certain date, and transfer the mortgaged property absolutely to the mortgagee, but subjects to a proviso that he will retransfer it to the mortgagor upon payment of the mortgage money as agreed, the transaction is called an English mortgage

* (f) Where a person in any of the following towns, namely, the towns of Calcutta, Madras Bombay, Karachi, Rangoon, Moulmein Bassein and Akyab and in any other town which the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, specify in this behalf, delivers to a creditor or his agent documents of title to immovable property, with intent to create a security thereon, the transaction is called a mortgage by deposit of title deeds

(g) A mortgage which is not a simple mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, an usufructuary mortgage, an English mortgage or a mortgage by deposit of title deeds within the meaning of this section is called an anomalous mortgage

General—A deed of indemnity whereby property is hypothecated is a deed of mortgage 5 A L J 721 see also 9 M L T 309 A document purporting to be one of sale though it is accompanied by a contract reserving to the vendor a right of repurchase is not on that account to be construed as if it were a mortgage The test to apply is whether the relation of the debtor and creditor subsists between the parties 15 Ind Cas 423 A document attested by a witness does not create a mortgage 11 A L J 141 (F B) This section does not require the personal signature of the mortgagor, and that if his signature is affixed to the instrument of mortgage by another under his authority which authority need not be by a deed in writing that is in effect the signature of the mortgagor himself and is sufficient to constitute a valid mortgage 24 A 319 (F B) = A W N 1902, 127 One of the main points an out and out sale it is real. The ostensible or real nature of the transaction can, however, be only determined by finding out the intention of the parties. In order to escape the liability of accounting for the profits of the property and other liabilities imposed on a mortgagee and also to escape the provisions of some of the local laws enacted for the benefit of agriculturists, creditors resort to the mode of having a mortgage which is in form an out and out sale. Since the decision of the Privy Council in Balkishen Das v Legge, (1 L R 22 All 149), it has been a well settled rule that it is not open to Courts to allow any extraneous evidence in order to find out the intention of the parties. Such intention must, therefore, be gathered from the document itself which purports to effect the transaction. These transactions have given rise to a great deal of litigation and Courts are compelled to enumerate and consider all the various criteria which have been laid down for the purpose of determining whether a transaction is a mortgage or an out and out sale. In order to avoid difficulties indicated above, we think it is desirable to lay down a statutory test by which the intention is to be gathered. We, therefore, propose that no transaction should be deemed to be a mortgage by conditional sale unless the condition is embodied in the document which operates or purports to effect the sale.

In a suit on a usufructuary mortgage where possession had not been delivered the Madras High Court held that the mortgage money had not become due under section 68 of the Transfer of Property Act that under section 67 the mortgagee was entitled to a decree for sale. They held that the provision of the latter section that the usufructuary mortgagee has no right to sale did not apply on the ground that delivery not having been effected, the transaction did not amount to a usufructuary mortgage (1 L R 41 Mad 259). It seems to us that the High Court in that case omitted to notice that the mortgagee could only sue for the mortgage money under section 68 on the basis of the transaction on being a usufructuary mortgage and on no other and that the same transaction could not be treated as a usufructuary mortgage for the purpose of attracting the provisions of section 68 and as not being a usufructuary mortgage for the purpose of applying section 67. The remedy of a usufructuary mortgagee to whom possession is not delivered is to sue for possession and the mere fact that possession is not delivered cannot alter the character of the transaction (7 N W P 56, 7 Beng L R 14, 1 L R 10 Cal 63, 4 I A 15, 31 All 318). We think it necessary to amend the section so as to avoid the anomalous result arrived at in the Madras case quoted above. We accordingly propose that after the words 'where the mortgagee delivers possession' the words 'or expressly or by implication binds himself to deliver possession' should be inserted.

The definition of a usufructuary mortgage is not exhaustive. It does not provide for a case where the mortgagee is entitled to appropriate a portion only of the income of the property mortgaged in payment of the mortgage money. We propose to alter the section accordingly.

Section 98 only deals with certain classes or types of anomalous mortgages and defines anomalous mortgages as clauses (b) to (d) of section 58. It is proposed to add a new section as a separate clause. The mortgages should be dealt with

Mortgage by deposit of title deeds how created—The deposit of title deeds, however, is not infrequently accompanied by an agreement either verbal or written in which an intention to create a charge is expressly stated. When this is the case the transaction does not substantially differ from an express consensual mortgage, and it may be said that there is no reason why, as between parties who can pass land without a formal deed and without delivery of possession such a transaction should not be given effect to. Ghose's Mortgage p 204, see also Verden v Luckpally 9 M I A 307, 324, Keys v Williams, 37 C Ex R 60 61. Rights and Liabilities of mortgagor.

60 At any time after the principal money has become "due" the mortgagor has a right, on payment or tender, at a proper time and place, of the mortgage money, to require the mortgagee (a) to deliver "to the mortgagor the mortgage deed and all documents relating to the mortgaged property which are in the possession or power of the mortgagee"† (b) where the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, to deliver possession thereof to the mortgagor, and (c) at the cost of the mortgagor either to retransfer the mortgaged property to him or to such third person as he may direct, or to execute and (where the mortgage has been effected by a registered instrument) to have registered an acknowledgment in writing that any right in derogation of his interest transferred to the mortgagee has been extinguished.

Provided that the right conferred by this section has not been extinguished by act of the parties, or by "decree"‡ of a Court.

The right conferred by this section is called a right to redeem and a suit to enforce it is called a suit for redemption.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid any provision to the effect that, if the time fixed for payment of the principal money has been allowed to pass or no such time has been fixed, the mortgagee shall be entitled to reasonable notice before payment or tender of such money.

Nothing in this section shall entitle a person interested in a share only of the mortgaged property to redeem his own share only, on payment of a proportionate part of the amount remaining due on the mortgage, except "only"‡ where a mortgagee, or, if there are more mortgagees than one, all such mortgagees, has or have acquired, in whole or in part, the share of a mortgagor.

Notes—Under this section of the Act if the mortgagees have acquired in whole or in part the share of a mortgagor, a person interested in a share only of the mortgaged property may redeem his own share. 3 C L J 377, 28 A 155, 31 A 335. Under this section, the non payment and non tender of the amount due on the mortgage previous to suit is not a bar to a suit for redemption. 24 M 408. The words in s. 60, Transfer of Property Act "at any time after the principal money has become payable" refer to the time agreed on for payment of the mortgage money. 2 C P L R 241.

Amendment—"The word 'payable' in section 60 at one time gave rise to a diversity of opinion. It was held in some cases that when a day was fixed for the payment of the debt secured by a mortgage and nothing more was stated, the presumption was that the day was fixed for the convenience of the debtor and that it was open to the mortgagor if he liked, to pay the debt at an earlier date (1 L R 10 All 602). A contrary view was taken in other cases and the general principle that the rights of redemption and foreclosure are co extensive was strictly followed (1 L R 5 Bom 22, 29 All 471). In the last mentioned cases, where the deed provided that the mortgagor should pay "within . . . year," the suit brought to redeem the property before the expiry of that period, was held premature. There is nothing in law to prevent the parties from stipulating expressly that the mortgagor may discharge the debt within the specified period and take back the property but is an elementary proposition that the mortgagee is not entitled to foreclose before the mortgage money has become due. As a corollary to that proposition it is reasonable to hold that a mortgagor also should not be allowed to redeem before the mortgage money has become due.

‡ Inserted by Act XX of 1929.

It is possible that a mortgagee, relying on the condition in a mortgage regarding the period of redemption, may have entered into other transactions which will be affected if the mortgage is redeemed before the period stipulated for redemption fore closure has expired. In Bakhtawar Begum v Hosaini Khanum 1 L R 36 All 193, the Privy Council has approved of the view taken in 1 L R 29 All 471 that redemption should not be allowed within the term of the mortgage. In order to remove any doubt on this point the word 'due' has been substituted for the word 'payable' in the first paragraph.

It should be made clear that on redemption a mortgagee is bound to deliver not only the mortgage deed in his possession but all documents in his possession relating to the mortgaged property. As it is proposed that hereafter all mortgages should be by registered instruments the words in brackets, viz "where the mortgage has been effected by a registered instrument" have become unnecessary and should be omitted.

what is known as the principle of the integrity or indivisibility exists not but is generally benefited thereby, but also with reference to the mortgagor. Save as a matter of special arrangement neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee nor any person claiming through either of them should get relief except in consonance with the principle of indivisibility. We do not think it necessary to alter the last paragraph of the section except that the word 'only' should be inserted between the words "except and 'where'" with a view to get rid of the effect of the decision in 27 Bom L R 1449. The only case, therefore, when the integrity of a mortgage may be allowed to be broken, apart from the fact that the mortgagor acquires a share in the mortgaged property, is where the mortgage is made in order absolute in mortgage suits under XXXIV in the First Schedule to the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and sections 60, 67 and 67 A of the principal Act.

It is proposed to substitute the word 'decree' for the word 'order' whenever it occurs as also in sections 32 and 33.—Report of the Select Committee

* 60A (1) Where a mortgagee is entitled to redemption then, on the fulfilment of any conditions on the fulfilment of which he would be entitled to require a retransfer he may require the mortgagee, instead of retransferring the property, to assign the mortgaged property to such third person as the mortgagee shall be bound to assign and transfer.

When there is a conflict between the provisions of this section and, as between encumbrancers, the requisition of a prior encumbrancer shall prevail over that of a subsequent encumbrancer.

(3) The provisions of this section do not apply in the case of a mortgagee who is or has been in possession.

* 60B A mortgagee as long as his right of redemption subsists shall be entitled to inspect and produce documents relating to the mortgaged property which are in the custody or power of the mortgagee at all reasonable times, at his request and at his own cost, and on payment of the mortgagee's costs and expenses in this behalf, to inspect and make copies or abstracts of, or extracts from documents of title relating to the mortgaged property.

Notes.—We have added on the lines of sections 95 and 96 of the English Property Act two new sections—60 A and 60 B—to define the obligation of a mortgagee, when so required to transfer the mortgage debt to a third person named by the mortgagor and also to make it clear that a mortgagor has a right to inspect and take copies of the document of title relating to the mortgaged property.—Report of the Select Committee

*"61. Amendment—"Section 61 abolished the doctrine of the consolidation of mortgages. The section was based on section 17 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, (corresponding to section 93 of the Property Act, 1925). In England before that statute was enacted, and in this country before Act IV of 1882 was passed a mortgagee was allowed to consolidate securities in his hands and force a mortgagor to redeem all of them or to prevent him from redeeming one of them without redeeming the others [Ghose on Mortgage, Vol I, p 429, 5th Edn 6 Bom II C R (A C J) 90]. This was inequitable and was altered by section 61 of the Act. But even that section is not exhaustive. It is proposed, therefore, that a mortgagor should be allowed to redeem simultaneously all debts or any one or more of them which have become due to the same mortgagee. The same principle ought to apply where portions of one and the same property are mortgaged separately. Accordingly, any reference to "property" has been omitted and the words "two or more mortgages" have been used and the illustration has been omitted"—Report of the Special Committee

Where such accession has been acquired at the expense of the mortgagee and is capable of separate possession or enjoyment without detriment to the principal property, the mortgagor desiring to take the accession must pay to the mortgagee the expense of acquiring it. If such separate possession or enjoyment is not possible, the accession must be delivered with the property the mortgagor being liable in the case of an acquisition necessary to preserve the property from destruction, forfeiture or sale, or made with his assent, to pay the proper cost thereof as an addition to the principal money, with interest at the same rate as is payable on the principal or where no such rate is fixed at the rate of nine per cent per annum.

In the case last mentioned, the profits if any, arising from the accession shall be credited to the mortgagor.

Where the mortgage is usufructuary and the accession has been acquired at the expense of the mortgagee, the profits, if any, arising from the accession shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be set off against interest if any, payable on the money so expended.

(2) Where any such improvement was effected at the cost of the mortgagee and was necessary to preserve the property from destruction or deterioration or was necessary to prevent the security from becoming insufficient, or was made in compliance with the lawful order of any public servant or public authority, the mortgagor shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary be liable to pay the proper cost thereof as an addition to the principal money with interest at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or, where no such rate is fixed at the rate of nine per cent per annum, and the profits, if any, accruing by reason of the improvement shall be credited to the mortgagor.”

property In the absence of such express provision it has been held in some cases that a mortgagee is not entitled to charge or obtain any compensation for improvements made (1 L R 19 Mad 37, 37 All 81) On the other hand some Courts following the English decisions in Shephard v Jones, 21 Ch D 469, Sandon v Hooper, 5 Beav 246, Henderson v Astwood, (1894) A C 150 have held that a mortgagee should have a charge for improvements if they are reasonable (1 L R 43 Bom 69, 45 Bom 1301) According to the English Law, as summarised by Fisher on Mortgage (Art, 1782, 6 li Edn) 'the improvements must always be reasonable having regard to the nature and value of the estate, for, if it were not so, a weapon would be put in the mortgagee's hands with which he might greatly clog the right of redemption, which he has no right to make more expensive than protect the on Mortgage, e mortgagee, law is thus

expounded (p 1232) —

'Unless the sanction of the mortgagor has been obtained the mortgagee will not be allowed for substantial repairs not being strictly necessary or for improvements, unless the value of the property has been increased thereby Indeed according to some older cases even substantial improvements have been disallowed, unless done with the consent or acquiescence after notice by the mortgagor A mortgagee can hardly be said to be safe in making improvements in the mortgaged property without such consent or acquiescence But the tendency of later decisions appears to be more favourable to the mortgagee in this respect and it has been laid down that prima facie, a mortgagee who has expended money in improvements is entitled to an inquiry whether the outlay has increased the value of the property, and to be allowed such outlay so far as the value is proved to have been increased thereby'

Amendment—In the absence of an express provision in the Act, a question is sometimes raised whether a mortgagor in possession is competent to grant a lease of the mortgaged property during the continuance of the mortgage and whether such a lease is binding on the mortgagee. The Act, 1881, was passed a mortgagor could mortgagee (Keech v Hall, 1 Smith L C 1 D 678, Robins v Whyte, (1906) 1 K B of an English mortgage in Bombay (1 L R 30 Bom 250) and it was observed as follows—

If a mortgagor left in possession grants a lease without the concurrence of the mortgagee the lessee has a precarious title inasmuch as although the lease is good as between himself and the mortgagor who granted it the paramount title of the mortgagee may be asserted against both of them

Amendment—For the reasons stated in the notes under section 60, the word payable should be replaced by the word 'due'

India have been empowered, when a suit is brought for foreclosure in lieu of foreclosure The discretion conferred by that rule on the Courts has been exercised in different ways, some Courts refusing foreclosure, while others have granted it We understand that in Allahabad foreclosure decrees are more frequent As to equitable mortgages by deposit of title deeds also, a different practice prevails in different Courts In Calcutta and Allahabad the Courts have invariably refused foreclosure in such cases (24 Cal 348, 14 All 238), while in Bombay foreclosure decrees are sometimes passed (14 Bom 269)

The question is discussed by the late Sir Rash Behari Ghose in the 5th Edition of his Law on Mortgage, at p 32, where he says —

"But although sales take place more frequently now foreclosure is still a common method of working out of the rights of mortgagees in England I may, however, be permitted to observe that in complicated cases, the rights of the parties can be adequately protected only by a decree for sale, foreclosure being both a cumbrous and dilatory method of procedure When the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was under consideration, it was proposed in this country to do away with foreclosure altogether and to give the mortgagee only the right to realise his security by a sale of the pledge But it was thought by the then Law Member of the Governor General's Council that the amount of simplicity which would be thus gained would not justify the amount of disturbance which would be created by such a change in the law. I, however, venture to doubt whether appropriate remedy on a mortgage. The same practice is followed in countries which have adopted the Roman Law as the basis of their jurisprudence. In English law, however, the more cumbrous mode of proceeding has stood its ground down to the present day, but it may be affirmed without much temerity that foreclosure with successive periods of redemption, its liability to be re opened and the manifest inadequacy of the remedy in complicated cases, is doomed even in England."

In Wiltse on Mortgage Foreclosure Vol I p 5 3rd Edn (an American work), it is observed —

"Strict foreclosure or foreclosure without a sale was a procedure greatly used in England at one time and its purpose was to perfect in the mortgagee an absolute title, instead of to obtain a decree for sale, the Courts in most States recognise this method but allow its use only in exceptional cases, owing to its severity upon the rights of the owner of the equity of redemption."

We, therefore, consider it desirable to confine the remedy of foreclosure to the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage where, by the express terms of the deed, the parties have stipulated for foreclosure, and to disallow it in all other cases."

is allowed to enforce one mortgage and keep the other mortgages alive. In the case of a number of mortgages in which the only remedy open is foreclosure, the disadvantage of the mortgagor will be very marked as he may lose the whole property in satisfaction of one debt which may be less than the real value of the property and will be liable to have a personal decree passed against him in satisfaction of debts under the other mortgages. In the case of mortgages too where the only remedy is sale, the property will never realize its fair and proper value if it be sold subject to another mortgage. Thus in 25 C. W. N. 129, where the Calcutta High Court was constrained to hold that the holder of two independent mortgages over the same property, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, was not prevented from obtaining a decree for sale on each of them in a separate suit, it had to add a reservation in the decree that he could not sell the property twice over nor could he sell it under either of the decrees subject to the other. In that case the Court held that the right course to follow in such circumstances was to direct that the property be sold free of both charges whether in execution of the decree on the first mortgage or of the decree on the second mortgage and that the balance of the sale proceeds,

*468. (1) The mortgagee has a right to sue for the mortgage money in the following cases and in no others, namely —

- (a) where the mortgagor binds himself to repay the same :

(b) where, by any cause other than the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor or mortgagee, the mortgaged property is wholly or partially destroyed or the security is rendered insufficient within the meaning of section 66, and the mortgagee has given the mortgagor a reasonable opportunity of providing further security enough to render the whole security sufficient, and the mortgagor has failed to do so.

(c) where the mortgagee is deprived of the whole or part of his security by or in consequence of the wrongful act or default of, the mortgagor,

(d) where the mortgage is not a first mortgage, the mortgagee shall not be entitled to exercise the power of sale unless the mortgagee has first obtained the consent of the mortgagor or the person claiming to be the mortgagor to the exercise of the power of sale.

Provided that, in the case referred to in clause (a) a transferee from the mortgagor or from his legal representative shall not be liable to be sued for the mortgage-money

(2) Where a suit is brought under clause (a) or clause (b) of sub-section (1) the Court may, at its discretion, stay the suit and all proceedings therein, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, until the mortgagee has exhausted all his available remedies against the mortgaged property or what remains of it, unless the mortgagee abandons his security and, if necessary, retransfers the mortgaged property."

Amendment to the ... of a mortgagee

- (i) when the mortgagor binds himself personally to repay the debt,

(ii) when the mortgage security is wholly or partially destroyed or rendered insufficient in consequence of any cause other than the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor or mortgagee.

(iii) when the mortgagee is deprived of his security by or in consequence of the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor

(iv) where the mortgagee, being entitled to possession the mortgagor fails to deliver possession of the mortgaged property or to secure to him the undisturbed possession thereof

The cases mentioned in clauses (i), (iii) and (iv) are referred to in clauses (a) to (c) of the present section while that mentioned in clause (ii) is contained in the last paragraph.

But section 68, as it stands at present, deals not only with the cases in which a mortgagee is entitled to sue for the mortgage money, it also indicates to some extent the persons against whom the suit may be maintained. The opening words of the section are "The mortgagee has a right to sue the mortgagee for the mortgage money." We propose to omit the words "the mortgagee". The reason is that the use

whether the words 'the mortgagor' include his legal representatives or

A 7) As to causes (i) being to repay the sum no question

can arise as to the liabilities of the legal representatives of the mortgagor or his transferees the word 'himself' in that clause clearly indicates that done but the mortgagor can be sued for the mortgage money in that case

As regards clauses (ii), (iii) and (iv) the legal representative of the mortgagor or his in others he different and trans considered it desirable to leave these matters alone as we think that the question in each case should be decided by the general law

Clause (c) of the present section provides that the mortgagor is personally liable when he fails to deliver or to secure to the mortgagee the possession of the property without disturbance by him or other person. The words "any other person" are very wide and might include a trespasser. The disturbance of the mortgagee's possession by a trespasser or by a third person with whom the mortgagor was not in collusion should not confer upon the mortgagee a right to sue the mortgagor for the mortgage money. The words "or any other person" have been held to mean a person claiming under a title superior to that of the mortgagor (1 L R 15 Mad 304, 19 All 191, 42 Mad 578). In clause (iv) above we propose to substitute for the words "any other person" the words "any person claiming under a title superior to that of the mortgagor."

The personal remedy declared by the section is additional and it has been held that it can be pursued by the mortgagee concurrently with his other remedies or as before he possessed the property or security (17 Mad 469) loan (1 L R 41 Cal 388) this concurrent remedy has view to get an increase of interest or other undue advantage by the threat of arrest and imprisonment may obtain a money decree without proceeding against the property. We therefore, propose that in the cases mentioned in clause (i) and clause (ii) the mortgagee should exhaust all his available remedies against the mortgaged property before he seeks to pursue the personal remedy against the mortgagor. In cases falling under clauses (iii) and (iv) above such a restriction on the rights of a mortgagee is not called for. The proposed provision will not be inconsistent with Order XXXIV, rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, under which in a mortgage suit the mortgagee is not entitled to execute the decree personally against the mortgagor till the mortgaged property has been sold and the sale proceeds are found insufficient to pay off the entire mortgage-debt.

or relinquish and clause (ii) e should not, to increase the burden on the remaining portion (1 L R 50 Cal 718). In order to ensure that the relinquishment of the security is complete, it is proposed that it should be made by a registered instrument.

In the case mentioned in clause (i) above, the cause of action to sue for a personal decree will arise on the date fixed for repayment. In other cases the cause of action is accelerated and the mortgagee need not wait till the due date has arrived (1 L R 25 Cal 450, 15 Mad 1474, 16 All 318, 26 Bom 241). The period of limitation for the recovery of the mortgage money is 12 years from the date when the mortgage document be registered 389, 12 I A 12, 34 All not property. A suit for ve to be instituted earlier than the mortgage suit. In order that such a suit may not be barred by limitation, or struck off for non prosecution we propose to provide that it should be stayed till the mortgagee exhausts his remedies against the mortgaged property.

The amendment of section 68 does not necessitate the amendment of Order XXXIV, rule 6, Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The rule applies to a mortgage suit and has no application to a suit under this section in which the only decree that can be passed is for the payment of money (1 L R 29 Mad 362).

So also no amendment of rule 14 of Order XXXIV is necessary. In cases where the mortgagee is required to exhaust his remedies against the mortgaged property, the property would be sold before he is allowed to exercise his right for a personal decree against the mortgagor and the provisions of rule 14 will not come into operation. That rule can only apply to other cases where he is not required to proceed against the mortgaged property first.

In cases in which the mortgage money is agreed to be paid by instalments or the interest is to be periodically paid it has been held that a sufficient portion of the mortgaged property may be brought to sale for the amount due. These cases are governed by the express terms of mortgaged deed (1 L R 35 Bom 327, 43 Mad 513) and are not affected by section 68.—Report of the Special Committee

Proviso to clause (d) — "As under section 21, unless otherwise expressly provided the term mortgagor will include persons claiming title from him we have added proviso to make it clear that such persons are not included in that term as used in clause (a) of sub section (1) of section 68"—Report of the Select Committee

As the Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, deals with other matters, such as trusts and leases, besides mortgages, it should not be repealed in order, however, to make it clear that the Act will no longer apply to mortgages, we propose that the words "Notwithstanding anything contained in the Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, should be inserted at the beginning of section 69

We also consider that in all cases where the mortgagee is entitled to exercise the powers of sale under section 69 it is desirable to make provision for the appointment of a receiver. We propose that a new section (section 69 A) should be added on the lines of sections 101 (ii) and 109 of the English Property Act, 1925, providing for the appointment of a receiver, the rights and liabilities of such receiver and the procedure to be followed when such appointment is made. At the same time, we think it desirable that specific provision should be made under section 69A for the following —

(a) unless otherwise provided by the terms of the mortgage deed the receiver should be appointed by the consent of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee,

(b) where the parties do not agree regarding the person to be appointed as a receiver they should have liberty to apply to the Court in a summary proceeding

We also think it desirable to make provision in the section on the lines of section 34 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, enabling the parties or the receiver to apply in a summary proceeding to the Court for its opinion or advice or for directions in matters connected with the management or administration of the mortgaged property

(4) The receiver shall have power to demand and recover all the income of which he is appointed receiver, by suit, execution or otherwise, in the name either of the mortgagor or of the mortgagee to the full extent of the interest which the mortgagor could dispose of, and to give valid receipts accordingly for the same and to exercise any powers which may have been delegated to him by the mortgagee in accordance with the provisions of this section.

Amendment—“It is inequitable to confine this section to a mortgagee in possession With the exception of the provision in clause (a) relating to the management of the property and the collection of rents and profits, this section may apply who is not in possession spends money to preserve the property from forfeiture or sale he is entitled to be reimbursed for the money spent (1 L R 30 Cal 794) In a Bombay case it was recently held (25 Bom L R 843) that section 72 did not imply that a mortgagee not in possession had no right to charge the mortgaged property for payments properly made by him in relation to his security Whether a mortgagee is in possession or not, it is to his interest to spend money to preserve his security, and he should have a right to do so We therefore, propose that a mortgagee, though not in possession should be entitled to spend such money as may be necessary for purposes mentioned in clauses (b), (c), (d) and (e) subject to the condition as to (b) and (c) that he should not be entitled to do so until the mortgagor is in default

We also propose to omit the words in the first paragraph of the section, namely, “during the continuance of the mortgage” These words had to be in the original section as the section was confined to a mortgagee in possession Further, as we propose to amend Order XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, so as to entitle the mortgagor to redeem at any time before the sale is confirmed or the foreclosure takes place under the provision of the Code, these words have to be omitted in order that a mortgagee may be entitled, if occasion arises to spend such money as may be necessary for these purposes until the sale is confirmed or a final decree for foreclosure is passed

By the omission of clause (a) from section 72, we do not propose to take away the right of a mortgagee in possession to spend money on the management of the property or collection of the rents and profits As section 76 relates to a mortgagee in possession, we propose to make provision in that section for the recognition of the right

In the penultimate paragraph provides that the principal money between insurance premium for insurance ought to be treated on the same footing as those spent for necessary costs and charges We are therefore of opinion that such sums should be added to the principal money and should carry the same rate of interest”—Report of the Select Committee

* “73 (1) Where the mortgaged property or any part thereof or any interest therein is sold owing to failure to pay arrears of revenue or other charges of a public nature or rent due in respect of such property, and such failure did not arise from any default of the mortgagee the mortgagee shall be entitled to claim payment of the mortgage money, in whole or in part, out of any surplus of the sale proceeds remaining after payment of the arrears and of all charges and deductions directed by law

(2) Where the mortgaged property or any part thereof or any interest therein is acquired under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894,* or any other enactment for the time being in force providing for the compulsory acquisition of immovable property, the mortgagee shall be entitled to claim payment of the mortgage money, in whole or in part, out of the amount due to the mortgagor as compensation.

(3) Such claims shall prevail against all other claims except those of prior encumbrancers, and may be enforced notwithstanding that the principal money on the mortgage has not become due."

Amendment—The present section deals with the case where the mortgaged property is sold for the arrears of mortgage money. The section is based on decisions on the point whether the principal money is payable in the case where the mortgaged property is sold under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. In I L R 16 All 7 a mortgagee had no charge on the amount realized on the sale of the mortgaged property under the Land Acquisition Act and that the mortgagee ought to have claimed apportionment in acquisition proceedings. A contrary view was taken in I L R 6 Mad 341 and the Allahabad decision was dissented from in Calcutta and Patna (13 C W N 350, 5 Pat L J 650). It has been held that the compulsory acquisition of a property does not amount to its destruction within the meaning of section 68 and that the property acquired is converted into money (I L R 13 Mad 321). According to the general principle of conversion on which section 73 is based the amount awarded as compensation is impressed with the charge to which the land is subject. In England where money is paid into Court as the proceeds of real estate converted by compulsory powers under Acts of Parliament as under section 69 of the Land Clauses Consolidation Act it usually remains in Court subject to the rights of the parties interested in it to have it reinvested in land and it is considered to be impressed with the quality of real estate (In re Stewart 1 Sm and G 321 W & T L C 393 8th Edn). The view taken by the majority of the High Courts is in accordance with the general principle stated above, and we propose to give effect to it by the addition of sub section (2) to section 73.

Section 73 at present provides that a mortgagee has merely a charge on the surplus sale proceeds. The use of the word "charge" appears to us to be unhappy inasmuch as a charge and is enforced as a simple mortgage obviously does not a mortgage. The use of the word also leaves therefore propose to avoid its use and to entitle the mortgagee to claim payment out of the mortgage money as the case provided for priorities is in the case of a mortgage converted into money we see no reason until the due date particularly when the mortgage money has not become due. —Report of the Special Committee

Amendment—In clause (e) of section 76 it is provided that the mortgagee in possession shall be liable for the payment of Government revenue, other public charges and arrears of rent. If the mortgaged property is leasehold, it is also his duty to pay any rent which may become due during the period of the lease. We propose therefore to insert in clause (d) the words "and all rent after the words 'charges of a public nature'".

In clause (b) and (d) of the section the term "rents and profits" is used, while in clause (c) the word "income" is used. In clauses (h) and (i) and also in section 77, the word "receipts" is used. In our opinion the use of these different terms is appropriate in regard to the context in which they are used and they are in contradistinction to one another. Government revenue, public charges and rent are always paramount charges on immovable property, and the failure to pay them renders the property liable to be sold. The liability of a person in occupation of the property including a mortgagee in possession is commensurate with his right to enjoy the income of the property. In clause (c) therefore, it is provided that, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, it is the primary duty of a mortgagee in possession to pay the aforesaid dues out of whatever income he may realise from the property. He cannot claim any deduction until those liabilities are satisfied. In clause (d) however, the term "rent and profits" is used to indicate that a mortgagee is liable to make necessary repairs to the property out of the balance of the actual realisations from the property after deducting therefrom the payments mentioned in clause (c).

Clause (h) provides how to balance of the sums received by a mortgagee after deducting outgoing mentioned therein is to be debited towards the payment of the mortgage money. The clause uses the term, "receipts" and shows that they are to be actual and gross realisations. In clause (i) the words "gross receipts" are used. This phrase was quite appropriate with regard to the fact that no provision was made in clause (h) for deducting expense of the property or the collection of the rents and made in clause (i), it is unnecessary to same has been accordingly omitted.

The words 'on the mortgage money' after the words 'on accounts of interest' in clause (4) are ambiguous. As defined in section 58 the words "mortgage money" includes both principal and interest. The words "on the mortgage money" indicate compound interest. In the absence of any other indication, it should be omitted. The word "interest" in the terms of a particular compound as the case may be.

In section 72 we have proposed the omission of clause (a) which relates to a right of a mortgagee to spend money for the management of the mortgaged property and the collection of rents and profits. In our opinion the inclusion of the clause in that section was not appropriate, particularly as money spent for the purposes mentioned therein is to be added to the principal. We do not think that money spent for management of the property or the collection of rents and profits should be treated as an accretion to the principal. In our opinion, as in the case of payment mentioned in clauses (c) and (d) of section 76, money spent for management or "be treated as outgoings [See Ghose on England such expenses are treated as 'just n 1976) We therefore propose to provide of management and collection of rents receipts of the mortgagee in possession

Marshalling and contribution

"*81. If the owner of two or more properties mortgages them to one person and then mortgages one or more of the properties to another person, the subsequent mortgagee is in the absence of a contract to the contrary, entitled to have the prior mortgage-debt satisfied out of the property or properties not mortgaged to him, so far as the same will extend, but not so as to prejudice the rights of the prior mortgagee or of any other person who has for consideration acquired an interest in any of the properties."

Notes—Section 81 deals with the marshalling of securities. It appears from the proceedings underlying Act IV of 1882 that the section is based on the following passage in Fisher on Mortgage (Art 1356, p 694 6th Edn) —

"If the owner of two estates mortgaged them both to one person, and then one of them to another without notice the second mortgagee may insist under the doctrine of marshalling, but without interfering with the rights of the former, that the debt of the first shall be satisfied out of the estate not mortgaged to the second so far as that shall extend"

Like section 56 this section provides for marshalling when there are "two properties only". It is also restricted to a case when the second mortgagee intends to marshal the securities. It does not provide for the case of more than two properties nor for the case where the property has been mortgaged more than twice and a mortgagee subsequent to the second mortgagee desires to marshal the prior securities. We propose to widen the scope of the section by providing that it should apply to cases where there are more than two properties and to all subsequent mortgagees generally.

The section also requires that, in order that a subsequent mortgagee should be entitled to have the securities marshalled, it must be shown that he had no notice of the prior mortgage (1 L R 23 Cal 790). This condition appears to have been of (9 Ark In Gibson halling was tice of the 3] In India also in cases where the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, did not apply, it was held that a subsequent mortgagee could marshal the securities even though he had notice of the prior mortgagee (1 L R 18 Bom 160, 22 Bom 304). As stated in the leading case of Aldrich v Cooper, (1 W and T L C at p 38) the principle of "marshalling" is that it shall not depend upon the will of one creditor to disappoint propose that the words "who has not notice of the former mortgage" should be omitted.

It is well established that, in order that the doctrine of "marshalling" can be applied, there must be two funds or securities, both originally the property of the same owner, and the debts must be the debts of the same person [Ex parte Kendall (1811) 17 Ves 520 1 W & T L C 46, Halsbury's Laws of England Vol 21, p 304]. Neither in England nor in this country has the doctrine been extended to a case where only a portion of the property already mortgaged is subsequently sold or mortgaged. If the prior mortgagee is forced to have recourse to a portion of the property in portions will not realise under that it will be safe to extend

*Section 81 has been inserted by Act XX of 1929

We propose to omit the word 'valuable' before the word 'consideration' in the concluding portion of the section. The Indian Law does not recognise any distinction between good and valuable consideration (see section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, Pollock and Mulla's Contract Act, p. 34) — Report of the Special Committee

In our opinion, the principle of contribution ought to cover a case not only where several properties are mortgaged but where the mortgaged property is subsequently subdivided into distinct and separate portions, the liability of the co-sharers being distinct and several and not joint. This question was raised in I L R 26 M 685, but was not decided. In some cases it has been held that when the title becomes severed after the mortgage either by the death of the mortgagor or by the sale of the shares in the property by the mortgagor, the rule of contribution applies (see 1 All 455, 20 Bom 615, 21 Cal L J 104, 43 All 589). We propose to amend the section to make this point clear.

There is also some difference of opinion as to whether for the purpose of contribution the value of the different properties or the portions of one property should be calculated as at the date of the original mortgage or at the date of the subsequent transfer. In some cases it has been held that valuation is to be made as at the date of the mortgage irrespective of the price that may have been paid by the purchaser (see 12 C W N 107, 745, 27 All 549). In a Bombay case, however, the valuation at the date of the sale was adopted (I L R 26 Bom 83). We propose to provide that the value taken shall be the value as at the date of the original mortgage. This rule has the support of the Judicial Committee who, in assessing contribution to a decree for mesne profits, assessed liability at the date of the decree (L R 31 I A 94).

The Court shall thereupon cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on presenting a petition verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints, state that he is not the owner of the mortgaged property and his willingness to accept the amount, and, on depositing in the Court, in his possession or power, the amount so deposited shall be delivered to the mortgagor or such other person as aforesaid.

Notes.—The mortgagor tendered the mortgage amount but the mortgagee refused to accept the same. Subsequently the mortgagor became unable to pay, but the mortgagee did not make any demand. Held that under this section interest ceased from the date of tender. The word tender does not itself imply that the tenderer must always be ready to pay the money. The mortgagee not having made any subsequent demand, was not entitled to interest from the date of the tender 33 M 100=6 M L T 262=3 Ind Cas 729. But see 3 Pat L T. 332, 34 M L J 489. An offer by notice of the amount due under a mortgage without production of the money is not a good tender 42 A 420. proper deposit, refuses to take the deposit, there is still a presumption that the mortgagor continues ready and willing to pay, and the interest does not run even if the mortgagor withdraws the deposit. In our opinion this view is not correct. It is obviously unreasonable that interest on the mortgage debt should cease to run if the mortgagor withdraws the deposit and derives benefit from the money withdrawn. We propose to add a proviso to the first paragraph of the section making it clear that where the mortgagor has deposited the amount without having made a previous tender thereof and has subsequently withdrawn the same or any part thereof interest on the principal money shall be payable from the date of the withdrawal.

In paragraph 3 we also propose to make it clear that if the mortgage deed provides that reasonable notice before payment or tender of the mortgage money is to be given to the mortgagee the provision of this section will not apply till such notice has been given. Report of the Special Committee

Redemption

Persons who may sue for redemption † "91 Besides the mortgagor, any of the following persons may redeem or institute a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property, namely —

(a) any person (other than the mortgagee of the interest sought to be redeemed) who has any interest in, or charge upon the property mortgaged or in or upon the right to redeem the same,

(b) any surety for the payment of the mortgage debt or any part thereof, or

(c) any creditor of the mortgagor who has in a suit for the administration of his estate obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property."

* Inserted by Act XX of 1929

† Substituted by Act XX of 1929. The amendment of this section is not to have retrospective effect, vide section 63 of Act XX of 1929

Amendment—Section 91 specifies persons who in addition to a mortgagor are entitled to redeem. Clauses (a) and (b) can be suitably combined in one clause. Clauses (d) and (e) are superfluous, and in our opinion should be omitted.

An attachment does not create any interest such as a charge or a loan in the property attached (I L R 29 Cal 428=32 Mad 422), and there is no reason why an attaching creditor should have the right of redemption. We, therefore, propose to omit clause (f). Report of the Special Committee

Clause (a)—The Zemindar is not within the meaning of this section of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, a person having an interest in the mortgaged property so as to entitle him to redeem the mortgage of his holding made by a tenant at fixed rates who has died without heirs. A W N 1901, 210=5 A L J 578. Where a superior proprietor obtained a decree against the inferior for revenue payable under sub settlement the decree operates as a charge on the land included in sub settlement. 11 C P L R 95. A daughter in law of a Hindu entitled to maintenance has not such an interest in the family property within the meaning of s 91 of Transfer of Property Act as would entitle her to redeem. 12 O C 37. Reversioners of a Hindu during the lifetime of the widow cannot redeem. 5 A L J 631.

Clause (b)—A mortgagee created a sub-mortgage, in favour of the plaintiff of land mortgaged to him. In the mortgage deed, the sub mortgagor, in express terms transferred his interest in the land to the sub mortgagee. Further the sub mortgagor left a portion of the consideration money in the hands of the sub mortgagee for redeeming a prior mortgage in respect of the property. As the prior mortgagee refused to accept the sum due to him under the mortgage and deliver up possession of the property the plaintiff brought the present suit for redemption against the prior mortgagee. Held that the sub mortgagee is entitled to redeem the prior mortgage. 2 A L J 162=27 A 473=A W N 1935, 18. Where a Hindu widow has mortgaged the property the next reversioner can redeem. 8 O C 349. This section does not lay down that a person who is entitled to a share only of the equity of redemption has under all circumstances, the right to insist on redeeming the whole of the mortgaged property. Where there are several persons in whom the equity of redemption is vested, there is no reason why one of them and the mortgagees acting together should not be held to be entitled to deal with his interest in the equity of redemption and the mortgagee's right is against him provided the rights of the other owners of the equity of redemption are not thereby injuriously affected. The objection to a mortgagee's splitting up of a mortgage is entitled to weight only where one owner of the part of the equity of redemption is prejudicially affected by the splitting. 12 M L T 484=M W N 1912, 1168=23 M L J 576.

A demise of temple property granted by a majority of the trustees of a temple without consulting the minority is invalid and not binding on the temple. 16 Ind Cas 435.

A person who has acquired the mortgagor's interest after decree conditional for foreclosure was passed, but before that decree was made final, is not a person entitled to redeem under clause (b)—93 Ind Cas 496.

*"92 Any of the persons referred to in section 91 (other than the mortgagor) and any co mortgagor shall on redeeming property subject to the mortgage,

The right conferred by this section is called the right of subrogation, and a person acquiring the same is said to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee whose mortgage he redeems.

A person who has advanced to a mortgagor money with which the mortgage has been redeemed shall be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee whose mortgage has been redeemed, if the mortgagor has by a registered instrument agreed that such persons shall be so subrogated.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to confer a right of subrogation on any person unless the mortgage in respect of which the right is claimed has been redeemed in full.

93 No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security, and, except in the case provided for by section 79, no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

94 Where a property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees, a mesne mortgagee has the same rights against mortgagees posterior to himself as he has against the mortgagor.

Notes—As stated before, sections 74 and 75 of the Act are based on what is known as the principle of subrogation. The principle can come into operation either by operation of law but technically where the right arises by operation of law to the debtor for the purpose of being substituted in the place of the creditor of the security discharged with his money (see Domatt's Civil Law, section 1774, see also Hunter's Roman Law, pp 441 and 443), and this right has been recognised in all modern systems derived from Roman Law. Section 74 is confined to the case when a subsequent mortgagee pays off a prior mortgage. The rule contained in the section is really covered by section 75, but both those sections apply only to the case of a subsequent mortgagee. The principle of subrogation, however, ought to apply generally to all cases other than those of a mortgagor who pays off his own debt or of a mere volunteer. In Biswaswar Prasad v Lala Harnam Singh, 6 C L J 134 at pp 137, 138, it is observed as follows—

"The doctrine of subrogation is a doctrine of equity jurisprudence. It does not depend on privity of contract express or implied except in so far as equity may be supposed to be imported into the transaction, and thus raise a contract by implication. It is founded on the facts and circumstances of each particular case and on the principles of natural justice. While, therefore, the doctrine will be applied in general wherever any person other than a mere volunteer pays a debt or a demand which in equity or good conscience should have been satisfied by another, or where the liability of one person is discharged out of a fund belonging to another, or where one person is compelled for his own protection or that of some interest which he represents to pay a debt for which another is primarily liable, or wherever a denial of the right would be contrary to equity and good conscience the doctrine will never be permitted where the application of it would work injustice to the rights of those having equal or superior equities."

In our opinion all persons who pay off a mortgage in discharge of the right of redemption are entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee under section 91 as having the right substituted in the place of the mortgagee under sections 74 and 75, and to the same rights.

A surety is obviously entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor when he pays him off. To use the argument of Sir S (14 Ves 160 at p 162) a surety will be entitled to stand in the place of the creditor, not only has against the principal debtor to enforce every security, but also to stand in the place of the creditor, not only even by means of securities entered into without the knowledge of the surety, having the right to have those securities transferred to him though there was no stipulation for that, and to avoid himself of all those securities against the debtor. The same principle has been incorporated in sections 140 and 141 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872

The right of a co mortgagor or one of several joint debtors to be subrogated to the security of the creditor, so as to enable him to recover from his co debtors by means of such securities their proportionate shares of indebtedness which has been discharged by him rests upon the same equity as that of a surety or any other person entitled to redeem the mortgage for each joint debtor is regarded as the principal debtor for that part of the debt which he ought to pay and as the surety for his co debtors as to the part which ought to be discharged by them (see Ghose on Mortgage Vol I, p 371, 5th Edn)

It cannot, however, be laid down as a general rule that a person merely discharging a debt is entitled to the benefit of the mortgage. Obviously, a mortgagor himself who is liable to pay a debt contracted by him or the transferee from such a mortgagor who has undertaken the liability cannot claim the right of subrogation, nor can the application of the principle be invoked in favour of a mere volunteer (1 L R 32 All 25). As stated in Ghose on Mortgage Vol I, p 364, 5th Edn, the real question in all such cases is, whether the payment made by a person who is not in any way interested in the mortgaged property loan to the debtor on his personal security is such that he should be subrogated for the same. If we may presume such an agreement, we think it must be reduced to writing and must be registered.

In order to avoid any complication and the difficulty of apportioning the claims arising from subrogation the Courts have held that a right of subrogation does not arise till the whole of the mortgage debt is paid off (1 L R 36 Cal 193 38 All 503). We, therefore, propose to provide in the last paragraph of section 92 that the right of subrogation shall not be claimed unless the mortgage in respect of which the right is claimed has been redeemed in full.

As the principal of 'tacking' is closely allied to subrogation, we propose to put section 80 as section 93.

Section 75 and Order XXIV rule 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 embody partly the principle of subrogation and partly the principle expressed in the phrase 'redeem up and foreclose down'. We have transferred to section 92 so much of section 75 and of Order XXXIV, rule 11, as relates to the doctrine of subrogation and embodied in a new section so much of the section and rule as relate to the conception of foreclosing down. As this is a rule more of substantive law than of procedure, its proper place is in the Transfer of Property Act 1882 and not in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. We, therefore, propose to omit section 75 and to repeal Order XXXIV, rule 11. As this doctrine is akin to the doctrine of subrogation, we have placed it after section 92—Report of the Special Committee

95 Where one of several mortgagors redeems the mortgaged property, he shall in enforcing his right of subrogation under section 92 against his co mortgagors, be entitled to add to the mortgage money recoverable from them such proportion of the expenses properly incurred in such redemption as is attributable to their share in the property.

96 The provisions hereinbefore contained which apply to a simple mortgage shall so far as may be, apply to mortgage by deposit of title deeds.

Notes—Section 95 gives a co mortgagor redeeming the mortgage a charge on the shares of other co mortgagors in the mortgaged property for expenses incurred by him in redeeming the mortgaged property and obtaining possession thereof. The section has been based on the observation in Macpherson's Law of Mortgage in Bengal and the N W Provinces, 5th Edn, p 145. It is difficult to understand why the word obtains possession thereof are inserted in this section. In I L R 11 Mad 416 the Madras High Court observed that the section gave the redeeming co-mortgagor two rights, (1) a right to obtain possession, and (2) a charge on the interest of the co-mortgagors. In I L R 26 All 227, the Allahabad High Court held that the words were only applicable if the mortgagor is in possession. In Malik Ahmad Wali Khan v. Musammil Shamsi Jahan Begum, L R 33 I A 81, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows —

“The case on which the above principle is based is that a mortgagor who repays the mortgage money is entitled to obtain possession of the property and to make a charge on the interest of the co-mortgagors.”

In view of the above observation, the reference to the recovery of possession in the section seems undesirable and we propose that it should be omitted. Moreover, as in the proposed section 92 a co-mortgagor is allowed the right of subrogation, we are of opinion that instead of providing for a separate charge for the costs of redemption it will be better if it is provided that a co-mortgagor can add such costs to the mortgage money and recover them from other co-mortgagors in proportion to their shares in the property. We have amended the section accordingly — Report of the Special Committee

Section 96 — As the present law is not clear regarding the rights and liabilities of parties to a mortgage by the deposit of title deeds, we have inserted a new section (section 96) applying to such mortgages the provisions applicable to simple mortgages — Report of the Select Committee

97 (Application of proceeds—Repealed by Act I of 1908) Anomalous Mortgages

98 In the case of “an anomalous mortgage”* the rights and liabilities of the parties shall be determined by their contract as evidenced in the mortgage deed and, so far as such contract does not extend, by local usage.

Notes—Under the terms of the mortgage deed the mortgagor was put in possession of the mortgaged property and was authorised to retain possession until payment of the mortgage money, the mortgagor being given credit for all profits recovered from the land over and above the Government assessment. The deed further contained a personal covenant by the mortgagor to pay the mortgage

Under section 58 the definition of an anomalous mortgage is given. In our opinion, this section should apply to these mortgages — Report of the Special Committee

100 Where immovable property of one person is by act of parties or operation of law, made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage the latter person is said to have a charge on the property, and all the provisions hereinbefore contained “which apply to a simple mortgage shall, so far as may be, apply to such charge”.

Nothing in this section applies to the charge of a trustee on the trust property for expenses properly incurred in the execution of his trust "and, save as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, no charge shall be enforced against any property in the hands of a person to whom such property has been transferred for consideration and without notice of the charge."

Notes—The charge referred to in s 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not such a charge as is defined in s 100 of the T P Act 4 C L J 219-33 C 985 A Kabuliat provided "the burden of the liability for paying Zar parjole and Zar caakarum shall remain first upon materials of the house" Held that these words standing as they are, are not sufficient to constitute a charge upon the property within the meaning of the section 2 A L J 754 A document which creates a charge within the meaning of section, must be a document which creates a charge at the time and not merely a possibility of a charge 3 A L J 230-A W N 1906 82 The bonds which are described as bonds 'tacked on to the mortgage deed' and stamped as possessory mortgages and contained in full specification on the mortgaged property as in a regular mortgage, create a charge under this section 3 A L J 255-1 Ind Cas 345 A document, to create a charge on immovable property under this section of the Transfer of Property Act, must create such charge immediately on its execution and not operate as such only at some future time, e.g., upon the non payment of the money secured by the document, in which case it creates only the possibility of a charge ultimately arising on the fund, and not a 'charge' under the section 14 C 687 A covenant by the vendee with the vendor to pay the plaintiff a certain quantity of rice annually whereon the plaintiff relied, would not give rise to a charge 5 M L T 78-2 Ind Cas 617.

Amendment—Section 100 defines a charge, and the latter part of the section provides that all provisions shall apply in the case of a rights and liabilities of a from a mortgage, in that it does not amount to transfer of any interest in the property & is not the same as a charge. It is desirable to amend the section so as to make it clear that a charge is not a transfer.

Charge, as a charge—A chargeholder, like a simple mortgagee, has only a right to sell the mortgaged property in sale, he cannot have a right of foreclosure See Order XXXIV, rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908

As a charge does not involve the transfer of an interest in the property subject thereto, it has been held that it cannot be enforced against a transferee for consideration without notice (1 L R 9 All 591, 13 All 28, 33 Cal 93, 42 Cal 849, and 19 C W N 37) The contrary view was taken in some cases where a charge was created by a decree (2 All 162, 28 All 655 and 38 All 254) The former view appears to us more consistent with equity

As charges created by the operation of law or by a decree will not necessarily be registered, it is desirable to protect transferees for consideration without notice and provide that a charge will not be enforced against them or the owner his own mortgage or charge is extinguished, unless he expressly reserves the continuance of such mortgage or charge or unless such continuance is held to be for his benefit. As stated in an American case, "the doctrine of merger springs from the fact that when entire - - - same person, there can be no occasion t set up against such subsequent incumbrances either a prior mortgage of his own or a mortgage which he may have paid off. A purchaser of the equity of redemption can easily take steps to defeat the effect of Toulmin's case by simply stating that the original debt paid off subsists for his benefit. The rule in Toulmin's case has been embodied in the present section 101, but decision in that case has been more than once questioned in English Court (See 2 W & T L C, p 49, 8th Edn). In Thorne v Cann, (1895) A C p 11, Lord Herschell observed with regard to Toulmin's case as follows:—

"A case which has certainly not met with universal acceptance and it has often been commented upon and criticised adversely."

In the same case Lord Macnaghten said —

"The authority of that case cannot now a days be treated as going beyond the actual decision"

In several cases the Privy Council has laid it down that in each case it will depend on the intention of parties whether a particular charge or incumbrance was extinguished or subsisted (10 I A 62, 11 I A 126 29 I A 9 and 39 I A 68). In Gokuldas v Rambur, 11 I A 126 at p. 133 Sir Richard Couch, after reviewing the Indian decisions on the point which followed the rule in Toulmin's case observed:—

¹ The doubts as to that case (Toulmin v Steere) or the propriety of introducing the doctrine of it into India as a rule of justice, equity and good conscience do not seem to have been considered by the High Court at Calcutta or Bombay.

'The doctrine of Toulmin v Steere, is not applicable to Indian transaction except as the law of justice, equity and good conscience. And if it rested on any broad intelligible principle of justice it might properly be so applied. But it rests on no such principle. If it did it could not be excluded or defeated by declarations of intention or formal devices of conveyancers, whereas it is so defeated every day. When an estate is burdened by succession of mortgages and the owner of an ulterior interest pays off an earlier mortgage, it is a matter of course to have it assigned to a trustee for his benefit as against intermediate mortgagees to whom he is not personally liable.'

"In India the art of conveyancing has been and is of a very simple character. There Lordships cannot find that a formal transfer of a mortgage is ever made, or an intention to keep it alive ever formerly expressed. To apply to such a practice the doctrine of Toulmin v Seere seems to them likely, not to promote justice and equity but to lead to confusion, to multiplication of documents to useless technicalities, to expense and to litigation."

In a recent case in Malireddi Ayyareddi v. Gopala Krishnayya, 1 L. R. 47 Mad. 100, the Privy Council has again remarked as follows —

'It is now the settled law that where in India there are several mortgages on a property the owner of the property subject to the mortgages may, if he pays off an earlier charge treat himself as buying it and stand in the same position as his vendor, or to put it in another way, he may keep the incumbrance alive for his benefit and thus come in before a latter mortgagee'

We regard it as a defect in the law, the course of decisions both in England as to above. It may generally be taken to be benefit, to keep his own incumbrances, as against subsequent incumbrances. We section — Report of the Select Committee

Notice and Tender

102 Where the person on or to whom any notice or tender is to be served or made under this Chapter does not reside in the district in which the mortgaged property or some part thereof, is situate, service or tender on or to an agent holding a general power of attorney from such person or otherwise duly authorized to accept such service or tender shall be deemed sufficient.

"Where no person or agent on whom such notice should be served can be found or is known" to the person required to serve the notice, the latter person may apply to any Court in which a suit might be brought for redemption of the mortgaged property and such Court shall direct in what manner such notice shall be served, and any notice served in compliance with such direction shall be deemed sufficient.

"Provided that, in the case of a notice required by section 83, in the case of a deposit, the application shall be made to the Court in which the deposit has been made."

"Where no person or agent to whom such tender should be made can be found or is known" to the person desiring to make the tender, the latter person may deposit "in any Court in which a suit might be brought for redemption of the mortgaged property" the amount sought to be tendered, and such deposit shall have the effect of a tender of such amount.

Notes—Tender must be made either to a principal or to an agent and tender made to a person who disclaims authority to receive it, is made at the maker's risk.

Amendment.—Section 102, which relates to the service of notice on or tender to an agent of a mortgagee allows the mortgagor to apply to the Court for direction if the mortgagee or his agent cannot be found in the district in which the mortgaged property is situate. Even if the mortgagor knows the mortgagee or his agent's whereabouts outside the district, the section allows him to apply to the Court. The third paragraph also contains a similar provision as regards tender. We think that unless the whereabouts of the mortgagee or his agent are entirely unknown to the mortgagor or unless the mortgagee or his agent cannot be found anywhere, the mortgagor should not be entitled to apply to the Court for direction. We propose to omit the words in the district in paragraphs 2 and 3 of the section. In paragraph 2, we propose to make it clear that the application for the service of notice shall be made to the Court in which the deposit has been made and not to any other Court. In paragraph 3 we propose to make it clear that deposit is to be made in the Court in which a suit for redemption could be filed.—Report of the Special Committee

The Allahabad High Court holds to the view that a lease must be by deed. . . . does was Mad 95 t the con- taining, as it usually does, covenants both on the part of the lessor and the lessee, should be executed by both the lessor and the lessee. this may intend a tenancy at sufferance but at any rate not after the landlord has determined it by a re entry or by the issue of a writ in ejectment" (Foa on Landlord and Tenant, p 784, 6th Ed) We think it desirable to remove all uncertainty regarding the tenant's right of removal We think it would be consistent with justice if the tenant is allowed to remove his fixtures so long as he is in possession of the property even though the tenancy has come to an end This would make the period certain and it is immaterial whether the tenant vacates voluntarily or is compelled to vacate by process of law The landlord does not suffer because if the tenant is in wrongful possession, the landlord will be entitled to damages. If the tenant is in rightful possession, he obviously ought to have the right to remove his fixtures In either case the certainty of the period would work less hardship than the present uncertainty

It may be said that a dishonest tenant may take advantage of the proposed rule and keep the landlord out of possession for an indefinite period But such a tenant can do so whether he has fixtures or not, and in either event the landlord has his remedy in damages

Provided that the transferee is not entitled to arrears of rent due before the transfer, and that, if the lessee, not having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, pays rent to the lessor, the lessee shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee.

The lessor, the transferee, and the lessee, may determine what proportion of the premium or rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred, and, in case they disagree, such determination may be made by any Court having jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the possession of the property leased

110 Where the time limited by a lease of immovable property is expressed as commencing from a particular day, Exclusion of day on which term commences in computing that time such day shall be excluded Where no day of commencement is named, the time so limited begins from the making of the lease

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the Duration of lease for a year lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day from which such time commences

Where the time so limited is expressed to be terminable before its expiration, and the lease omits to mention at whose Option to determine lease option it is so terminable, the lessee, and not the lessor, shall have such option

111 A lease of immovable property determines—

- (a) by efflux of the time limited thereby,
- (b) where such time is limited conditionally on the happening of some event—by the happening of such event,

(c) where the interest of the lessor in the property terminates on, or his power to dispose of the same extends only to, the happening of any event—by the happening of such event,

(d) in case the interests of the lessee and the lessor in the whole of the property become vested at the same time in one person in the same right;

(e) by express surrender, that is to say, in case the lessee yields up his interest under the lease to the lessor, by mutual agreement between them,

(f) by implied surrender,

(g) by forfeiture, that is to say, (1) in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that, on breach thereof, the lessor may re-enter,* or (2) in case the lessee renounces his character as such by setting up a title in a third person, or by claiming title in himself,† or (3) the lessee is adjudicated an insolvent and the lease provides that the lessor may re-enter on the happening of such event,‡ and in "any of these cases"§ the lessor, or his transferee "gives notice in writing to the lessee of" ¶ his intention to determine the lease;

(h) on the expiration of a notice to determine the lease, or to quit, or of intention to quit, the property leased, duly given by one party to the other

Illustration to Clause (g)

A lessee accepts from his lessor a new lease of the property leased, to take effect during the continuance of the existing lease. This is an implied surrender of the former lease and such lease determines thereupon.

A denial of title by one of several joint lessee cannot therefore entail forfeiture. 11 C W N 587=7 C L J 648. Amendment—Clause (g) of section 111 relates to the determination of a lease by forfeiture and provides for two cases in which forfeiture can be enforced. Under sub head (1) forfeiture can be enforced—(1) if the lessor has an express condition in a lease which provides that on its lessee breaks an express condition or void. The provision under (2) is not in of English law that a lessee cannot lease unless there is an express stipulation followed in India (J L R 17 Cal 826). The word in clause (g) "or the lease shall become void" should therefore be omitted.

* Certain words after this repealed by Act XX of 1929 have been omitted

Section 111, as it stands, does not provide for the case of forfeiture by reason of the adjudication of the lessee as insolvent. It is provided by section 12 inter alia that where property is transferred subject to a condition making any interest therein reserved or given to or for an insolvent, such condition is void. A paragraph of the section that lease for the benefit of the lessor

if a lease contains a condition that on the lessee becoming insolvent the lease shall determine, the condition is valid. Such a condition would not, however, operate as determination of the lease or have the effect of forfeiture under section 111 as it now stands. It is, therefore, desirable to make express provision that if the lessee is adjudicated an insolvent and the lease provides that a lessor may re-enter on the happening of that event, the lease is determined by forfeiture.

Under sub section (g) of section 111, which provides also for forfeiture in the case of the denial of the lessor's title it has been held that the lessor must do something showing his intention to determine the lease before actually filing a suit for ejectment (1 L R 47 All 348, 45 Cal 469). As there has been some difference of opinion whether the mere institution of a suit amounts to such an act (1 L R 42 Bom 195) it is necessary to clear up the point. Before a suit in ejectment is filed, the lessee must know that the lessor has decided to determine the lease and does not waive his right to do so—Report of the Special Committee

112. A forfeiture under section 111, clause (g), is waived by acceptance of rent which has become due since the forfeiture, or by distress for such rent, or by any other act on the part of the lessor showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. Provided that the lessor is aware that the forfeiture has been incurred. Provided also that, where rent is accepted after the institution of a suit to eject the lessee on the ground of forfeiture, such acceptance is not a waiver.

113. A notice given under section 111, clause (h), is waived, with the express or implied consent of the person to whom it is given, by any act on the part of the person giving it, showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting.

OF EXCHANGES

118 When two persons mutually transfer the ownership of one thing for the ownership of another, neither thing nor both things being money only, the transaction is called an "exchange."

A transfer of property in completion of an exchange can be made only in manner provided for the transfer of such property by sale.

Notes—When some of the co-owners possessing an undivided share in the several properties take, by arrangement, a specific property in lieu of their shares in all, the transaction effected is not an exchange within the meaning of this section but amounts to partition. 25 C 210=2 C W N 91. The setting off of mutual decrees does not amount to exchange in as much as the essence of such a transaction is the mutual transfer of two things, wanting in this case. 11 C W N 342. Where a tenant surrendered voluntarily certain leasehold right and took from the landlord leasehold rights of some other property, held that the transaction was not exchange. 6 C W N 904.

OF GIFTS

122 'Gift' is the transfer of certain existing movable or immovable property made voluntarily and without consideration, by one person called the donor to another, called the donee, and accepted by or on behalf of the donee

Such acceptance must be made during the lifetime of the donor, and while he is still capable of giving

If the donee dies before acceptance, the gift is void

123 For the purpose of making a gift of immovable property the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses

For the purpose of making a gift of movable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered

Notes—A written direction by the donor to the tenant to pay the rent to the donee is invalid 19 VI L J 255 This section does alter the Hindu law as to gift of immovable property so as to dispense with the necessity for delivery of possession

Gift of existing and future property 124 A gift comprising both existing and future property is void as to the latter

125 A gift of a thing to two or more donees, of whom one does not accept it, is void as to the interest which he would have taken had he accepted

126 The donor and donee may agree that, on the happening of any specified event which does not depend on the Will of the donor, a gift shall be suspended or revoked but a gift which the parties agree shall be revocable wholly or in part, at the mere Will of the donor, is void wholly or in part, as the case may be

A gift may also be revoked in any of the cases (save want or failure of consideration) in which, if it were a contract it might be rescinded

Save as aforesaid, a gift cannot be revoked

Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to affect the rights of transferees for consideration without notice

127 Where a gift is in the form of a single transfer to the same person of several things of which one is, and the others are not burdened by an obligation, the donee can take nothing by the gift unless he accepts it fully

Where a gift is in the form of two or more separate and independent transfers to the same person of several things, the donee is at liberty to accept one of them and refuse the others although the former may be beneficial and the latter onerous

A donee not competent to contract, and accepting property burdened by any obligation is not bound by his acceptance. But if after becoming competent to contract and being aware of the obligation he retains the property given he becomes so bound

128 Subject to the provisions of section 127, where a gift consists of the donor's whole property, the donee is personally liable for all the debts due by and liabilities of the donor at the time of the gift to the extent to the property comprised therein

Amendment—The scope of this section is made clear by the addition of the word 'liabilities' after the word 'debts'. (i) A transfers to C a debt due to him by B. A being then indebted to B, C sues B for the debt due by B to A. In such suit B is entitled to set off the debt due by A to him, although C was unaware of it at the date of such transfer.

(ii) A executed a bond in favour of B under circumstances entitling the former to have it delivered up and cancelled. B assigns the bond to C for value and without notice of such circumstances. C cannot enforce the bond against A.

Notes—Before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, it was the assignee of the debt upon whom it was incumbent for his own protection to give notice of the assignment to the debtor. In the Act no provision is made for the assignee giving notice in any particular way. All that is required is that the debtor shall become aware of the transfer When he is aware of it it is binding on him II 60

133 Where the transferor of a debt warrants the solvency of the debtor, the warranty of solvency of the debtor the warranty, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, applies only to his solvency at the time of the transfer, and is limited, where the transfer is made for consideration, to the amount or value of such consideration

134 Where a debt is transferred for the purpose of securing an existing or future debt, the debt so transferred, if received by the transferor or recovered by the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer, and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor or other person entitled to receive the same

Notes—The holder of a charge on a debt due to his debtor by way of security for his own loan is a transferee of an actionable claim and entitled to recover the debt from the transferor's debtor 7 M L T 125=5 Ind Cas 834

136 No Judge legal practitioner or officer connected with any Court of Justice shall buy or traffic in, or stipulate for, or agree to receive, any share of, or interest in, any actionable claim, and no Court of Justice shall enforce, at his instance or at the instance of any person claiming by or through him any actionable claim, so dealt with by him as aforesaid

Notes—A decree is not an actionable claim within the definition of an actionable claim in the Transfer of Property Act A transfer of a decree to a pleader is therefore not invalid by virtue of this section 40 M L J 124

137 Nothing in the foregoing sections of this Chapter applies to stocks, shares or debentures or to instruments which are for the time being by law or custom, negotiable, or to any mercantile document of title to goods

Explanation—The expression, "mercantile document of title to goods," includes—warehouse-keeper's certificate, railway receipt of goods, and any other document as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorizing or purporting to authorize, either by endorsement or by delivery, the possessor of the document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented

Notes—Railway receipts are not negotiable by law and are not rendered negotiable by this section This section merely provides that the methods of assigning certain specified documents are not affected by this section 695 Ind Cas 38 B 225, 40 B

RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL ON THE 27TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.

An Act to validate certain transfers of property made prior to the 1st of January, 1915

WHEREAS it is expedient to validate certain transfers of property made prior to the 1st of January, 1915, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Short title and extent 1. (1) This Act may be called the Transfer of Property (Validating) Act, 1917.

(2) It shall extend, in the first instance, to the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, provided that the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, extend it to any other part of British India specified in the notification

2 Where a mortgage or gift purports to have been effected by an instrument executed prior to the 1st of January, 1915, and such instrument is required by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882,* to be attested, such mortgage or gift shall not be deemed to be invalid by reason only that any person who purported to attest such instrument as a witness did not see the executant sign it provided that such person before signing his name on the instrument received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of his signature to the same

3 Where a claim under any such instrument executed prior to the 1st of January, 1915, has been wholly or in part dismissed, rejected or withdrawn, after the 30th day of July, 1912, and before the commencement of this Act, in a Court of first instance or of revision or appeal, by reason only of the fact that some person who purported to attest such instrument as a witness on having received before signing his name thereon a personal acknowledgment from the executant of his signature to the same, did not see the executant sign it, the case may, if the dismissal, rejection or withdrawal has had the effect of invalidating in whole or in part, the said instrument as between persons claiming thereunder, be restored on review in accordance with the procedure provided by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for review of judgments on application in writing made within six months from the commencement of this Act, and on such restoration the provisions of section 2 shall apply to such instrument.

Provided nevertheless—

(1) that every Court to whom such an application is made shall have discretion to refuse the same if it is of opinion that such restoration would prejudice the rights of any transferee for value in good faith under any transfer made subsequent to the said 30th day of July, 1912,

(2) that in the event of a decree being passed upon such application in favour of the applicant or his legal representative, interest shall only be allowed under such instrument at the contractual rate up to the date of the original dismissal, rejection or withdrawal of such claim, and for a period of six months therefrom, and at the rate of 6 per cent., thereafter until realization, and

(3) that in the event of the case being so restored, the Court shall be bound by the finding of the former Court, by or before whom the case was dismissed, rejected or withdrawn, on any issue of fact which was heard and finally determined by it

16 The Collector may, at any time after making a declaration under section 9, and before delivering or dividing the treasure as hereinbefore provided, declare by writing under his hand his intention to acquire on behalf of the Government the treasure, or any specified portion thereof, by payment to the persons entitled thereto of a sum equal to the value of the materials of such treasure or portion together with one fifth of such value, and may place such sum in deposit in his treasury to the credit of such persons, and thereupon such treasure or portion shall be deemed to be the property of Government, and the money so deposited shall be dealt with as far as may be, as if it were such treasure or portion

OF THE CREATION OF TRUST

4 A trust may be created for any lawful purpose The purpose of a trust is lawful unless it is (a) forbidden by law, or (b) is of such a nature that, if permitted it would defeat the provisions of any law, or (c) is fraudulent, or (d) involves or implies injury to the person or property of another, or (e) the Court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy.

Every trust of which the purpose is unlawful is void And where a trust is created for two purposes of which one is lawful and the other unlawful and the two purposes cannot be separated, the whole trust is void

Explanation—In this section, the expression 'law' includes where the trust property is immovable and situate in a foreign country, the law of such country

Illustrations

(a) A conveys property to B in trust to apply the profits to the maintenance and education of his daughter, to be trained up as a prostitute The trust is void

(b) A bequeaths property to B in trust to employ him in carrying on a smuggling business and out of the profits thereof to support A's children The trust is void

(c) A, while in insolvent circumstances transfers property to B in trust for A during his life and after his death to B A is declared an insolvent The trust for A is invalid as against his creditors

5 No trust in relation to immovable property is valid unless declared by a non testamentary instrument in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered or by the Will of the author of the trust or of the trustee

No trust in relation to movable property is valid unless declared as afore said, or unless the ownership of the property is transferred to the trustee

The rules do not apply where they would operate so as to effectuate a fraud

Notes—The Indian Trust Act is inapplicable to religious endowments 13 M L J 354 vide also 25 P L R 1903 = 75 P R 1903 Reading ss 5 and 6 together, the legislature seems to have meant that a specific oral declaration of trust on point (a) to (d) would be enough to create a trust without transfer whether the author was himself the trustee 10 Bom L R 1209 See also 13 Bom L R 1209 564, 13 Bom L R 1209. A trust created by a person who is not a trustee is not a trust 13 M L J 354. To create a few months prior to his insolvency with the sole object of having been sold a valid trust is created 50 M 815 = 105 Ind Cas 138 A trust relating to immovable property must be in writing, signed and registered or by Will. The object of the trust must not be of a nebulous character, but of such a nature that a Court can administer it 78 Ind Cas 320 = 1925 Oudh 202, see also 49 M L J 734 Where a person sets apart a certain sum for charity and invests it with a merchant and the interest paid by the merchant is spent on charity, the merchant is not a trustee in respect of the amount A I R 1925 Sind 259 A trust created outside India can be enforced in India 13 Bom L R 1121

6 Subject to the provisions of section 5, a trust is created when the author of the trust indicates with reasonable certainty by any words or acts (a) an intention on his part to create thereby a trust, (b) the purpose of the trust, (c) the beneficiary, and (d) the trust property, and (unless the trust is declared by Will, or the author of the trust is himself to be the trustee) transfer the trust property to the trustee

(a) A bequeaths certain property to B "having the fullest confidence that he will dispose of it for benefit of C" This creates a trust so far as regards A and C.

(b) A bequeaths certain property to B, 'hoping he will continue it in the family.' This does not create a trust as the beneficiary is not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(c) A bequeaths certain property to B requesting him to distribute it amongst such members of C's family as B should think most deserving. This does not create a trust for the beneficiaries are not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(d) A bequeaths certain property to B, desiring him to divide the bulk of it among C's children. This does not create a trust for the trust property is not indicated with sufficient certainty.

(e) A bequeaths a shop and stock in trade to B on condition that he pays A's debts and a legacy to C. This is a condition not a trust for A's creditors and C.

Notes—There is nothing in this section to suggest that trust property cannot be effectively transferred by a registered instrument 29 M 412 One of the essentials to the creation of a trust under this section is that the author of the trust should transfer the trust property to the trustee 7 Bom L R 179, see also 47 M L J 119, 24 M L T 267 Where the mortgagor appoints mortgagee as his agent for management of estate with liability to account the mortgagor is not a trustee 24 C W N 769 A gift subject to condition that donee should maintain certain person was held to create an implied trust A I R 1925 Nag 29 As regards uncertainty and vagueness of trust, vide A I R 1925 Sind 195, 8 Ind Cas 375

(b) with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction by or on behalf of a minor, but subject in each case to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which the author of the trust may dispose of the trust property

Subject of trust

8 The subject matter of a trust must be property transferable to the beneficiary

It must not be a merely beneficial interest under a subsisting trust

Notes—All transferable property can be saddled with a trust by deed inter vivos or by Will if objects of the trusts are lawful A 1 R 1925 Sind 159 A trust is perfectly created unless the legal interest be actually vested in the trustee Garrard v Landerdale, 2 Russ & M 452, Meek v Kettle will, 1 Hare, 469, Ellison, 6 Ves 662

Who may be beneficiary

9 Every person capable of holding property may be a beneficiary

A proposed beneficiary may renounce his interest under the trust by disclaimer addressed to the trustee, or by setting up with notice of the trust, a claim inconsistent therewith

Disclaimer by beneficiary

Who may be trustee

No one bound to accept trust

No one is bound to accept a trust

Acceptance of trust

A trust is accepted by any words or acts of the trustee indicating with reasonable certainty such acceptance

Instead of accepting a trust, the intended trustee may, within a reasonable period, disclaim it and such disclaimer shall prevent the trust property from vesting in him

Disclaimer of trust

A disclaimer by one of two or more co trustees vests the trust property in the other or others, and makes him or them sole trustee or trustees from the date of the creation of the trust

OF THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF TRUSTEES

11 The trustee is bound to fulfil the purpose of the trust, and to obey the directions of the author of the trust given at the time of its creation, except as modified by the consent of all the beneficiaries being competent to contract

Trustee to execute trust

Where the beneficiary is incompetent to contract, his consent may, for the purposes of this section be given by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction

Nothing in the section shall be deemed to require a trustee to obey any direction when to do so would be impracticable, illegal, or manifestly injurious to the beneficiaries

Explanation—Unless a contrary intention be expressed, the purpose of a trust for the payment of debts shall be deemed to be (a) to pay only the debts of the author of the trust existing and recoverable at the date of the instrument of trust or, when such instrument is a Will, at the date of his death and (b) in the case of debts not bearing interest to make such payment without interest

(a) A a trustee is simply authorized to sell certain land by public auction. He cannot sell the land by private contract

(b) A, a trustee of certain land for X, Y, and Z is authorized to sell the land to B for a specified sum X Y and Z being competent to contract, consent that A may sell the land to C for a less sum A may sell the land accordingly

(c) A a trustee for B and her children is directed by the author of the trust to lend, on B's request, trust property to B's husband C on the security of his bond C becomes insolvent and B requests A to make the loan A may refuse to make it

12 A trustee is bound to acquaint himself, as soon as possible, with the nature and circumstances of the trust property to obtain, where necessary, a transfer of the trust property to himself, and (subject to the provisions on the instrument of trust) to get in trust moneys invested on insufficient or hazardous security

(a) The trust property is a debt outstanding on personal security The instrument of trust gives the trustee no discretionary power to leave the debt so outstanding The trustee's duty is to recover the debt without unnecessary delay

(b) The trust property is money in the hands of one of two co-trustees No discretionary power is given by the instrument of trust The other co-trustee must not allow the former to retain the money for a longer period than the circumstances of the case required

13 A trustee is bound to maintain and defend all such suits and (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) to take such other steps as regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the trust property may be reasonably requisite for the preservation of the trust property and the assertion or protection of the title thereto

The trust property is immovable property which has been given to the author of the trust by an unregistered instrument Subject to the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, the trustee's duty is to cause the instrument to be registered

Notes.—The first duty of trustees is to place the trust property in a state of security Jacob v Lucas 1 Beav 436 Coffrey v Darby, 6 Ves 488

Trustee not to set up title adverse to beneficiary

14 The trustee must not for himself or another, set up or aid any title to the trust property adverse to the interest of the beneficiary

Care required from trustee

15 A trustee is bound to deal with the trust property as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with such property if it were his own, and in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a trustee so dealing is not responsible for the loss, destruction, or deterioration of the trust property

Illustrations

(a) A living in Calcutta is a trustee for B, living in Bombay. A remits trust funds to B by bills drawn by a person of undoubted credit in favour of the trustees as such and payable at Bombay. The bills are dishonoured. A is not bound to make good the loss.

(b) A, a trustee of leasehold property, directs the tenant to pay the rents on account of the trust to a banker, B, then in credit. The rents are accordingly paid to B, and A leaves the money with B only till wanted. Before the money is drawn out, B becomes insolvent. A, having had no reason to believe that B was in insolvent circumstances, is not bound to make good the loss.

(c) A, a trustee of two debts for B, releases one and compounds the other in good faith and reasonably believing that it is for B's interest to do so. A is not bound to make good any loss caused thereby to B.

(d) A, a trustee, directed to sell the trust property by auction, sells the same but does not advertise the sale, and otherwise fails in reasonable diligence in inviting competition. A is bound to make good the loss caused thereby to the beneficiary.

(e) A, a trustee for B in execution of his trust, sells the trust property but from want of due diligence on his part fails to receive part of the purchase money. A is bound to make good the loss thereby caused to B.

(f) A, a trustee for B of a policy of insurance, has funds in hands for payment of the premiums. A neglects to pay the premiums, and the policy is consequently forfeited. A is bound to make good the loss to B.

(g) A bequeathes certain moneys to B and C as trustees and authorises them to invest the same in any firm in which A, B, and C are partners. B and C, however, invest the money in a new firm, in which A is not a partner. A is not bound to make good the loss resulting to B and C.

Notes—The specific provisions contained in other sections of the Indian Trusts Act.

16 Where the trust is created for the benefit of several persons in succession, and the trust property is of a wasting nature or a future or reversionary interest, the trustee is bound, unless an intention to the contrary may be inferred from the instrument of trust, to convert the property into property of a permanent and immediately profitable character.

Illustrations

(a) A bequeaths to B all his property in trust for C during his life, and on his death, for D and, on D's death for E. A's property consists of three leasehold houses, and there is nothing in A's Will to show that he intended the houses to be enjoyed in specie. B should sell the houses and invest the proceeds in accordance with section 20.

(b) A bequeaths to B his three leasehold houses in Calcutta and all the furniture therein in trust for C during his life and, on his death for D, and on D's death for E. Here no intention that the houses and furniture should be enjoyed in specie appears clearly and B should not sell them.

Notes—Where a testator gives his personal estate or the residue of his personal estate to several persons in succession and the subject of the bequest is of a wasting nature the Court implies the intention that such heritable estate should assume a permanent character and so become capable of succession Howe v Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves 137, Richfield v Baker 2 Beav 481

17 Where there are more beneficiaries than one, the trustee is bound to be impartial, and must not execute the trust for the advantage of one at the expense of another

Trustee to be impartial
Where the trustee has a discretionary power, nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the Court to control the exercise reasonably and in good faith, of such discretion

A bequeaths property to B directing him with all convenient speed and with a five years to sell it and apply the proceeds for the benefit of C. In the exercise of reasonable discretion B postpones the sale for six years. The sale is not thereby rendered invalid but C alleging that he has been injured by the postponement, institutes a suit against B to obtain compensation. In such suit the burden of proving that C has not been injured lies on B.

Notes—If the trust be "with all convenient speed and within five years," to sell the estate and apply the funds in payment of debts etc., the proviso as to five years is considered as directory only, and the trustees can sell and make good a title after the lapse of that period. A trustee committing a breach of trust is not liable to pay interest except in the following cases —

(a) where he has actually received interest
(b) where the breach consists in unreasonable delay in paying trust money to the beneficiary

(c) where the trustee ought to have received interest, but has not done so
(d) where he may be fairly presumed to have received interest
He is liable, in case (a) to account for the interest actually received and, in cases (b) (c) and (d), to account for simple interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, unless the Court otherwise directs

Non liability for predecessor's default 25 Where a trustee succeeds another, he is not, as such liable for the acts or defaults of his predecessor

Non liability for co-trustee's default 26 Subject to the provisions of sections 13 and 15, one trustee is not, as such liable for a breach of trust committed by his co trustee

Provided that, in the absence of an express declaration to the contrary in the instrument of trust, a trustee is so liable,—

(a) where he has delivered trust property to his co trustee without seeing to its proper application

(b) where he allows his co trustee to receive trust property and fails to make due enquiry as to the co trustee's dealings therewith, or allows him to retain it longer than the circumstances of the case reasonably require

(c) where he becomes aware of a breach of trust committed or intended by his co trustee, and either actively conceals it or does not within a reasonable time take proper steps to protect the beneficiary's interest

A co trustee, who joins in signing a receipt for trust property, and proves that he has not received the same, is not answerable, by reason of such of signature only, for loss or misapplication of the property by his co trustee.

A bequeaths certain property to B and C, and directs them to sell it and invest the proceeds for the benefit of D. B and C accordingly sell the property and the purchase money is received by B, and retained in his hands. C pays no attention to the matter for two years, and then calls on B to make the investment. B is unable to do so, becomes insolvent, and the purchase money is lost. C may be compelled to make good the amount.

27 Where co-trustees jointly commit a breach of trust or where one of them, by his neglect, enables the other to commit a breach of trust each is liable to the beneficiary for the whole of the loss occasioned by such breach.

But, as between the trustees themselves, if one be less guilty than another and has had to refund the loss the former may compel the latter, or his legal representative, to the extent of the assets he had received to make good such loss, and, if all be equally guilty, any one or more of the trustees who has had to refund the loss may compel the others to contribute.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize a trustee who has been guilty of fraud, to institute a suit to compel contribution.

Each trustee is responsible for the entirety of the loss incurred. Wilson v Moore 1 M & K 146, Lyle v Kingdom, 1 Coll 188, Blyth v Fladgate (1891) 1 Ch 337.

28 When any beneficiary's interest becomes vested in another person, and the trustee, not having notice of the vesting, pays or delivers trust property to the person who would have been entitled thereto in the absence of such vesting, the trustee is not liable for the property so paid or delivered.

29 When the beneficiary's interest is forfeited or awarded by legal adjudication to Government, the trustee is bound to hold the trust property to the extent of such interest for the benefit of such person in such manner as the Government may direct in this behalf.

30 Subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust, and of sections 23 and 26, trustees shall be respectively chargeable only for such moneys, stocks, funds and securities as they respectively actually receive, and shall not be answerable the one for the other of them, nor for any banker, broker, or other person in whose hands any trust property may be placed, nor for the insufficiency or deficiency of any stocks, funds, or securities, nor otherwise for involuntary losses.

- Right to indemnity from gainer by breach of trust

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle a trustee to be indemnified who has, in committing the breach of trust, been guilty of fraud

Notes—As between the trustees and a third person who has reaped the benefit of the breach of trust though the trustees must make the disbursement in the first instance to the injured party the loss will eventually be cast on the person who was the gainer by the breach of trust. Trafford v Boehm 3 Atk 440

58 The beneficiary, if competent in contract may transfer his interest but subject to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which he may dispose of such interest.

Right to transfer beneficial interest
Provided that when property is transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest nothing in this section shall authorize her to transfer such interest during her marriage.

59 Where no trustees are appointed or all the trustees die, disclaim or are discharged or where for any other reason the execution of a trust by the trustee is or becomes impracticable, the beneficiary may institute a suit for the execution of the trust, and the trust shall, so far as may be possible, be executed by the Court until the appointment of a trustee or new trustee.

60 The beneficiary has a right (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) that the trust property shall be properly protected and held and administered by proper persons and by a proper number of such persons.

Explanation I—The following are not proper persons within the meaning of this section—

A person domiciled abroad; an alien enemy; a person having an interest inconsistent with that of the beneficiary; a person in insolvent circumstances, and, unless the personal law of the beneficiary allows otherwise, a married woman and a minor.

Explanation II—When the administration of the trust involves the receipt and custody of money, the number of trustees should be two at least.

61 The beneficiary has a right that his trustee shall be compelled to perform any particular act of his duty as such, and restrained from committing any contemplated or probable breach of trust.

62 Where a trustee has wrongfully bought trust property, the beneficiary has a right to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred by the trustee, if it remains in his hands unsold, or if it has been bought for him by any person with notice of the trust, by such person. But in such case the beneficiary must repay the purchase money paid by the trustee, with interest, and such other expenses (if any) as he has properly incurred in the preservation of the property, and the trustee or purchaser must (a) account for the nett profits of the property, (b) be charged with an occupation rent, if he has been in actual possession of the property, and (c) allow the beneficiary to deduct a proportionate part of the purchase money if the property has been deteriorated by the acts or omissions of the trustee or purchaser.

Nothing in this section—

(a) impairs the rights of lessees and others who, before the institution of a suit to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred, have contracted in good faith with the trustee or purchaser, or

(b) entitles the beneficiary to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred where he, being competent to contract, has himself, without coercion or undue influence having been brought to bear on him, ratified the sale to the trustee with full knowledge of the facts of the case and of his rights as against the trustee.

63 Where trust property comes into the hands of a third person inconsistently with the trust, the beneficiary may require him to admit formally, or may institute a suit for a declaration, that the property is comprised in the trust.

Where the trustee has disposed of trust property and the money or other property which he has received therefor can be traced in his hands, or the hands of his legal representative or legatee, the beneficiary has, in respect thereof, rights as nearly as may be the same as his rights in respect of the original trust property.

(a) a transferee in good faith for consideration without having notice of the trust, either when the purchase money was paid, or when the conveyance was executed, or

(b) a transferee for consideration from such a transferee

A judgment creditor of the trustee attaching and purchasing trust property is not a transferee for consideration within the meaning of this section

Nothing in section 63 applies to money, currency notes and negotiable instruments in the hands of a bona fide holder to whom they have passed in circulation, or shall be deemed to affect the Indian Contract Act, 1872,* section 108, or the liability of a person to whom a debt or charge is transferred

Right in case of blended property 66 Where the trustee wrongfully mingles the trust property with his own, the beneficiary is entitled to a charge on the whole fund for the amount due to him

67 If a partner, being a trustee, wrongfully employs trust property in the business, or on the account of the partnership, no other partner is liable therefor in his personal capacity to the beneficiaries unless he had notice of the breach of trust

The partners having such notice are jointly and severally liable for the breach of trust

On an appointment of a new trustee the number of trustees may be increased

The Official Trustee may, with his consent and by the order of the Court, be appointed under this section, in any case in which only one trustee is to be appointed and such trustee is to be the sole trustee.

The provisions of this section relative to a trustee who is dead include the case of a person nominated trustee in a Will but dying before the testator, and those relative to a continuing trustee include a refusing or retiring trustee if willing to act in the execution of the power

Notes—Applications for the removal of a trustee should generally be brought by a suit and where it is alleged that the trustees have committed a breach of trust, the Court should ask the delinquent trustee to make good the breach of trust 29 Bom L R 1576 Instruments appointing new trustee under this section do not require registration 6 M L T 240=3 Ind Cas 435

74 Whenever any such vacancy or disqualification occurs, and it is found impracticable to appoint a new trustee under Appointment by Court section 73, the beneficiary may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, for the appointment of a trustee or a new trustee, and the Court may appoint a trustee or a new trustee accordingly

In appointing new trustees, the Court shall have regard (a) to the wishes Rules for selecting new trustees of the author of the trust as expressed in or to be inferred from the instrument of trust, (b) to the wishes of the person (if any) empowered to appoint new trustees, (c) to the question whether the appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust, and, (d) where there are more beneficiaries than one, to the interest of all such beneficiaries

Notes—The Court cannot appoint a receiver in a proceeding for the removal of a trustee and the appointment of a new trustee under this section 103 Ind Cas 816, see also A 1 M 1924 All 376, 3 S L R 118

75 Whenever any new trustee is appointed under section 73 or section Vesting of trust property in new trustees 74, all the trust property for the time being vested in the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or in the legal representative of any trustee, shall become vested in such new trustee, either solely or jointly with the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, as the case may require

Every new trustee so appointed, and every trustee appointed by a Court, Powers of new trustees either before or after the passing of this Act, shall have the same powers, authorities and discretions, and shall in all respects act, as if he had been originally nominated a trustee by the author of the trust

76. On the death or discharge of one of several co-trustees, the trust survives and the trust property passes to the others, Survival of trust unless the instrument of trust expressly declares otherwise

OF THE EXTINCTION OF TRUSTS

Trust how extinguished

77 A trust is extinguished—

- (a) When its purpose is completely fulfilled, or
- (b) when its purpose becomes unlawful, or
- (c) when the fulfilment of its purpose becomes impossible by destruction of the trust property or otherwise, or
- (d) when the trust, being revocable, is expressly revoked

Notes—Where the trust is extinguished under clause (c) the donor of the property is entitled to recover the land given 67 Ind Cas 432, 1923 Lah 93 A trust cannot be cancelled at the instance of one trustee applying for cancellation on the ground of his dissatisfaction with the management of other co trustee 23 A L J 28=47 A 313

Revocation of trust

78 A trust created by Will may be revoked at the pleasure of the testator,

A trust otherwise created can be revoked only—

- (a) where all the beneficiaries are competent to contract—by their consent,
- (b) where the trust has been declared by a non testamentary instrument or by word of mouth—in exercise of a power of revocation expressly reserved to the author of the trust, or
- (c) Where the trust is for the payment of the debts of the author of the trust, and has not been communicated to the creditors—at the pleasure of the author of the trust

Illustration

A conveys property to B in trust to sell the same and pay out of the proceeds the claims of A's creditors. A reserves no power of revocation. If no communication has been made to the creditors A may revoke the trust, but if the creditors are parties to the arrangement the trust cannot be revoked without their consent.

Notes—A debtor by an arrangement in writing, made with one of his creditors a trustee in respect of some of his property, for the payment of his debts. No communication of the arrangement was made to the creditors. The debtor subsequently hypothecated a portion of the trust property to secure an advance made by the creditor who had been made trustee under the arrangement. The creditor afterwards appropriated the property. Held, that the hypothecation bond, subsequent to the trust arrangement, under the circumstances amounted to revocation. 1 Ind Cas 347

Revocation not to defeat what trustees have duly done

79 No trust can be revoked by the author of the trust so as to defeat or prejudice what the trustees may have duly done in execution of the trust

CHAPTER IX

OF CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS IN THE NATURE OF TRUSTS

Where obligation in nature of trust is created

80 An obligation in the nature of a trust is created in the following cases

81 Where the owner of property transfers or bequeaths it and it cannot be inferred consistently with the attendant circumstances that he intended to dispose of the beneficial interest therein, the transferee or legatee must hold such property for the benefit of the owner or his legal representative

Illustrations

(a) A conveys land to B without consideration and declares no trust of any part. It cannot consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the land. B holds the land for the benefit of A.

(b) A conveys to B two fields, Y and Z, and declares a trust of Y, but says nothing about Z. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in Z. B holds Z for the benefit of A.

(c) A transfers certain stock belonging to him into the joint names of himself and B. It cannot consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the stock during his life. A and B hold the stock for the benefit of A during his life.

(d) A makes a gift of certain land to his wife B. She takes the beneficial interest in the land free from any trust in favour of A, for it may be inferred from the circumstances that the gift was for B's benefit.

Notes—Where a feoffment is made without consideration the use results in a feoffor. Dyer v Dyer, 2 Cox 93.

82. Where property is transferred to one person for a consideration paid or provided by another person, and it appears that such other person did not intend to pay or provide such consideration for the benefit of the transferee, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the person paying or providing the consideration.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Code of Civil Procedure,* Section 317, or Act No XI of 1859 (to improve the law relating to sales of land for arrears of revenue in the Lower Provinces under the Bengal Presidency), section 36.

Notes—Where a husband buys property in the name of his wife he should be presumed to have done so for the benefit of the wife. 47 Ind Cas 377.

Cases—2 Lah L J 446, see also 45 A 482. This section appears to throw the burden of proving that a transaction is benami on the party alleging it. 82 Ind Cas 832=1 O W N 710.

83. Where a trust is incapable of being executed, or where the trust is completely executed without exhausting the trust property, the trustee, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, must hold the trust property, or so much thereof as is unexhausted, for the benefit of the author of the trust or his legal representative.

84 Where the owner of property transfers it to another for an illegal purpose and such purpose is not carried into execution, or the transferor is not as guilty as the transferee, or the effect of permitting the transferee to retain the property might be to defeat the provisions of any law, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the transferor.

85 Where a testator bequeaths certain property upon trust and the purpose of the trust appears on face of the Will to be unlawful, or during the testator's lifetime the legatee agrees with him to apply the property for an unlawful purpose the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative

Where property is bequeathed and the revocation of the bequest is prevented by coercion, the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative

86. Where property is transferred in pursuance of a contract which is liable to rescission or induced by fraud or mistake the transferee must, on receiving notice to that effect, hold the property for the benefit of the transferor subject to repayment by the latter of the consideration actually paid

87. Where a debtor becomes the executor or other legal representative of his creditor, he must hold the debt for the benefit of the persons interested therein

88. Where a trustee, executor, partner, agent, director of a company, legal advisor or other person bound in a fiduciary character to protect the interests of another person, by availing himself of his character, gains for himself, any pecuniary advantage, or where any person so bound enters into any dealings under circumstances in which his own interests are, or may be, adverse to those of such other person and thereby gains for himself a pecuniary advantage, he must hold for the benefit of such other person the advantage so gained.

(2) (a) In this section "excessive" means in excess of that which the Court deems to be reasonable having regard to the risk incurred as it appeared or must be taken to have appeared, to the creditor at the date of the loan.

(b) In considering whether interest is excessive under this section, the Court shall take into account any amounts charged or paid, whether in money or in kind, for expenses, inquiries, fines, bonuses, premia, renewals or any other charges, and if compound interest is charged, the periods at which it is calculated, and the total advantage which may reasonably be taken to have been expected from the transaction.

(c) In considering the question of risk, the Court shall take into account the presence or absence of security and the value thereof, the financial condition of the debtor and the result of any previous transactions of the debtor, by way of loan, so far as the same were known, or must be taken to have been known to the creditor.

(d) In considering whether a transaction was substantially unfair, the Court shall take into account all circumstances materially affecting the relations of the parties at the time of the loan or tending to show that the transaction was unfair, including the necessities or supposed necessities of the debtor at the time of the loan so far as the same were known, or must be taken to have been known, to be creditor.

Explanation—Interest may of itself be sufficient evidence that a transaction was substantially unfair.

(3) This section shall apply to any suit whatever its form may be, if such suit is substantially one for the recovery of a loan or for the enforcement of any agreement or security in respect of a loan or for the redemption of any such security."

(4) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of any transferee for value who satisfies the Court that the transfer to him was bona fide, and that he had at the time of such transfer no notice of any fact which would have entitled the debtor as against the lender to relief under this section.

For the purposes of this subsection, the word "notice" shall have the same meaning as is ascribed to it in section 4 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882†

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed as derogating from the existing powers or jurisdiction of any Court.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

3 (1) If personal injury is caused to a workman by an accident arising out of

Employer's liability for compensation

Provided that the employer shall not be so liable—

(a) in respect of any injury which does not result in the total or partial disablement of the workman for a period exceeding “seven” days,

(iii) the wilful removal or disregard by the workman of any safety guard or other device which he knew to have been provided for the purpose of securing the safety of workman,†

(2) If a workman employed in any employment involving the handling of wool, hair bristles, or animal carcasses or parts of such carcasses, or in the loading, unloading or transport of any merchandise, or in any work in connection with animals infected with anthrax, ‡ contracts the disease of anthrax, or if a workman, whilst in the service of an employer in whose service he has been employed for a continuous period of not less than six months in any employment specified in Schedule III, contracts any disease specified therein as an occupational disease, the disease shall be deemed to be contracted by him in the course of his employment, and, unless the contrary is proved, shall be deemed to have arisen out of and in the course of the employment.

Explanation—For the purposes of this sub-section a period of service shall be deemed to be continuous which has not included a period of service under any other employer.

(3) The Governor General in Council, after giving, by notification in the Gazette of India, no less than three month's notice of his intention to do, may, by a like notification, add any description of employment to the employments specified in Schedule III, and shall specify in the case of the employments so added the diseases which shall be deemed for the purposes of this section to be occupational diseases peculiar to those employments respectively and the provisions of sub-section (2) shall thereupon apply as if such diseases had been declared by this Act to be occupational diseases peculiar to those employments.

(4) Save as provided by sub-sections (2) and (3) no compensation shall be payable to a workman in respect of any disease unless the disease is † directly attributable to a specific injury by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to confer any right to compensation on a workman in respect of any injury if he has instituted in a Civil Court a suit for damages in respect of the injury against the employer or any other person, and no suit for damages shall be maintainable by a workman in any Court of law in respect of any injury—

(a) if he has instituted a claim to compensation in respect of the injury before a Commissioner, or

Amount of compensation ⁴⁴ (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act the amount of compensation shall be as follows namely —

Where death results from the injury—

(i) in the case of an adult in receipt of monthly wages falling within limits shown in the first column of Schedule IV— the amount shown against such limits in the second column thereof, and

(ii) in the case of a minor—two hundred rupees,

B Where permanent total disablement results from the injury—

(i) in the case of an adult in receipt of monthly wages falling within limits shown in the first column of Schedule IV—the amount shown against such limits in the third column thereof, and

(ii) in the case of a minor—twelve hundred rupees,

C Where permanent partial disablement results from the injury—

(i) in the case of an injury specified in Schedule I, such percentage of the compensation which would have been payable in the case of permanent total disablement as is specified therein as being the percentage of the loss of earning capacity caused by that injury, and

(ii) in the case of an injury not specified in Schedule I, such percentage of the compensation payable in the case of permanent total disablement as is proportionate to the loss of earning capacity permanently caused by the injury

Explanation—Where more injuries than one are caused by the same accident, the amount of compensation payable under this head shall be aggregated but not so in any case as to exceed the amount which would have been payable if permanent total disablement had resulted from the injuries

D Where temporary disablement, whether total or partial, results from the injury, a half monthly payment payable on the sixteenth day after the expiry of a waiting period of seven days from the date of the disablement and thereafter half monthly during the disablement or during a period of five years whichever period is shorter,—

(i) in the case of an adult in receipt of monthly wages falling within limits shown in the first column of Schedule IV—of the sum shown against such limits in the fourth column thereof, and

(ii) in the case of a minor—of one half of his monthly wages subject to a maximum of thirty rupees

Provided that —

(a) there shall be deducted from any lump sum or half monthly payment to which the workman is entitled the amount of any payment or allowance which the workman has received from the employer by way of compensation during the period of disablement prior to the receipt of such lump sum or of the first half monthly payment, as the case may be and

(b) no half-monthly payment shall in any case exceed the amount, if any, by which half the amount of the monthly wages of the workmen before the accident exceeds half the amount of such wages which he is earning, after the accident "

(2) On the ceasing of the disablement before the date on which any half-monthly payment falls due, there shall be payable in respect of that half-month a sum proportionate to the duration of the disablement in that half month

Amendment by Act 15 of 1933—The effect of these amendments would be to enhance death and permanent disablement in the Rs 17 8 0) "n (i.e., those getting less than those getting more than Rs 80 a month) compensation for temporary disablement would also be substantially enhanced for most workmen—Notes on Clauses

Notes—A minor was employed in hewing coal and while so employed a piece of coal worked itself into his knee with the result that blood poisoning set in and the workman died, Held that the death was the result of an 'injury by accident' Thomson v Ashington, 84 L T 412, see also Lloyd v Sugg, 69 L J Q B 190= (1900) 1 Q B 481 Where a workman's injuries were caused by an accident

(a) where the workman has, during a continuous period of not less than twelve months immediately preceding the accident, been in the service of the employer who is liable to pay compensation, the monthly wages of the workman shall be one twelfth of the total wages which have fallen due for payment to him by the employer in the last twelve months of that period,

† (b) where the whole of the continuous period of service immediately preceding the accident during which the workman was in the service of the employer who is liable to pay the compensation was less than one month, the monthly wages of the workman shall be deemed to be the average monthly amount which during the twelve months immediately preceding the accident, was being earned by a workman employed on the same work by the same employer, or, if there was no workman so employed, by a workman employed on similar work in the same locality "

‡ (c) in other cases, the monthly wages shall be thirty times the total wages earned in respect of the last continuous period of service immediately preceding the accident from the employer who is liable to pay compensation, divided by the number of days comprising such period

* Section 5 has been numbered as sub section (1) of section 5 and sub section (2) has been added by Act V of 1929

† Substituted by Act 15 of 1933

‡ The new clause (b) has been inserted and clause (c) has been lettered clause (d) by Act 15 of 1933

* Explanation—A period of service shall, for the purposes of "this sub section" be deemed to be continuous which has not been interrupted by a period of absence from work exceeding fourteen days

Amendment—The existing section 5 describes the manner in which monthly wages of workmen shall be calculated for the purpose of section 4. The amendment is designed to extend the same method to the calculation of the wages for the purposes of clause (n) sub section 2 and of sub section 3 of that section—Statement of Objects and Reasons

Notes—This section corresponds to Schedule 1, para (2) of the British Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906

6. (1) Any half monthly payment payable under this Act, either under an agreement between the parties or under the order of a Commissioner, may be reviewed by the Commissioner on the application either of the employer or of the workman accompanied by the certificate of a qualified medical practitioner that there has been a change in the condition of the workman or, subject to rules made under this Act, on application made without such certificate

(2) Any half monthly payment may, on review under this section, subject to the provisions of this Act, be continued, increased decreased or ended, or, if the accident is found to have resulted in permanent disablement, be converted to the lump sum to which the workman is entitled less any amount which he has already received by way of half monthly payments

Notes—It is not competent for a County Court Judge, sitting as arbitrator under the English Act to prophesy as to how long the incapacity for work of an injured workman will last, and to anticipate what may happen in the future in the workman's condition. It is for the employer who desires to obtain on the grounds of change of circumstances a review of the weekly payment which has been made payable to the injured workman to establish that such change has taken place, and the onus of so proving ought not to be shifted to the workman. Walton v South Kirby, 5 B W C C 640. Although a county Court Judge has no jurisdiction to make an order for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, if the incapacity has ceased, he has no jurisdiction to make an order for compensation. C 242=81 L J K B 541. If the workman is completely recovered before the compensation should end as merely from the date of the accident. (1914) W N 232

7 Any right to receive half monthly payments may, by agreement between the parties or, if the parties cannot agree and the payments have been continued for not less than six months on the application of either party to the Commissioner, be redeemed by the payment of a lump sum of such amount as may be agreed to by the parties or determined by the Commissioner, as the case may be

Notes—An agreement between an injured workman and his employer for the settlement of all claims to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, by the payment of a lump sum apart from the provisions of this Act relating to agreements for the redemption of a weekly payment is void as being contrary to the Act. Russell v Rudd, (1923) A C 309=92 L J K B 429

(2) Any other sum amounting to not less than ten rupees which is payable as compensation may be deposited with the Commissioner on behalf of the person entitled thereto.

(3) The receipt of the Commissioner shall be a sufficient discharge in respect of any compensation deposited with him'

(4) On the deposit of any money under sub section (1) "as compensation in respect of a deceased workman † the Commissioner 'shall deduct ‡ therefrom the actual costs of the workman's funeral expenses to an amount not exceeding "twenty five rupees"† and pay the same to the person by whom such expenses were incurred, and shall, if he thinks necessary, cause notice to be published or to be served on each dependant in such manner as he thinks fit, calling upon the dependants to appear before him on such date as he may fix for determining the distribution of compensation. If the Commissioner is satisfied after any inquiry which he may deem necessary, that no dependant exists he shall repay the balance of the money to the employer by whom it was paid. The Commissioner shall, on application by the employer, furnish a statement showing in detail all disbursements made

§ (5) Compensation deposited in respect of a deceased workman shall, subject to any deduction made under subsection (4), be apportioned among the dependants of the deceased workman or any of them in such proportion as the Commissioner thinks fit, or may, in the discretion of the Commissioner, be allotted to any one dependant

'(6) Where any compensation deposited with the Commissioner is payable to any person, the Commissioner shall, if the person to whom the compensation is payable is not a woman or a person under a legal disability, and may, in other cases, pay the money to the person entitled thereto

(7) Where any lump sum deposited with the Commissioner is payable to a woman or a person under a legal disability such sum may be invested applied or otherwise dealt with for the benefit of the woman or of such person during his disability, in such manner as the Commissioner may direct, and where a half monthly payment is payable to any person under a legal disability, the Commissioner may, of his own motion or on application made to him in this behalf, order that the payment be made during the disability to any dependant of the workman or to any other person whom the Commissioner thinks best fitted to provide for the welfare of the workman

(8) Where, on application made to him in this behalf or otherwise, the Commissioner is satisfied that on account of neglect of children on the part of a parent or on account of the variation of their circumstances of any dependant or for any other sufficient cause an order of the Commissioner as to the distribution of any sum paid as compensation or as to the manner in which any sum payable to any such dependant is to be invested applied or otherwise dealt with, ought to be varied, the Commissioner may make such orders for the variation of the former order as he thinks just in the circumstances of the case

Provided that no such order prejudicial to any person shall be made unless such person has been given an opportunity of showing cause why the order should not be made, or shall be made in any case in which it would involve the repayment by a dependant of any sum already paid to him

* (9) "Where the Commissioner varies any order under sub section (8) by reason of the fact that payment of compensation to any person has been obtained by fraud, impersonation or other improper means, any amount so paid to or on behalf of such person may be recovered in the manner hereinafter provided in section 31"

Notes—The right of dependants to compensation under this Act, where death ultimately results from the injury, is a separate and independent right and cannot be released by the workman Williams v Vauxhall, (1907) 2 K B 433 All the dependants must present themselves before the Commissioner before distribution takes place Kerr v Stewart, 43 Ir L T 119 The Commissioner is to settle the amount to be distributed Daniels v Ocean Coal Co., (1900) 1 Q B 250, Manchester v Carlton Iron Co., 89 L T 730 After the death of the widow, the Commissioner can allot her share to the children Ivey v Ivey, (1912) 2 K B 118

Object of the change—"Sub section (1) of section 8 as at present worded is liable to misinterpretation. The amendment seeks to clarify the real intention which is that all payments to dependants of the deceased workman must be made through the Commissioner and not directly to the dependants. The opportunity has been taken to provide that any lump sum payable as compensation to a minor should also be paid similarly through the Commissioner. The revised section further provides for—(a) the protection of lump sums payable to a woman or to a person (other than a minor) under any legal disability, (b) the prevention of deposits of trivial amounts and (c) the investment of sums payable as compensation to women. It is also proposed to remove the apparent inconsistency between the existing sub section (5) and the existing sub section (2) and between sub-section (1) which might be read as requiring the Commissioner to pay the full sum to a dependant and sub section (4) which enables him to deduct funeral expenses.—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

9. Save as provided by this Act, no lump sum or half monthly payment payable under this Act shall in any way be assigned, attached or charged capable of being assigned or charged or be liable to attachment or paid to any person other than the workman by operation of law, nor shall any claim be set off against the same

Notes—Where an applicant under this Act appeals unsuccessfully against the amount of compensation awarded to him the costs of appeal will be set off against his costs in the Court below Case Colonial Wharves 53 W R 514 An employer who has been found to liable pay compensation by way of weekly payments under the Act to a workman is not entitled to set off against those payments a sum awarded to him as costs against a workman in an application for the diminution of the weekly payments Roswell Gas Coal Co v Mr Vicar 7 F 293

10. (1) No proceedings for the recovery of compensation shall be maintainable before a Commissioner unless notice of the accident has been given, in the manner hereinafter provided, as soon as practicable after the happening thereof and before the workman has voluntarily left the employment in which he was injured, and unless the claim for compensation with respect to such accident has been instituted within six months of the occurrence of the accident or, in case of death, within six months of the death.

Provided that where the accident is caused by a disease in respect of which the provisions of the Act are applicable the accident shall be deemed to have occurred on the first of the days during which the workman was continuously absent from work in consequence of the disablement caused by the disease :

* 'Provided, further, that the want of or any defect or irregularity in a notice shall not be a bar to the maintenance of proceedings.—

(a) if the claim is made in respect of the death of a workman resulting from an accident which occurred in the premises of the employer or at any place where the workman at the time of the accident was working under the control of the employer or of any person employed by him and the workman died on such premises or at such place, or on any premises belonging to the employer, or died without having left the vicinity of the premises or place where the accident occurred, or

Provided, further that the Commissioner may admit and decide any claim to compensation in any case notwithstanding that the notice has not been given or the claim has not been instituted, in due time as provided in this subsection, if he is satisfied that the failure so to give the notice or institute the claim, as the case may be was due to sufficient cause

(2) Every such notice shall give the name and address of the person injured and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date on which the accident happened and shall be served on the employer or upon any one of several employers, or upon any person directly responsible to the employer for the management of any branch of the trade or business in which the injured workman was employed

(3) The Local Government may require that any prescribed class of employers shall maintain at their premises at which workmen are employed a notice book in the prescribed form, which shall be readily accessible at all reasonable times to any injured workman employed on the premises and to any person acting bona fide on his behalf

(4) A notice under this section may be served by delivering it at, or sending it by registered post addressed to the residence or any office or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served or where a notice book is maintained by entry in the notice book

Notes—This section corresponds to section 2 of the British Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 Particulars of an accident to a workman arising out of and in the course of his employment entered by the employer's manager in a book which the employers have provided him for that purpose in the presence of the workman by whom the particulars were given constitute a notice Stevens v Insole (1912) 1 K B 36 A house maid injured her knee She continued to receive her full wages for a year and seven months being ill for a good part of the time She was then discharged and brought proceedings for compensation She had made no claim for compensation because as the county Court Judge found she did not know of the Act of Parliament, Held that this was not a mistake or other reasonable cause for not making claim Judd v Metropolitan Asylums Board 5 B W C C 420, see also Egerion v Moore (1912) 2 K B 308

ACT NO IV OF 1938

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the business of Insurance

Received the assent of the Governor General on the 26th February, 1938

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the business of insurance, It is hereby enacted as follows —

1. Short title and commencement.

India by external companies

"2 The marked increase in the volume of life insurance business and the development of other forms of insurance business in British India since 1912 soon suggested that more comprehensive legislation was needed. A Bill was prepared in 1925 to extend to other classes of insurance business the supervision already exercised over life insurance. The appointment in England almost simultaneously of a departmental committee presided over by Mr A C Clauson K C to report on the amendment of the Assurance Companies Act 1909 on which the Indian Act VI of 1912 had been largely based, decided the Government of India to postpone that Bill and await the legislation resulting from the Clauson enquiry. The enquiry however though completed in 1927,

"3 In 1935 the Government decided to proceed with the reform of Insurance law without waiting for the enactment of legislation in England. Mr S O Sen was placed on special duty to examine the material which had been collected concerning the amendment of company law in general and insurance law in particular. In 1936 the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act 1936 was passed. The project of revising the law of insurance was at once taken up. The small advisory committee of experts representing various interests was assembled in autumn of 1936 to consider in detail the various recommendations contained in Mr Sen's report. The Bill embodies the proposals which Government has decided to submit to the Legislature after consideration of Mr Sen's recommendations and the opinions of the advisory committee.

"4 The draft Bill includes in one enactment the subjects dealt with by the two separate Acts of 1912 but relegates the provisions relating to Provident Insurance Societies to a separate part. —Statement of Objects and Reasons

Scope and Object — It provides inter alia for the following matters. It increases the supervision exercised over all concerns transacting insurance business of whatever kind in British India whether these are indigenous concerns or external companies represented in India by branches or agencies and treats agents acting for Lloyd's underwriters on the same basis as such branches or agencies. Registration formerly unnecessary except for Provident Insurance Societies is proposed for general application and the principle of exacting deposits hitherto applied only to indigenous companies transacting life insurance business has been similarly extended. The amount of deposit has been increased with the object of more effectively discouraging the formation of companies inadequately financed and where the business of life insurance is to be carried on a minimum net sum of Rs 50 000 is required as working capital. Provision is made for full disclosure of the information required to ensure sound principles of finance and to ensure their maintenance. It also provides for the maintenance of external accounts and for the audit of the accounts of companies in which foreign capital can be checked. Certain restrictions are imposed on the investment of the funds of insurance companies, and external companies are required to keep a portion of their assets invested in Indian Government securities. The existing provisions of the law relating to winding up of insurance companies, and to the amalgamation and transfer of insurance business have been enlarged. Provisions have been inserted to regulate the assignment and transfer of policies of life insurance and in making of nominations. Power is given to companies to pay into Court monies due under a policy where there is difficulty in securing a proper discharge. It is proposed to prohibit the employment of managing agents in future, and to bring existing Managing Agencies to an early end. In order to secure fair treatment for Indian insurance companies operating in foreign countries power is taken to subject the nationals of a foreign country to any restrictions that are imposed in that country on Insurance Companies. Provisions are put forward arrived at by a Commission. These include administration of the Act and who will normally be the Governor of Provident Insurance Societies.

Provident Insurance Societies—"The provisions relating to Provident Insurance Societies subject these to much more effective supervision than has hitherto been exercised. The name adopted by any such society will indicate its status. Business on the dividing principle is prohibited so that societies dependent on this class of business will disappear. A minimum initial working capital is required, and the principle of deposits is applied. All schemes of insurance operated by a society are to be subjected to actuarial examination so that unsound schemes may be eliminated, and periodical actuarial investigation must be made into the financial condition of the society. Proper books of account must be maintained, and the accounts must be audited. Separate class of business and must be maintained and are further protected by a certain percentage of the other features of this Part. The provisions governing liquidation of insurance companies, is now to be

Minimum limits for annuities and other benefits secured by policies of insurance

(2) Nothing contained in this section shall apply to group policies, that is to say policies in respect of a group of persons engaged in the same occupation or kindred occupations under a single employer, for an aggregate sum of not less than rupees five thousand, under which an insurer pays or undertakes to pay a gross sum of rupees five hundred or less on an individual life

Notes — We have inserted a provision on the line of section 11 of the Indian Companies Act 1913 to guard against the registration of more than one insurer under the same name — Report of the Select Committee

Sub section (1) — The position at common law is that an insurer is liable to prevent another from using a particular name despite a disclaimer (a) fraud (b) property. (Cf. Warwick Tyre v. New Motor & General Insurance Co. (1911) 1 Ch. 49. He has a right to prevent a person taking or using a name which he has identified with his goods with the deliberate intention of stealing the goodwill of his business and he has a right to prevent another however innocently from depriving him of his goodwill including the benefit of any trade name he has succeeded in appropriating and making his own Bourn v Sim and Edger (1903) 1 Ch 211. In such cases damages will apparently be assumed Stiebel's Company Ltd v 51. The ground upon which the Court acts in protecting trade name was stated by James L J in Levy v Waller (1879) 10 Ch D at p 417 thus: "It should never be forgotten that in these cases the sole right to restrain any body from using any name he likes in the course of any business he chooses to carry on is a right in the nature of a trademark, that is to say a man has a right to say you must not use a name whether fictitious or real—you must not use a description whether true or not which is to represent or calculated to represent to the world that your business is my business and so by fraudulent misstatement deprive me of the profits of the business which would otherwise come to me. In the case of ordinary business name an individual plaintiff can only proceed on the ground that having established a business reputation under a particular name he has a right to restrain any one else from injuring his business by using that name. See also D. Boulay v Du Boulay (1869) 1 R & P C at p 441 where Lord Chelmsford said. The right to the exclusive use of a name in connection with a trade or business is familiar to our law and any person using that name after a relative right of this description has been acquired by another is considered to have been guilty of a fraud or at least of an invasion of another's right and renders himself liable to an action or he may be restrained from the use of the name by injunction."

The ground on which interference of the Court can be asked is that the use of the defendant company's name or its intended name is calculated to deceive and so to divert business from the plaintiff to the defendant or to occasion a confusion between the two businesses. Notes—This clause requires that there shall be a minimum working capital in case of life insurance concerns of Rs 50 000 —Notes on Clauses This provision has been made to prevent the formation of mushroom companies. This is essentially necessary not only to ensure working on sound progressive lines but also to prevent the premium income being resorted to from the very beginning for the purpose of meeting the expenses of organisation and management of the concerns —Sen's Report para 74

Provided that in the case of any insurer not being an insurer specified in sub-clause (a) (ii) or sub-clause (b) of clause (9) of section 2, and not being an insurer incorporated in or domiciled in the United Kingdom, the deposit shall be made in full before the application for registration is made

(6) No class of insurance business in addition to the class or classes in respect of which an insurer is already liable to make a deposit under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall be undertaken by the insurer until the deposit to which he is already liable has been made in full, and the additional deposit required in respect of the additional class of business or so much thereof as under the provisions of sub-section (3), (4) or (5) is to be made before the application for registration has also been made in full

(7) Securities already deposited with the Controller of Currency in compliance with the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912,* shall be transferred by him to the Reserve Bank of India and shall, to the extent of their market value on the day of the first deposit made in compliance with this Act, be deemed to be deposited under this Act in respect of the life insurance business of the insurer

Notes—No definitions have been given in the Act of life insurance, fire insurance, marine insurance or well as of accident and miscellaneous insurance. The framer of the Act observed: "Of the definitions included in Act VI of 1912 the definitions of life insurance business, policy of insurance on human life, policy holder and policy are omitted. No attempt has been made to define fire insurance business, marine insurance business, life insurance business or workmen's compensation insurance business although definitions of these are in 1925 Bill. It is not necessary to define these terms. We give below the definitions from the English Assurance Companies Act of 1909 which were reproduced in the Bill of 1925

Life Insurance business—Life insurance business means the issue of or the undertaking of liability under policy of assurance upon human life or the granting of annuities upon human life. Section 1 (a) of the English Assurance Companies Act of 1909 s. 2 (a) of the Indian Life Insurance Companies Act of 1912 and section 2 (a) of the Indian Insurance Bill of 1925. Fire Insurance business—"Fire insurance business" means the issue of or the underwriting of policies of insurance against loss by or incidental to fire Vida Assurance Companies v Royal, (1887) 12 Q B 513 It is not necessary that the risk be a fire risk, but it must be a risk which is required for fire insurance to be deemed to be a fire risk covered by ordinary marine insurance though referred to as such is excluded per Asbury J in United London and Scottish Insurance In re 84 L J Ch 544=(1915) 2 Ch 12 In the Court of Appeal Lord Cozens Hardy M R said "I do not see my way in this case to differ from the view taken by Mr Justice Asbury The case arises upon construction of the Assurance Companies Act, 1909 This is a very difficult Act to construe, and I had occasion to consider it in the Law Cor and General Insurance Corporation In re [82 L J Ch 467=(1913) 2 Ch 103], but the present case does not seem to me to present any serious difficulty Fire insurance business is defined in section 1, sub section (6) of the Act as the issue of or the undertaking of liability under policies of insurance against loss by or incidental to fire The policy in question here undoubtedly falls within that definition It is an insurance against loss by or incidental to fire of a vessel which on the Great Lakes in America or in dry Dock where it might be temporarily put for repairs The policy also includes salvage claims or losses by reason of general average Unless there was something in the Act beyond section 1 sub section (6), every ordinary Lloyd's policy would it seems to me or certainly might come within the meaning of fire insurance business because practically every Lloyd's policy really includes amongst other risks insured against that of fire These policies are however taken out of the Act by section 28 sub section (3), which provides that nothing in this Act shall apply to insurance business of any class other than one of the classes specified in section one of this Act and a policy shall not be deemed to be a policy of fire insurance by reason only that loss by fire is one of the various risks covered by the policy The policy in the present case is not however within the saving clause of this sub section This is not a policy of insurance of which fire is only one of the various risks covered but is a policy which is solely against loss by or incidental to fire, and the operative and effective clause is therefore section 1, sub section (b) "

Marine Insurance business — Marine Insurance business means the issue of, or the undertaking of liability under policies of insurance against loss or damage to any vessel or to goods wares merchandise or property of any kind in transit by water. Id s 2 (m) of the Insurance Companies Bill of 1925. But this definition also for obvious reason has not been included in the present Act. Marine Insurance contract has been thus defined in the English Marine Insurance Act of 1906. A contract of marine insurance is a contract whereby the insurer undertakes to indemnify the assured in manner and to the extent thereby agreed against marine losses that is to say, the loss incident to marine adventure. Id s 1 of the Marine Insurance Act of 1906. A policy in the form of a marine policy but not insuring against loss incident to a marine adventure is not within this definition. In re London County Commercial Re insurance office (1922) 2 Ch 67 68.

Accident Insurance business—Accident insurance business' is defined as the issue of or the undertaking of liability under policies of insurance upon the happening of personal accidents, whether fatal or not, disease or sickness or any class of personal accidents, disease or sickness [Insurance Companies Act 1903 s 1 (c)]. But this definition also for obvious reasons have not been adopted in the Indian Act

The reason for such deposits thus stated by Mr Sen in para 45 of his report. Complaints have been made for sometime past and the provisions for deposits in the case of Life Insurance Companies are much too moderate and that unless the amount of the deposit is substantially increased there is no chance of preventing mushroom companies from coming into existence and various suggestions have been made from time to time for the increasing of the amount of the initial deposit as also of the aggregate amount thereof. Whatever may be the popular point of view the Government has however in my opinion a very heavy responsibility in the matter. The Government has got to see in the first place that there is no provision made in the statute as to deposits which will by reason of the largeness of the amount have the effect of injuring sound companies which are working on a small capital.

insurance though referred to as such is excluded. Per Astbury J in United London and Scottish Insurance Insre, 84 L J Ch 544- (1915) 2 Ch 12 In the Court of Appeal Lord Cozens Hardy M R said "I do not see my way in this case to differ from the view taken by Mr Justice Astbury The case arises upon construction of the Assurance Companies Act, 1909 This is a very difficult Act to construe, and I had occasion to consider it in the Law Cor and General Insurance Corporation, Insre [82 L J Ch 467- (1913) 2 Ch 103], but the present case does not seem to me to present any serious difficulty. Fire insurance business is defined in section 1, sub section (6) of the Act as 'the issue of, or the undertaking of liability under, policies of insurance against loss by or incidental to fire' The policy in question here undoubtedly falls within that definition. It is an insurance against fire which on the Great Lakes in America or in the Channel is put for repairs. The policy also includes salvage and expense. Unless there was something in the Act which excluded it, it seems to me to be the meaning of fire insurance business because it includes, amongst other risks insured against that taken out of the Act by section 28, sub section (1) of the Act shall apply to assurance business of any class or kind in section one of this Act and a policy shall not be deemed to be a policy of fire insurance by reason only that loss by fire is one of the various risks covered by the policy, within the saving clause of this section which fire is only one of the various risks covered by the policy, and sub section (b) "

Marine Insurance business — Marine Insurance business means the issue of or the undertaking of liability under policies of insurance against loss or damage to any vessel or to goods wares merchandise or property of any kind in transit by water vide s 2 (1) of the Insurance Companies Bill of 1925. But this definition also for obvious reason has not been included in the present Act. Marine Insurance contract has been thus defined in the English Marine Insurance Act of 1906. A contract of marine insurance is a contract whereby the insurer undertakes to indemnify the assured in manner and to the extent thereby agreed against marine losses that is to say the loss incident to marine adventure vide s 1 of the Marine Insurance Act of 1906. A policy in the form of a marine policy but not insuring against loss incident to a marine adventure is not within this definition. In re London County Commercial Re insurance office (1922) 2 Ch 67 68.

Accident Insurance business — Accident insurance business is defined as the issue of or the undertaking of liability under policies of insurance upon the happening of personal accidents whether fatal or not disease or sickness or any class of personal accidents disease or sickness [Insurance Companies Act 1909 s 1 (c)]. But this definition also for obvious reasons have not been adopted in the Indian Act.

Sub section (1) fixes the amount of the deposit required for the four classes of insurance business. Sub section (3) provides for payment by instalments—Statement of Objects and Reasons. The reason for such deposits thus stated by Mr Sin in para 45 of his report. Complaints have been made for sometime past and the provisions for deposits in the case of Life Insurance Companies are much too moderate and that unless the amount of the deposit is substantially increased there is no change of preventing mushroom companies from coming into existence and various suggestions have been made from time to time for the increasing of the amount of the initial deposit as also of the aggregate amount thereof. Whatever may be the popular point of view the Government has however in my opinion a very heavy responsibility in the matter. The Government has got to see in the first place that there is no provisions made in the statute as to deposits which will by reason of the largeness of the amount have the effect of injuring sound companies which are working on a small capital.

Sub section (1) — We consider having regard to the special nature of their business and to the relatively small volume of that business transacted in India that there should be one deposit only for each class of business transacted by all insurers in India who work in conjunction with Lloyd's but that deposit should be somewhat larger than the deposit made by an ordinary insurer. To give effect to this decision we have taken the been done any insurer working under a contract with Lloyd's to transact business of that class. The enlargement of the classes of security which may be utilized in making deposits has been referred to in connection with definition (3) of section 2. We have increased the deposit for miscellaneous insurance to the same figure as the deposits required for fire and marine insurance and we have provided that the deposit must be made at an office in India of the Reserve Bank and not in London. —Report of the Select Committee

Sub section (3) — We consider that while the provisions contained in sub clause (2) may be more properly applied to existing insurers other than those doing life insurance business where the business of life insurance is involved a somewhat extended period on more easy terms should be allowed. We have accordingly provided in the new sub clause (4) for payment in seven instalments beginning with the payment of one fourth of the amount due except where the insurer is a foreign company in which case we consider and have provided in the new sub clause (5) that the deposits should be made in two instalments almost in the case of existing companies. Similarly we have provided by our addition to sub section (5) that foreign companies starting business after this legislation was set on foot shall make the deposit in full before application of registration. —Report of the Select Committee

Sub section (6) — We have revised the wording to make it perfectly clear that the provisions as to payment by instalments apply to additional deposits is returnable under the Act. —Report of the Select Committee

Sub section (8) — We consider that where cash is deposited by the insurer he should have the right to receive cash of the same amount if at any time his deposits is returnable under the Act. —Report of the Select Committee

Sub section (9) — It was also been made in the sub section for the substitution of securities which may be lodged by the Insurance Company with the Reserve Bank under of securities by another should any company find it necessary to do so — See Report para 73

8 (1) Any deposit made under section 7 shall be deemed to be part of the assets of the insurer but shall not be susceptible of any assignment or charge, nor shall it be available for the discharge of any liability of the insurer other than liabilities arising out of policies of insurance issued by the insurer so long as any such liabilities remain undischarged, nor shall it be liable to attachment in execution of any decree except a decree obtained by a policy-holder of the insurer in respect of a debt due upon a policy which debt the policy-holder has failed to realise in any other way

(2) Where a deposit is made in respect of life insurance business the deposit made in respect thereof shall not be available for the discharge of any liability of the insurer other than liabilities arising out of policies of life insurance issued by the insurer

... saving them for in (2) provides that only for liabilities that each of the to policies of its own class. But the Select Committee in consider that the reservation of deposits for with business of the class in respect of only to life insurance business — Report section 8 to protect deposit from attach creditor of the company.

9 Where an insurer has ceased to carry on in British India any class of insurance business in respect of which a deposit has been made under section 7 and his liabilities in British India in respect of business of that class have been satisfied or are otherwise provided for, the Court may, on the application of the insurer, order the return to the insurer of so much of the deposit as does not relate to the classes of insurance, if any, which he continues to carry on

Notes — Act VI of 1912 made no specific provision for the return of deposits. This was however included in the 1925 Bill. This section reproduces clause 10 of the Bill of 1925

10 (1) Where the insurer carries on business of more than one of the classes specified in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of sub-section (1) of section 7, he shall keep a separate account of all receipts and payments in respect of each such class of insurance business

(2) Where the insurer carries on the business of life insurance, the excess of receipts over payments in respect of such business shall be carried to and shall form a separate fund to be called the life insurance fund and the deposit made by the insurer in respect of life insurance business shall be deemed to be part of such fund

(3) The life insurance fund shall be as absolutely the security of the life policy-holders as though it belonged to an insurer carrying on no other business than life insurance business and shall not be liable for any contracts of the insurer for which it would not have been liable had the business of the insurer been only that of life insurance and shall not be applied directly or indirectly save as provided in section 49 for any purposes other than those of life insurance

Notes — Separate assets are required to be kept only in respect of life insurance business but separate accounts are required for each of the four main clauses into which insurance business is divided. Sub clauses (2) and (3) reproduce sections 5 and 11 of the Act VI of 1912 — Notes on Clauses. Similar provision is found in the English Assurance Companies Act of 1909 (vide s 3). Separate fund—As regards separate fund vide In re Wilson & Co, (1905) 1 Ch 551

11 (1) Every insurer, in the case of an insurer specified in sub-clause (a) (ii) or sub-clause (b) of clause Accounts and balance sheet. (9) of section 2 in respect of all insurance business transacted by him, and in the case of any other insurer in respect of the insurance business transacted by him in India, shall at the expiration of each calendar year prepare with reference to that year—

(a) in accordance with the regulations contained in Part I of the First Schedule, a balance-sheet in the form set forth in Part II of that Schedule,

(b) in accordance with the regulations contained in Part I of the Second Schedule, a profit and loss account in the forms set forth in Part II of that Schedule, except where the insurer carries on business of one class only of the classes specified in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) of section 7 and no other business,

(c) in respect of each class of insurance business carried on by him in accordance with the regulations contained in Part I of the Third Schedule, a revenue account in the form or forms set forth in Part II of that Schedule applicable to that class of insurance business

(2) Unless the insurer is a company to which the Indian Companies Act, 1913* applies, the accounts and statements referred to in sub section (1) shall be signed by the insurer, or in the case of a company by the chairman, if any, and two directors and the principal officer of the company, or in the case of a firm by two partners of the firm, and shall be accompanied by a statement containing the names and descriptions of the persons in charge of the management of the business during the period to which such accounts and statements refer and by a report by such persons on the affairs of the business during that period

(3) Where an insurer carrying on the business of insurance at the commencement of this Act has prepared the balance-sheet and accounts required by the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912,† or has based his accounts upon the financial and not the calendar year, the provisions of this section shall, if the Central Government so directs in any case, apply until the 31st day of December, 1939, as if in sub-section (1) references to the calendar year were references to the financial year.

Notes—This section is intended to require that an Indian insurer shall in respect of all business and a non Indian insurer including a Lloyd's agent shall in respect of business transacted in India prepare—

(a) a balance sheet

(b) a profit and loss account whenever he confines any two or more of the business of life fire and marine insurance and even if he only does the single business of miscellaneous insurance. The provision relating to miscellaneous business has been made because in the case of miscellaneous insurance a profit and loss account is necessary to enable the gain or loss on the different sub-clauses included in this class to be ascertained as this may not be able to be done from the revenue account for miscellaneous insurance and calendar year as the year of account since sub-clause (1) now makes the latter the year of account.

This clause read with Schedules I to III, incorporates to Second Third and Fourth Schedules of the Clauseon Bill with the modifications necessary to adapt them to Indian conditions.

The effect of sub-clause (1) (d) is to secure that nearly all the details specified in section 7 (e) of Act VI of 1912 have to be supplied with the Revenue Account (see Regulation 6 of Part I of the Third Schedule) — Statement of Objects and Reasons The Select Committee in their report says "We consider that the accounts here dealt with should cover not only business transacted in British India but in Indian States as well."

12. The balance-sheet, profit and loss account, revenue account and profit and loss appropriation account of every insurer, in the case of an insurer specified in sub-clause (a) (ii) or sub-clause (b) of clause (9) of section 2 in respect of all insurance business transacted by him, and in the case of any other insurer in respect of the insurance business transacted by him in India, shall, unless they are subject to audit under the Indian Companies Act, 1913,* be audited annually by an auditor, and the auditor shall in the audit of all such accounts have the powers of, exercise the functions vested in, and discharge the duties and be subject to the liabilities and penalties imposed on, auditors of companies by section 145 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913*.

Notes—Act VI of 1912 provides for the audit in such a manner as may be prescribed, of the accounts of life insurance companies and the Indian Companies Act requires companies, subject to that Act to undergo audit. This section provides for the general audit of the accounts of insurers in British India under the Indian Companies Act requiring the section 145 of the

which the shareholders have had an opportunity of stating whether or not they desire that the auditors should continue to act as such Guff and another (1912) 1 Ch 440 = 81 L T 41 100. His judgment said "Of interlocutory application year when the audit would dispute are mainly points sufficiently ascertained, I question is, are the points which they assert? The to perform certain duties of the Act of 1908. They include the balance sheet laid before the company in such report to state (inter alia) whether in it referred to therein properly or not. — company's affairs as shown by letter of these statutory requirements with the figures in the balance sheet but no one would suggest that the duty of the auditors is limited to ascertaining that the entries in the books of the company are correctly transcribed or summarised in the balance sheet. As was pointed out by the Court of Appeal, he is bound to enquire and to take trouble to ascertain whether the books themselves show the company's true position. Such investigation must be of books, invoices, and documents books originate. In order to clothed with statutory powers contemplates the possibility of or the company to remove him during this year of office.

"In these circumstances what is the position? The auditors are bound to discharge their duties, and in so doing are entitled to neglect and exercise the statutory powers of competency and negligence afford or is there any substance in the an opportunity of ascertaining brought against them the no such action pending he auditors claim to have I think, therefore that 'ory order in the terms of Appellate Court reversed the order.

Farnwell L J in delivering the judgment of the Appellate Court observed. "In my opinion the order of Mr T of a very usual nature was enabled to commit the company, having auditors by not properly having inspected the books the company would hold the auditors liable for any loss they might sustain thereby. The directors being exceedingly dissatisfied with the auditors for having failed to inspect these books, told them that they were not to act as auditors of the company any longer.

"As soon as they received notice of the instant them and before anything company's books. Prima facie ing to get discovery in an action before the issue of the writ—which er put their claim on the ground the interests of the company, oh an auditor be a convicted felon, as a right to see the books is statutory and cannot by any possibility be taken away an extravagant claim, but even if it tiffs here. It is one thing to show that another thing to say that the Court in id to grant a mandatory injunction in tly clear that the Court is not bound relating to the interval management of the company, it has always been the practice of the Court so far as my experience goes, to direct that a meeting of the shareholders be summoned for the purpose of ascertaining what their wishes are. I cannot assent to the contention of the Council for the plaintiffs that the auditors in such matters as they are the supreme autocrats over all the other partners concerned. They are servants of the company, appointed by the company, and if the company does not desire them to act no Court will by mandatory injunction, force them upon it. If in the present case the company in general meeting resolves that having regard to the non inspection of these counterfool receipt books during several years the plaintiffs should not continue to act as auditors, I cannot see how any Court could possibly, by way of injunction, compel specific performance of this contract of service as auditors.

If on the other hand the shareholders do reject them the Court ought not to interfere with their wishes. In Hambro & Co v Smith, [(1892) 41 Ch D 462] in which under a contract entered into between a company and the vendors of a brewery the it was held by the Court as much as the shareholders' right for that purpose resolved not to interfere to force him on the company.

I find no difficulty in section 113 of the Act of 1908 which provides that the auditors shall make a report to the shareholders on the accounts examined by them and on every balance sheet laid before the company during their tenure of office. That provision means that the auditors shall make that report as auditors and as incident to their performance of their duties as auditors. If whether rightly or wrongly they have been dismissed or excluded in et armis by the company no body can possibly blame them for not having in this Court is considered false.

Duties of auditors.—In majority of cases the articles contain directions with reference to the duties of the auditors and in such cases the auditors are bound to comply with such requirement. Kingsdon Cotton Mill Co, (No 2) (1896) 2 Ch 279. In the above case at page 284, Lindley L J said: Auditors are in my opinion bound to see what exceptional duties if any are cast upon them by the articles of the company whose accounts they are called upon to audit. Ignorance of the articles and of the exceptional duties imposed by them would not afford any legal justification for not observing them. In Republic of Bolivia etc (1914) 1 Ch 183—63 L J Ch 235 Astbury J said: In support of the liquidator's contention on the above facts it is alleged that qua company finance of which they profess to be experts auditors must at least make themselves acquainted with the general features of such legal regulations as govern the methods and restrictions as to limited companies' accounts and finance and that the accounts as audited by them must correspond with the reality in law of the company's financial position, and that damages must be assumed to have resulted in this case from its not having been pointed out in time that the directors were liable to refund these moneys.

Now there are some legal matters which an auditor must obviously know, as there are others which it is equally obvious he could not be held responsible for not knowing, and it may not always be easy to say in which category any particular case falls. I think that the auditors of a limited company are bound to know or make themselves acquainted with their duties under the articles of the company whose accounts they in forma speaking of auditors of any transaction appearing by text writer of great determine whether the acts being, on the other hand, to Leeds Estate v Shephard, Stirling said: It was in my view merely to the task of verifying the arithmetical accuracy of the balance-sheet but to enquire into its substantial accuracy, and to ascertain that it contained the particulars specified in the Articles of Association (and consequently a proper income and expenditure account) and was properly drawn up so as to contain a true and correct representation of the state of the company's affairs. And the learned Judge referring to the fact that the auditor who knew of the company's articles did not look at them stated that this fact afforded some evidence as to the degree of care exercised by them. This case established that if as the natural consequence of an auditor's breach of duty payments are made which are a misapplication of the company's funds the auditors are responsible. [His Lordship then referred to (1896) 2 Ch at p 261 = 65 L J Ch at p 675 however against the notion that an auditor is bound to be suspicious as distinguished from reasonably careful. But after holding that made by the manager who had no y he contrasted this with a cashier's could not be reasonably taken by an Imperial Corporation (1900) 1 Q B at p 21 = 69 L J Q B at page 51 Lord Russell of Killowen speaking of the duty of an auditor of an urban sanita to go further than that that there are not amongst the duty of the authority or contrary to the duty of the authority or in any other way illegal or improper. If he discovers that any such improper or illegal payments appear to have been made his duty will certainly be to make it public by report to the authority itself and the burgesses who create that authority.

Now applying these principles as best as I can to the facts of this case I have respondents failed in their payments were under the first audited balance sheet specially having regard to the fact that the balance sheet states in terms for what the sums in question were paid.

In City Equitable Fire Insurance Co Limited in re (1925) 1 Ch 407, Romer J said That it is the duty of a company's auditor in general to satisfy himself that the securities of the company in fact exist and are in safe custody cannot I think be gainsaid. If authority for the proposition be required it may be found in the passage from Lindley L J's judgment in the London and General Bank Case which has

after the event and say that you had discovered it would be it has been well said that an his work with suspicion or with He is a watch dog but not a r in Kington Cotton Mill Co aside the position is more get L J who said that the The Aston Cotton Mill case is important because expansion is given to those rather epigrammatic phrases Lindley L J says (1896) 3 Ch at p 287. It is not sufficient to say that the frauds must have been detected if the entries in the books had been put together in a way which never occurred to anyone before suspicion was aroused. The question is whether present it to the members. Ibid.

Duty of auditor is not to give advice to shareholders or directors — It is no part of an auditor's duty, said Indley L J in In re, London General Bank, (1895) 1 Ch. 678 at page 681, "to give advice, either to directors or to shareholders. It is nothing to him do. An auditor has nothing to do with the p or without accuracy. It is nothing to him conducted prudently, profitably or unprofitably are properly or improperly declared provid would be worse than an idle farce. Assuming the books to be so kept as to show the true position of a company, the auditor has to frame a balance sheet shewing that position according to the books and to certify that the balance sheet presented is correct in that case. But his first duty is to examine the books, not merely for the purpose of ascertaining what they do show, but also for the purpose of satisfying himself that they show the true financial position of the company. This is quite in accordance with the decision of Stirling J in Leeds Estate Building and Investment Co v Shepherd, (86 Ch D 802). An auditor, however, is not bound to do more than exercise reasonable care and skill in making inquiries and investigations. He is not an insurer, he does not guarantee that the books do correctly shew the true position of the company's affairs, he does not even guarantee that his balance sheet is accurate according to the books of the company. If he did, he would be responsible for error on his part, even if he were himself deceived without any want of reasonable care on his part, say, by the fraudulent concealment of a book from the audit true, and is true case of Sethna v Hemmingway reported in 38 II 618 the delivery of a banker's receipt with a letter to the bank directing payment was held to be only a pro order

'170 In England to obviate such difficulties in the case of assignments of policies the Legislature has in the Policies of Assurance Act 1357, specified the form which or the equivalent of which is to be used In my opinion a similar provision should be made in India to obviate difficulties

171 Then again under the Transfer of Property Act in order to bind the company express notice of a transfer has to be given Many cases occur in which notices are not given to the insurance companies in these cases they are often put not only to expenses but also to difficulties specially if there is more than one claimant and the assignment or transfer is challenged

"172 In order to prevent the possibility of any such difficulty in matters relating to or arising out of assignment of policies the Policies of Assurance Act has provided that no assignee or other person claiming under him will be entitled to sue the company until a written notice of that date and the purport of the assignment has been given to the company To ensure promptness in the matter of these notices the Act has also provided that the date on which will regulate the priority as between those made to the Government of India by a v doing business in India that provision Assurance Act of 1867 should be made in

adoption of the English provisions in protection of the insurance companies provisions on the lines of the English Act

(1) That a transfer or an assignment of a policy of life insurance absolutely by way of gift or otherwise or for the purpose of securing an existing or a future debt must be made either by endorsing on the back of the policy or by a separate instrument to be executed by the insured in the words or to the following effect viz —

I, A B of in consideration of do hereby assign unto C D of his Executors Administrators and Assignees the (written) policy of assurance granted etc., (here describe the policy)

In witness etc

(2) That every such endorsement or instrument must be signed by the transferor assignor or his duly authorised agent and must be attested by at least one witness

(3) That the transfer or assignment shall be complete and effectual upon the execution of such endorsement or instrument but shall not confer on the transferee or assignee therein named his executors administrators or assignees, any right to sue for the amount of such policy or the monies assured or secured thereby until the written notice of the transfer or assignment shall have been given to the company liable under such policy at their principal place of business

(4) That every company to whom notice shall have been given of any transfer or assignment of any policy under which they are liable shall enter the fact thereof in the register of policies to be kept in terms of the Act wherein shall be mentioned the date of the assignment and the name of the transferee or assignee

(5) That every transferee or assignee giving notice to a company of the assignment shall be entitled upon payment of a fee not exceeding Re 1 to an acknowledgment in writing from the company of the receipt of such notice and every such written as made hereafter the procedure applicable to the winding up of 100 Circumstances under which a company can be wound up by Court — Besides what is provided for in the Indian Companies Act the Act should also provide for a petition being presented by a policy holder or a shareholder provided he satisfies the Court that there is a prima facie case. Provisions must also be made for the Superintendent to present a petition for the winding up of an insurance company in certain cases e.g. default in complying with the provisions of the statute and so on. — See Report para graphs 149 and 150

Three kinds of winding up — Insurance companies which have been incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VII of 1913 may be wound up under that Act either (i) by the Court (ii) voluntarily or (iii) subject to the supervision of the Court. But voluntary winding up of an insurance company must be subject to the provisions of s. 54 (iii) a)

Sub section (1) — Section 162 of the Indian Companies Act of 1913 lays down the circumstances under which a company registered under the Indian Companies Act may be wound up by Court. Under those circumstances an insurance company registered under the Indian Companies Act may also be wound up by Court. But the Court should exercise power under that section only on strong grounds. 86 Ind Cas 135 48 B 489 see also 89 B 16 31 P R 1914 30 B 47 39 Ind Cas 570 30 A 331. In the absence of fraud in the conception of a company or where it is not one whose substratum is gone the mere fact that the applicants apprehend a loss from a further working is no ground for winding up the company under that section. 30 A 331 = 15 A L J 193 = 39 Ind Cas 570. The power to wind up a company should not be used unless there is very strong ground for it because the Indian companies are governed by a majority of their own members and where there is a domestic tribunal with powers to decide upon a question it should if possible be left to the domestic tribunal. Ibid see also 59 Ind Cas 524 = 18 Bur L T 51. When winding up is just and equitable—A company may be wound up by the Court if it is of opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up [Section 162 clause VI of the Indian Companies Act 1913] No general rule can be laid down as to the nature of the circumstances which have to be borne in mind in considering whether the case comes within the phrase just and equitable for the purpose of winding up The decisive question must be the question whether at the date of the presentation of the winding up petition there is any reasonable hope that the object of trading at a profit with a view to which the company is framed, can be attained Davis & Co v Brunswick 161 Ind Cas 539-A I R 1936 P C 114 (P C) There is obviously a great difference between a question of positive fact such as the pecuniary position of a trading company at a particular date and a question of the prospects of such a company in the future a matter which must depend on all sorts of views as to the state of world trade the confidence of the public, the price at which articles can be sold a matter which depends very largely upon the number of such sales and infinity of other considerations very difficult either to summarise or to define It is not the function of a Court to determine such a matter on its own views as to probable success or failure but to form the best opinion it can upon the evidence given by persons with a practical knowledge of the trade in question and the local conditions where these a limited concern was leased to a company for recovering the dividends that the company should be wound up 240-129 Ind Cas 872-58 M 28-52 M 783 Subapathy v Subapathy 48 M 448 The reason in clause (6) is not necessarily ejusdem generis with reasons given in clauses (1) to (5) 48 M 448-80 Ind Cas 185

Act, 1913,* an insurance company shall not be wound up voluntarily except for the purpose of effecting an amalgamation or a re-construction of the company, or on the ground that by reason of its liabilities it cannot continue its business

Notes on Clauses

55 (1) In the winding up of an insurance company or in the insolvency of any other insurer the value of the assets and the liabilities of the insurer shall be ascertained in such manner and upon such basis as the liquidator or receiver in insolvency thinks fit, subject, so far as

applicable, to the rule contained in the Sixth Schedule and to any directions which may be given by the Court

(2) For the purposes of any reduction by the Court of the amount of the contracts of any insurance company the value of the assets and liabilities of the company and all claims in respect of policies issued by it shall be ascertained in such manner and upon such basis as the Court thinks proper having regard to the rule aforesaid

(3) The rule in the Sixth Schedule shall be of the same force and may be repealed, altered or amended as if it were a rule made in pursuance of section 246 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913* and rules may be made under that section for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act with respect to the winding up of insurance companies

Notes—Section 55 is based on paragraph 158 of Mr Sen's Report. Mr Sen in paragraph 158 of his report says: "In the matter of liabilities the liquidator should in ascertaining the same observe the rules laid down by the Clauson Committee in their report as to valuation of liabilities. The provisions should be on a line with those contained in section 16 of the draft Bill submitted with their report and the rules enumerated in Schedule VI of the said draft Bill as far as practicable."

56 (1) In the winding up of an insurance company and in the insolvency of any other insurer the value of the assets and the liabilities of the insurer in respect of life insurance business shall be ascertained separately from the value of any other assets or any other liabilities of the insurer and no such assets shall be applied to the discharge of any liabilities other than those in respect of life insurance business except in so far as those assets exceed the liabilities in respect of life insurance business

(2) In the winding up of an insurance company carrying on the business of life insurance or in the insolvency of any other insurer carrying on such business where any proportion of the profits of the insurer was before the commencement of the winding up or insolvency allocated to policy-holders, if when the assets and liabilities of the insurer have been ascertained there is found to be a surplus of assets over liabilities (hereinafter referred to as a prima facie surplus) there shall be added to the liabilities of the insurer in respect of the life insurance business an amount equal to such proportion of the prima facie surplus as is equivalent to such proportion of the profits allocated to shareholders and policy-holders as was allocated to policy-holders during the ten years immediately preceding the commencement of the winding up and the assets of the insurer shall be deemed to exceed his liabilities only in so far as those assets exceed those liabilities after such addition

(a) if in any case there has been no such allocation or if it appears to the Court that by reason of special circumstances it would be inequitable that the amount to be added to the liabilities of the insurer in respect of the life insurance business should be an amount equal to such proportion as aforesaid, the amount to be so added shall be such amount as the Court may direct, and

(b) for the purpose of the application of this sub-section to any case where before the commencement of the winding up or insolvency a proportion of such profits as aforesaid of a branch only of the life insurance business in question has been allocated to policy-holders, the value of the assets and liabilities of the insurer in respect of that branch shall be separately ascertained in like manner as the value of his assets and liabilities in respect of the life insurance business was ascertained, and the surplus so found, if any, of assets over liabilities shall, for the purpose of determining the amount to be added to the liabilities of the insurer in respect of the life insurance business be deemed to be the prima facie surplus

Notes — This section reproduces clause 17 of the Clouston Bill sub clause (2) which was already put in Act 11 of 1912 as section 24 with the omission of references to continuous disability business and capital redemption business and the omission of clause (b) of the proviso — See also Clauses In all clause (1) to the proviso the Select Committee of 1912. We have inserted clause (b) of the proviso contained in sub clause (2) of clause 17 of the Clouston Bill on which this clause is founded — Report of the Select Committee

57 (1) Where the insurance business or any part of the insurance business of an insurance company has been transferred to another insurance company under an arrangement in pursuance of which the first mentioned company (in this section referred to as the secondary company) or the creditors thereof has or have claims against the company to which such transfer was made (in this section referred to as the principal company) then if the principal company is being wound up by or under the supervision of the Court, the Court shall (subject as hereinafter mentioned) order the secondary company to be wound up in conjunction with the principal company and may by the same or any subsequent order appoint the same person to be liquidator for the two companies and make provision for such other matters as may seem to the Court necessary with a view to the companies being wound up as if they were one company

(2) The commencement of the winding up of the principal company shall, save as otherwise ordered by the Court be the commencement of the winding up of the secondary company

(3) In adjusting the rights and liabilities of the members of the several companies among themselves the Court shall have regard to the constitution of the companies and to the arrangements entered into between the companies in the same manner as the Court has regard to the rights and liabilities of different classes of contributories in the case of the winding up of a single company or as near thereto as circumstances admit

(4) Where any company alleged to be secondary is not in process of being wound up at the same time as the principal company to which it is alleged to be secondary the Court shall not direct the secondary company to be wound up unless after hearing all objections (if any) that may be urged by or on behalf of the company against its being wound up the Court is of opinion that the company is secondary to the principal company and that the winding up of the company in conjunction with the principal company is just and equitable

(5) An application may be made in relation to the winding up of any secondary company in conjunction with the principal company by any creditor of, or person interested in the principal or secondary company

(6) Where a company stands in the relation of a principal company to one insurance company and in the relation of a secondary company to some other insurance company or where there are several insurance companies standing in the relation of secondary companies to one principal company, the Court may deal with any number of such companies together or in separate groups as it thinks most expedient upon the principles laid down in this section

Notes—This section is taken from section 23 of Act VI of 1912 which again was based on s 16 of the English Assurance Companies Act of 1909. In Lancashire Plate Glass

insurance does not amount to a transfer of insurance business so as to constitute a company a subsidiary company and the other a principal company within s 16 of the Assurance Companies Act 1909

58 (1) If at any time it appears expedient that the affairs of an insurance company in respect of any class of business comprised in the undertaking of the company should be wound up but that any other class of business comprised in the undertaking should continue to be carried on by the company or be transferred to another insurer a scheme for such purposes may be prepared and submitted for confirmation of the Court in accordance with the provisions of this Act

Schemes for partial winding up of insurance companies

(2) Any scheme prepared under this section shall provide for the allocation and distribution of the assets and liabilities of the company between any classes of business affected (including the allocation of any surplus assets which may arise on the proposed winding up) for any future rights of every class of policy-holders in respect of their policies and for the manner of winding up any of the affairs of the company which are proposed to be wound up and may contain provisions for altering the memorandum of the company with respect to its objects and such further provisions as may be expedient for giving effect to the scheme

(3) The provisions of this Act relating to the valuation of liabilities and to the application of surplus or insolvency shall apply to a company in accordance with the scheme under this section in like manner as they apply in the winding up of an insurance company under this section may apply with the provisions of the Indian Companies Act 1913 relating to the winding up of companies

(4) An order of the Court confirming a scheme under this section whereby the memorandum of a company is altered with respect to its object shall as respects the alteration have effect as if it were an order confirmed under section 12 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913,* and the provisions of sections 15 and 16 of that Act shall apply accordingly

is quite possible to carry on the business of that company in particular classes while it would be desirable to wind up the business relating to others. There is no provision in the existing Act for partial winding up and this difficulty was noticed by the Clauson Committee, who made a very excellent suggestion for avoiding difficulties of this nature and to provide for winding up of portions of a company's business.

59. In the winding up of an insurance company and in the insolvency of any other insurer the liquidator or assignee as the case may be shall apply to the Court for an order for the return of the deposit made by the company under section 7 and the Court shall on such application order a return of the deposit subject to such terms and conditions as it shall direct

60 In the winding up of an insurance company for the purposes of a cash distribution of the assets and in the insolvency of any other insurer the liquidator or assignee as the case may be in the case of all persons appearing by the books of the company or other insurer to be entitled to or interested in the policies granted by the company or other insurer shall ascertain the value of the liability of the company or other insurer to each such person and shall give notice of such value to those persons in such manner as the Court may direct and any person to whom notice is so given shall be bound by the value so ascertained unless he gives notice of his intention to dispute such value in such manner and within such time as may be specified by a rule or order of the Court

Notes—This section reproduces clause 53 of 1925 Bill and corresponds to the rule in Part II of the Seventh Schedule of the Clauson Bill—Notes on Clauses

61 (1) Where an insurance company is in liquidation or any other insurer is insolvent the Court may make an order reducing the amount of the insurance contracts of the company or other insurer upon such terms and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks just

(2) Where a company carrying on the business of life insurance has been proved to be insolvent, the Court may if it thinks fit in place of making a winding up order reduce the amount of the insurance contracts of the company upon such terms and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit

(3) Application for an order under this section may be made either by the liquidator or by or on behalf of the company or by a policy-holder, or by the Superintendent of Insurance and the Superintendent of Insurance and any person whom the Court thinks likely to be affected shall be entitled to be heard on any such application

Sen's Report and also on clause 26 of Act VI of 1912 clauses of insurance sub-section 155 of the Insurance Companies Act, 1909. Mr Sen in paragraph 155 of the Court goes on to say that under the Indian Companies Act in matters of winding up of companies it is necessary, having regard to the special nature of insurance business to give special powers to the Court to reduce the amounts of the insurance contracts entered into by the company which is insolvent. He then goes on to say that the Court may alter any in any in to do with the provision.

(a) The Court in the case of a life insurance company which has been proved to be insolvent may if it thinks fit in place of making a winding up order reduce the amount of the contracts of the life insurance company upon such terms and subject to such conditions as it thinks just.

(b) Where an insurance company is in liquidation the Court may make an order reducing the amount of the insurance contracts of the company upon such terms and subject to such condition as the Court thinks just.

The Act should also provide that an application for such an order may be made either by (a) the liquidator or (b) by any person whether a member or a policy holder who is interested in the company and that any person likely to be affected by such an order will be entitled to be heard on the hearing of such an application. Under section 18 of the English Assurance Companies Act, 1909 the Court in the case of insurance company which has been proved to be insolvent may if it thinks fit reduce the amount of the contracts of the company upon such conditions as it thinks just. A scheme under this section may be made even after the discharge of the liquidator. R. D. B. v. Mutual Life Assurance Society, 1914 1 Ch. 40. The Court has also in the case of the British Indian Assurance (1905) 2 Ch. 40.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO EXTERNAL COMPANIES

Power of Central Government to impose reciprocal disabilities on non Indian companies in which an insurer carrying on insurance business in British India is constituted, incorporated or domiciled, insurance companies incorporated in British India are required as a condition of carrying on insurance business in that country to comply with any special requirement whether as to the keeping of deposits or assets in that country or otherwise which is not imposed upon insurers of that country under this Act, the Central Government shall if satisfied of the existence of such special requirement, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that the same requirement, or requirements as similar thereto as may be, shall be imposed upon insurers of that country as a condition of carrying on the business of insurance in British India.

Notes—This section taken with the provisions of section 3(f) of the Act supplies the means of enforcing reciprocity in the treatment of Indian insurance companies abroad

63 Every insurer, having his principal place of business or domicile outside British India, who establishes a place of business within British India, or appoints a representative in British India with the object of obtaining insurance business, shall, within three months from the establishment of such place of business or the appointment of such agent, file with the Superintendent of Insurance—

(a) a certified copy of the charter, statutes, deed of settlement or memorandum and articles or other instrument constituting or defining the constitution of the insurer, and, if the instrument is not written in the English language, a certified translation thereof,

(b) a list of the directors, if the insurer is a company,

(c) the name and address of some one or more persons resident in British India authorised to accept on behalf of the insurer service of process and any notice required to be served on the insurer, together with a copy of the power of attorney granted to him

(d) the full address of the principal office of the insurer in British India,

(e) a statement of the classes of insurance business to be carried on by the insurer, and

(f) a statement verified by an affidavit setting forth the special requirements, if any, of the nature specified in section 62 imposed in the country of origin of the insurer on Indian nationals, and, in the event of any alteration being made in the address of the principal office or in the classes of business to be carried on in any instrument here referred to or in the name of any of the persons here referred to, or in the matters specified in clause (f) above the company shall forthwith furnish to the Superintendent of Insurance particulars of such alteration

Business within British India—It does not mean that the insurer has its own premises in India, but that it has a place of business in India. In the case of Colonial Mutual Insurance Co. Ltd. (L. R. 100 (1902) 1 K. B. 312) it was held that when it has its own premises in India, it is doing business within British India. In the case of La Boiurgonque [(1899) p. 1 (1899) A. C. 431] it was held that the true test in such cases is whether the foreign corporation is conducting its own business at some fixed place within the jurisdiction that being the only way in which a corporation can reside in this country. It can only so reside through its agent not being a concrete entity itself, but if it so resides by its agent it must be considered for this purpose as itself residing within the jurisdiction. In several of the cases decided on this subject the difficulty has been to determine whether the business was the business for the purposes of their business to an independent business of his own at some place in this country and therefore we are not called on in this case to consider the question whether a foreign corporation making use for their purpose of a person carrying on a business of his own can under the circumstances be regarded as themselves carrying on their own business within the jurisdiction. A difficult question of that kind arose in the case of La Bourgogne [supra]. There a foreign company employed as their agent in this country a person who also acted as agent for two other companies and transacted their business on the same premises and we held that the defendants were through him carrying on business in such a way as to be resident within the jurisdiction. No such difficulty arises here as arose in that case. Here the defendants hired premises for their own exclusive use and did not resort for the purposes to some person who was carrying on an independent business but employed their own servant to conduct the business. A company which carries on business here through an agent but has no office does not establish a place of business here. Princess Clementine (1899) p 18. Lord Advocate v. Huron and Eric Loan Co (1911) 10 O 612.

64 Every insurer having his principal place of business or domicile outside British India shall keep at his principal office in British India such books of account, registers and documents as will enable the accounts, statements and abstracts which he is required under this Act to furnish to the Superintendent of Insurance in respect of the insurance business transacted by him in India to be compiled and, if necessary, checked by the Superintendent of Insurance

PROVIDENT SOCIETIES

65 In this Part "provident society" means a person who, or a body of persons whether corporate or incorporated which, receives premiums or contributions for securing annuities on human life or receives premiums or contributions for insuring money to be paid on the happening of any of the following contingencies, namely—

- (a) the birth, marriage, death of any person or the survival by a person of a stated age or contingency,
- (b) failure of issue,
- (c) the occurrence of a social, religious or other ceremonial occasion,
- (d) loss of or retirement from employment,
- (e) disablement in consequence of sickness or accident,
- (f) the necessity of providing for the education of a dependant, and (g) any other contingency which may be prescribed or which may be authorised by the Provincial Government with the approval of the Central Government

Notes—this section is based on paragraph 333 of Mr. J. C. S. Report

66 Nothing in this Part shall apply to a provident society which pays or undertakes to pay on any policy of insurance an annuity exceeding fifty rupees or a gross sum exceeding five hundred rupees exclusive of any profit or bonus

Provided that for the purposes of this section contracts entered into before the commencement of this Act shall not be taken into consideration and provided further that "policy" includes a series of policies covering one or more of the contingencies specified in section 65

Notes—I vide paragraphs 319 to 331 of Mr Sen's Report

67. No provident society established after the commencement of this Act shall adopt as its name, and no Name provident society established before the commencement of this Act shall continue after the expiry of six months from the commencement thereof to use as its name, any combination of words which fails to include the word "provident" or which includes the word 'life'

Notes—This section is based on paragraph 366 of Mr Sen's Report which runs as follows—

Re. Insurance— It has been suggested from various quarters that in order to properly distinguish Provident Insurance Societies from the insurance companies the societies must not only be prevented from using the words Life Insurance and Life Assurance but they must have the word 'Provident' associated with the names and I recommend that the statute should make provisions on these lines. In my opinion this is necessary to make it clear to the public that the concern is really a Provident Insurance Society and not a Life Insurance Company. Existing companies should be given six months time within which to effect the necessary changes in the name. A Provident or Life Insurance Company may be restrained from using the same or similar name of another Provident or Life Insurance Company.

Notes—This section is based on paragraphs 831-842 of Mr. Sen's Report which runs as follows—

831 In this connection I propose next to deal with what is known as Dividing

Provident Insurance Society

835 Dividing Society Business is defined as Provident Insurance Business under which the amount payable on the policy money becoming due is not fixed but depends either partly or wholly on the results of the division of any portion of the premium income or funds amongst the policies which have become due for payment in proportion to the premium received in each class in any specified period. In other words, roughly speaking the scheme generally is this viz., the society distributes the yearly collection realised from its members excepting a small account which is kept for expenses amongst members whose policies mature during the year.

836 To my mind (and I am fortified in this view by the expressions of opinion from the Government Actuary himself) it is a misnomer and a mistake to include this class of business in the category of insurance business.

838 The worst feature of these societies is that there is no scientific basis for the payments. There is no age limit for persons who desire to be enrolled on the list of members of these societies and there is no medical examination. There is one uniform rate of subscription and young and old are both eligible for the memberships. The amount of payment naturally varies with number of people who are on the list of members as also the number of deaths occurring in a particular year. There is no nor there can be any guaranteed minimum but some of these companies in order to attract members fraudulently announce a fixed minimum sum as being payable on death. Based as they are on no scientific principles these institutions are bound to go from bad to worse and must ultimately end in liquidation.

839 This form of insurance has been attracting the attention of the local Governments in Bengal and in Bombay from a considerable time past and from time to time representations have been made by these two Governments to the Government of India to provide some means for putting a stop to this class of business which by reason of the patent unsoundness of their schemes are bound to fail. Government Actuaries have condemned it times without number and the opinion of the present Government Actuary in his report for the year 1933 runs as follows—

Some Indian Companies transact life assurance business on the dividing plan under which the sum assured is not fixed but depends on the division of a portion of each year's premium income amongst the claims arising in that year. The main defect of dividing insurance business is that policy holder in each class are charged the same rate of premium or subscription from 18 to 60 years to the practice of company. It has the Act of 1912 w insurance business and most of them come to grief. Of such companies which were in existence at the time of the passing of the Act the majority have disappeared and some have stopped issuing policies on the dividing plan. A few new companies have taken up this dividing insurance business and it will not be long before they realize their mistake.

312 As regards the provisions to be made for preventing the formation of such societies in the future the best course obviously is to prohibit in the statute carrying on of business on dividing insurance basis.

There are however societies which have successfully carried on business of this class for many years in spite of the actuarial unsoundness of the principle. We think that

(c) if the society, having failed to comply with any requirement of this Act has continued such failure for a period of one month after notice of such failure has been conveyed to the society by the Superintendent of Insurance

Notes.—Mr Sen in paragraph 324 of his report says The making of a provision for the deposit of the sum of Rs 5 000 with the controller is not by itself however sufficient to prevent the formation and continuance of mushroom societies It is in my opinion also necessary that before any such society is allowed to commence work there should be a sufficient sum available for working capital This is necessary in order to provide against the

(2) The provisions of sub sections (8), (9) and (10) of section 7 and of sub-section (1) of section 8 shall apply to the deposits made under this section as they apply to deposits made by an insurer

Notes—Mr Sen in paras 315 to 323 of his report says —

315 At the present time there is no provision for any deposit in the case of provident insurance societies. The reason why no deposit for this class of societies was provided for was the fact that in the opinion of the Legislature the limited scope of activities of the companies did not then call for any deposit. This assumption on the part of the Legislature as appears from the actual facts was not justified. The absence of such a provision has enabled an inordinately large number of mushroom concerns to be brought into existence in this country. Most unbusiness like attractive schemes have been put forward by these exploiters to capture business. The premiums received are misused and the result is as I have stated that after a short time many of these newly formed societies have come to grief

(g) the circumstances in which a bonus may be paid to a policy-holder,

(h) the nature of the evidence required for the proof of the happening of any contingency on which money is to be paid,

(i) the circumstances in which policies may be forfeited or renewed or the whole or a part of the premiums paid on a policy may be returned, or a surrender value of a policy may be granted,

(j) the penalties for delay in paying or failure to pay premiums or contributions,

(p) such other matters as may be prescribed

(2) Where the rules of any provident society registered under the Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912† fail to comply with the provisions of this section the society shall, before the expiry of twelve months from the commencement of this Act, amend the rules so as to comply with these provisions

Notes —This section expands section 5 of Act V of 1912 as recommended in paragraph 827 of Mr Sen's report. In paragraphs 825 and 826 of his report Mr. Sen says —

' 825 In the next place I would suggest that the provision in the Act regarding the filing of rules of business be altered and it should be made obligatory on all companies to file rules which will have a certain number of items as common items. Under the existing provisions of the Act it is incumbent on the societies to file with the registrar at the time of the application for registration a copy of the rules. All that the concerns have to see is that the rules must comply with the Act. He has to give notice with the Act. He has to give notice objects to and the companies have 60 days. On such amended rule being put in an uniformity in the matter of these rules

' 826 In my opinion it is desirable to have an uniformity in the matter of rules, if possible, and what I would therefore suggest is that section 5 should indicate such matters as all societies without any exception must provide by their rules and leave the Local Governments to superimpose such special matters as local conditions may justify.

Sub-section (2) provides for bringing existing societies on same lines—vide Notes on Clauses

75. (1) No amendment of any rule of a provident society shall be valid until it has been sent to the Superintendent of Insurance and has been registered by him.

(2) The Superintendent of Insurance on being satisfied that the proposed amendment is not contrary to the provisions of this Act shall unless he is of opinion that the amendment unfairly affects the rights of existing members or policy-holders of the society, issue to the society an acknowledgment of the registration of the amended rule.

Notes—This section is based on paragraphs 328 and 329 of Mr. Sen's report which are as follows:—

328. In order to prevent unscrupulous persons from changing rules for avoiding liabilities undertaken by them I would also suggest some changes in the provisions in the Act relating to amendment of rules as contained in section 11. The present provisions do not make any provision for the preservation of the rights of the existing policy holders. It is quite conceivable that amendments may sometimes be made which though they are not repugnant to the Act are such that they are likely to affect the rights of the existing policy holders. Some cases where this has been actually done have been brought to the notice of the Government as will be powerless. In order to be amended so as to make it society which is likely to the policy holders then in existence reject or sanction the amendment and to impose proper. In my opinion these provisions if proper prevent the formation of mushroom societies.—Report of Mr. Sen on the Insurance Laws

(a) a statement showing separately for each class of contingency separately specified in section 65—

(ii) the total amount of claims made and the total amount paid in satisfaction thereof,

(b) a statement showing details of every insurance effected on a life other than the life of the person insuring and

(c) a statement showing the total amount paid as allowances to agents and canvassers

(3) Until the expiry of two years from the commencement of this Act this section shall apply to provident societies registered before the commencement of this Act under the Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912,* as if the reference to the calendar year were a reference to either the financial year or the calendar year

Notes —“Sub section (1) expands section 13 of Act V of 1912 on the lines proposed in paragraph 351 of Mr Sen's report. As the year of account is changed to the calendar year, sub-section (3) is designed to give the societies time to change from one system to the other. In sub-section (2) clause (b) reproduces the substance of section 15 of Act V of 1912. This is necessary to enable section 68 to be enforced. —Notes on Clauses

81. (1) Every provident society shall once in every five years or at such shorter intervals as may be laid down by the rules of the society cause an investigation to be made into its financial condition including the valuation of its liabilities and assets by an actuary

(2) The report of the actuary shall contain an abstract in which shall be stated—

(a) the general principles adopted in the valuation, including the method by which the valuation age of lives was ascertained,

(b) the rate at each age of the mortality and any other factor assumed and the annuity values used in valuation,

(c) the reserve values held against policies effected,

(d) the rate of interest assumed, and

(e) the provision made for expenses, and shall have appended to it a certificate signed by a principal officer of the society that all material necessary for proper valuation has been placed at the disposal of the actuary and that full and accurate particulars of every policy under which there is a liability either actual or contingent have been furnished to the actuary for the purpose of the investigation

(3) If the actuary finds that the financial condition of the society is such that no surplus exists for distribution as bonus to the policyholders or as dividend to the shareholders, he shall state in his report whether in his opinion the society is insolvent and, if so, whether it should be wound up or not and the extent to which in his opinion existing contracts should be modified or existing rates of premium should be adjusted to make good the deficiency in the assets

Notes —This section is based on paragraph 357 of Mr Sen's report. In my opinion it is essentially necessary for every society to have an actuarial valuation of its assets and report thereon and the report on the general state of the society's affairs referred to in sub section (1) of section 80 and the statements referred to in sub section (2) of section 80 shall be furnished as returns to the Superintendent of Insurance within three months from the end of the period to which they relate and copies of the

(2) All the material necessary for the proper valuation of the liabilities of the society under the provision of section 81 shall be placed at the disposal of the actuary within three months from the end of the period to which such material relates, and the report and abstract referred to in section 81 shall be furnished as a return to the Superintendent of Insurance within a further period of three months

(3) The provisions of section 17 shall apply to the accounts and balance sheet of a provident society being a company incorporated under the Indian Companies Act, 1913,* as they apply to the accounts and balance sheet of an insurer

Notes —This section provides for the supply to the Superintendent of Insurance of the necessary returns and for the supply of copies thereof to the members or policy holders —Notes on Clauses

83 (1) Every provident society established after the commencement of this Act shall cause every scheme of insurance which it proposes to put into operation and every provident society registered before the commencement of this Act under the provisions of the Provident Insurance Societies Act 1912,† shall cause any new scheme which it proposes to put into operation after such commencement to be examined by an actuary, and shall not receive any premium or contribution in connection with the scheme until the actuary has certified that the scheme is sound and such certificate has been forwarded to the Superintendent of Insurance

(2) The provisions of sub section (1) shall apply to any alteration of a scheme already in operation but the Superintendent of Insurance may if he is of opinion that the alteration unfairly affects the interest of existing policy-holders prohibit the alteration and if he does so the society shall not put the altered scheme into operation unless it first discharges to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Insurance all its liabilities to those of the existing policy-holders who dissent from the alteration

(3) Every provident society registered before the commencement of this Act under the provisions of Provident Insurance Societies Act 1912,† shall as soon as may be and in any event before the expiry of six months from the commencement of this Act, submit all schemes of insurance which the society has in operation at the commencement of this Act to examination by an actuary and shall send the report of the actuary thereon to the Superintendent of Insurance

(4) The report of the actuary shall state in respect of each scheme whether it is actuarially sound and where no actuarial report such as is referred to in section 81 has been made within the two years preceding the examination the report shall also state whether the assets of the society are sufficient to meet its liabilities under the existing schemes, and, if not, how in the opinion of the actuary the existing contracts should be modified

(5) If any scheme is reported by the actuary to be actuarially unsound, the Superintendent of Insurance shall give notice to the society prohibiting the operation of the scheme, and the society shall not receive any premium or contribution or effect any policy in connection with the scheme after the expiry of one month from the receipt of such notice

(6) Where a scheme is discontinued under the provisions of sub-section (5) the society shall, where its assets are sufficient to meet all existing liabilities, set apart out of its assets the sum sufficient in the opinion of the actuary to meet the liabilities incurred under the scheme so discontinued and, where its assets are not so sufficient, within three months from the date of the discontinuance apply to the Court for a modification of its existing contracts or failing such modification for the winding up of the society

84 Where a provident society effects policies of insurance in Separation of accounts and connection with more than one of the funds classes of contingency separately specified in section 65, the receipts and payments in respect of each such class shall be recorded in a separate account in the cash book kept in accordance with section 79

85 (1) Every provident society shall, unless it already holds Investment of funds invested in Government securities or securities mentioned or referred to in clauses (c) and (d) of section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act 1882 * not less than fifty per cent of the total assets of the society invest all surplus assets in such securities until the total amount so invested amounts to not less than fifty per cent of the total assets of the society, and shall thereafter keep invested in such securities not less than fifty per cent of the total assets of the society

(2) No funds or investment of a provident society except a deposit made under section 73 shall be kept otherwise than in the name of the society

(3) No loan shall be made out of the assets of a provident society to any director or officer of the society except on the security of a policy of insurance held in the society and within its surrender value and no such loan shall be made to any concern of which a director or officer of the society is a director or partner

'The scheme in England under the Friendly Societies Act of 1896 is to create a statutory body of trustees in whom the funds of a Friendly Society are vested and under section 44 of the Act the trustees may with the consent of a majority of the members present invest the funds of a society either—

- (a) in Post Office Savings Bank or in any other Savings Bank certified under the Trustee Savings Bank Act or
- (b) in the public funds or
- (c) with the Natural Debt Commissioners
- (d) in the purchase of land or in the erection of buildings thereon or
- (e) upon such other security not being personal security in which under the rules of the society the moneys can be invested

I am convinced that in the interest of the numerous policy holders it is essentially necessary that a substantial portion of the funds of the Provident Insurance Societies in India should be kept in Government and Trustee Securities

86 The books of every provident society shall at all reasonable times be open to inspection by the Superintendent of Insurance or any person appointed by him in this behalf or by any member or policy-holder of the society who has made an application in this behalf to the Superintendent of Insurance

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

Notes—"The six Schedules reproduce Schedules II to VII of the Clouston Bill with modifications.

Part I

Part II.—Form A. There are only three columns on each side of the balance sheet instead of five, as there is only one separate fund. Under the Liability side the sub-headings under 'Balances of funds and accounts' have been altered to correspond with the four classes of insurance adapted in the Bill. On the Assets side the sub-heads under 'Investments' have been modified on the lines of the balance sheet contained in the Third Schedule of Act VI of 1912.

Note (b) of Clouston is omitted and note (g), now (f) has been modified.

Schedule II, Clouston Schedule III.

Part I—Regulation 3 has been modified as there is only one class of insurance in respect of which a separate fund is kept.

Part II—Forms B and C have not been altered.

Schedule III, Clouston Schedule IV.

Part I—Regulations 1 and 2 have been altered to meet the proposals of the Bill that while only in the case of life insurance including annuity business is there to be a separation of assets, in the case of four classes of business into which insurance is to be divided there are to be separate accounts.

Regulation 6 omits references to 'continuous disability business', 'capital redemption business', and 'industrial assurance business'.

Regulations 7, 8 and 9 are modified in view of the fact that there is only one separate fund, namely, that for life insurance.

Among the Forms, Form E of Clouston has been omitted.

Schedule IV, Clouston Schedule V.

Parts IIB, IIC, IIC and IV have been omitted, and in consequence in Part I regulation 1 has been simplified.

Regulations 2, 3, 4 and 9 and 10 of Part I has been omitted.

Regulations 5 to 8 of Clouston, now numbered 2 to 5 have been consequently simplified.

In regulation 11 (now 7) the definition of 'standard basis' necessary for interpretation of Part IV of the Clouston Schedule has been omitted. In view of the small volume of workmen in compensation business in British India, the complicated requirements of Part IV are not necessary.

Schedule V Clouston Schedule VI.

Parts III and IV have been omitted altogether. The only statement required by clause 11 (4) of the Bill is the statement of life insurance business in force. Hence in Part I regulations 3 and 4 have been omitted and in Part II the reference to 'industrial assurance' in the heading and in the proviso to paragraph, has been omitted. In paragraph 6 of Part II the reference to 'statements prepared under the enactments repealed by this Act' has been omitted, since no such statement was required under Act VI of 1912.

Schedule VI, Clouston Schedule VII.

Only the first paragraph of Part I has been retained. Paragraph 2 of Part I appears unnecessary. The rule contained in Part II appears in the body of the Bill.—Notes on Clauses.

(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the total income of any previous year of any person includes all income, profits and gains from whatever source derived which—

Notes — The first proviso newly inserted in cl (c) of proposed sub section (1) of s 4 of the Act is aimed at removing the possibility now that in the case of residents the remittance basis of taxation is abandoned for the accrual basis of both foreign profits which accrued in the previous year and foreign profits which were remitted in the previous year being assessed in the first year after the change. — Report of the Select Committee

Provided further that, in the case of a person not ordinarily resident in British India, income, profits and gains which accrue or arise to him without British India shall not be so included unless they are derived from a business controlled in or a profession or vocation set up in India or unless they are brought into or received in British India.

British India in that year, there shall not be included in the assessment of the income of that year so much of such excess as does not exceed four thousand five hundred rupees

Explanation 1—Income, profits and gains accruing or arising without British India shall not be deemed to be received in or brought into British India within the meaning of this sub section by reason only of the fact that they are taken into account in a balance-sheet prepared in British India

Explanation 2—Income which would be chargeable under the head 'Salaries' if payable in British India and not being pension payable without India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in British India wherever paid if it is earned in British India

Notes — The Privy Council (in Shaw Wallace case—G I T C. 178) has ruled that capital sums received in commutation of pension or as consolidated compensation for death or injuries or in payment of an insurance policy or as the accumulated balance from a Government Provident Fund could not in any scheme of taxation be regarded as income. Specific exemption therefore is superfluous and the provision is deleted. — Notes on Clauses

Explanation 3—A dividend paid without British India shall be deemed to be income accruing and arising in British India to the extent to which it has been paid out of profits subjected to income-tax in British India

We have received an assurance that administrative arrangements can and will be made to obviate any hardship that might be imposed in consequence of the change to the accrual basis of taxation on persons prevented by laws in force in the country where their money may be lying from remitting money to British India as and when they wish. — Report of the Select Committee

(2) For the purposes of sub section (1) where a husband is not resident in British India, remittances received by his wife resident in British India out of any part of his income which is not included in his total income shall be deemed to be income accruing in British India to the wife.

Notes — At present under the provisions of s 4 the Act applies to income which previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner an order in writing that the undistributed portion of the assessable income of the company of that previous year as computed for income-tax purposes shall be deemed to have been distributed as dividends amongst the shareholders as at the date of the general meeting aforesaid and thereupon the proportionate share thereof of each shareholder shall be included in the total income of such shareholder for the purpose of assessing his total income

Provided that when the reserves representing accumulations of past profits which have not been the subject of an order under this sub section exceed the paid up capital of the company, together with any loan capital which is the property of the shareholders or the actual cost of the fixed assets of the company whichever of these is greater, this section shall apply as if instead of the words 'sixty per cent. of the assessable income' the words 'one hundred per cent of the assessable income' were substituted

Provided further that no order under this sub section shall be made where the company has distributed not less than fifty five per cent of the assessable income of the company, unless the company on receipt of a notice from the Income tax Officer that he proposes to make such an order, fails to make within three months of the receipt of such notice a further distribution of its profits and gains so that the total distribution made is not less than sixty per cent of the assessable income of the company of the previous year concerned

Notes — We have added an additional proviso in order to make allowance for possible cases of error in which though the full sixty per cent of the assessable income of the company has not been actually distributed an amount exceeding fifty five per cent has been distributed. In such cases we consider that the company should be given a reasonable opportunity of escaping the operation of the section by raising the distribution within three months. — Report of the Select Committee

Notes — "Section 28A of the Income tax Act, 1922, has proved practically a dead letter, mainly because it imposes upon the Income tax Officer the duty of determining whether the profits of a company are to be accumulated beyond its reasonable requirements for the maintenance and development of the company. The only criterion for the determination of the circumstances of a company in any case is the procedure under the section. Instead of being payable as income tax by the company, the profits are accumulated and the proportionate share of each member in the profits and gains of the company shall be included in his total income, the Income tax officer has under the present clause merely to deem the profits of the company to have been distributed as dividends on a given date."—Notes on Clauses

Notes — Sub section (2) allows losses in a business, profession or vocation to be carried forward and set off against the profits of the same business, profession or vocation. The period of carrying forward is to be six years but to mitigate the effect on the revenue of this concession losses of the first 'previous years' after the commencement of the Amending Act are to be carried forward for one year, losses of the first year for two years, and so on until the full period of six years is reached.
